Protect yourself against annoyance and loss—give your customers perfect matches in perfect condition.

Tell your wholesaler you want EDDY'S—The best and safest matches which are shipped in the best and safest way.

How He Got His Man

A merchant in Montreal wanted a man to manage his store. He advertised in the daily papers and secured many replies. He also used an announcement in the Want Ad. page of CANADIAN GROCER and several replies were received. He chose his man from the latter. In fact, the only men who at all suited his purpose, were those who applied through this paper.

CANADIAN GROCER reaches business men in the trade. There are good men scattered all over Canada who read the CANADIAN GROCER and who are interested in such a proposition.

To get the man you want; to secure a position; a partner, to sell some used equipment; to buy second-hand equipment, use the Want Ad page of CANADIAN GROCER. It gets results.

"Shooting" the Man from Glengarry

THE Ottawa Valley has witnessed scenes during the past few weeks which have never before greeted the eyes of the dwellers within its limits. Realism—the sinewy log drivers, cleverly and daringly facing the camera; beautiful women rescued from the river's icy waters—terrific raft fights—log jams, where lean river men stepped from the playing of a part into real life—lumbermen armed with peevies and pike-poles, striving to break the menace of locked logs—all these are features of the most stupendous Canadian story yet filmed within the borders of this Dominion.

Ernest W. Shipman has been producing "The Man From Glengarry," Ralph Connor's masterpiece—and filming it with all the fidelity and accuracy which modern ingenuity can command. Those who have been privileged to witness these scenes have watched in action pretty, vivacious Mayme St. Clair, Bully Lenoir and Big MacDonald, reproducing the action contained between the covers of Ralph Connor's dramatic work.

Archie McKishnie has recently spent several days with Mr. Shipman's company and has told the story, in

Increasing Sales in the Summer Months

Merchants Who Are Maintaining Business at Satisfactory Levels During the Hot Weather are Getting Behind Lines That Have a Ready Appeal at This Time—What Some Grocers are Doing With Summer Goods

"MANY grocers maintain that winter business is the best, and look to the summer months as the time, when trade slackens, and there is more or less falling off in turnover," remarked a retailer the other day. The fallacy or truth of such a statement in this man's opinion is largely up to the merchant himself. According to a number of merchants interviewed by a representative of Canadian Grocer recently, it was found that summer trade is to be had, but it requires at times a little going after. It does not come easily is the way one grocer put it, but sale can be maintained and even increased, he asserts, by directing selling efforts to lines that have an instant appeal in the hot weather. True it is, there are a large number of people moving away to summer places, and their trade is sometimes lost in the vacation period, but on the other hand, other people who are in your district are entertaining guests and buying more groceries than ordinarily.

There are any number of lines that the grocer should be getting behind in the hot months, and which are not good sellers at any other time. Taking these goods, and selling them, increasing the turnover of the same and thus counteracting any dull period that might result, for the reason that people are away, is what many are doing these days. Ice cream, soft drinks, fresh fruits, picnic supplies, the latter including canned goods, salad oils and such like are foodstuffs that sell well.

Eight Cases of Lime Juice

R. J. Reynolds, manager of Reynolds & Co., 1410 Queen Street, West, sells big supplies of summer lines, and is doing so these days. "We have sold eight cases of lime juice," Canadian Grocer was informed on the occasion of a visit to this store the other day. "We have averaged five cases of ginger ale each week in the last couple of months, and of course the weather has not been particularly hot. In the very warm season we anticipate even larger sales. Our sales are by the bottle or by the case with the regular orders. We get behind all summer drinks here, and keep them well before the people, both in the way of display in the store, and when taking orders on the telephone. A large portion of our business is done on the 'phone, and we have to suggest these lines in order to get trade."

Fresh fruits and vegetables come in for a lot of attention by Mr. Reynolds and his staff, and during the summer, sales of these lines represent a big turnover. On the day the representative of Canadian Grocer was in the store, just a few hours previous, he had received a special shipment of new celery, and his staff were selling it fast. Every customer who called on the phone to give an order was told about the celery, and almost without exception a sale was made. The result was that the celery was soon disposed of.

Suggestions to Picnics

Special attention is directed towards the sale of foodstuffs suitable for picnics. "That salad dressing is one of the biggest sellers we have in the summer months," one of the clerks remarked, pointing to a certain prepared salad dressing on the shelf. "Potted meats and potted chicken also have a brisk inquiry in our store, and we 'push' the same in the warm weather.

"On the whole we are finding business good at the present time, comparing very favorable with the better months of the year, and it is largely because we are selling the lines that make a ready appeal at this season."

J. Anderson, Queen street, W., Toronto, says there are not the parties to sell high-class specialities for in the summer months, but there are picnics and he goes after this trade. "There are a number of lines that we are constantly suggesting for picnics," Mr. Anderson added, "and we find that suggestions of this kind not only mean increased sales, but they are appreciated by customers, who are a loss to know just what is best to buy."

O. Thompson, 1980 Queen Street, W., Toronto, sells from 20 to 25 bricks of ice cream a day in the hot weather, while the turnover of bulk ice cream amounts to about ten gallons daily. "We have been handling ice cream now for several summers," Mr Thompson told Canadian Grocer, "and it is a big line with us. We are selling it in cones, and the fact that we have the children coming into the store for a cone very frequently means the sale of other things. Mothers come here because their children want a cone, and the kiddies sent to buy groceries come here because we have the cones, and they have been given the money for one. Ice cream is certainly a profitable line, and stimulates the turnover of other foodstuffs."

T. White, Parliament St., Toronto, is finding ice cream a ready seller during the summer months and an article which greatly helps business which otherwise is inclined to be quiet during the hot days. Mr. White has been handling ice cream for several years. He sells in bricks, in bulk and also in cones. Another line upon which sales have been greatly increased in the White store is confectionery. One window is devoted almost entirely to the display of cakes, buns and rolls, and considerable attention is paid to this department.

Cigarettes a Good Side Line

Cigarettes, cigars and tobaccos are also featured. This store is located on a corner and in order to get the attention of people on both streets, Mr. White sets aside the corner window for displaying tobacco.

"Cigarettes are about the best side line we carry. There is no waste. If we buy a thousand we know that we will sell a thousand and get the same price for the last as we did for the first of them," said Mr. White. "Another thing, there is no trouble in selling them. We do not have to wrap them, just pass them out, take the money and the transaction is closed. It is the same with tobacco and cigars." Speaking of window displays, Mr. White is a firm believer in them and said that it would be difficult to build a business on cigarettes and cigars without using them, if only at periodical intervals. He maintains, however, to get the best results, cigarettes should be shown continuously. "If people did not see them in the window, they would not know we sold them and consequently that sale would be lost."

"Say It with a Brick of Ice Cream"

"Say it with a brick of ice cream" is a sign which greets customers as they enter the store of John Gilbert, Kingston, Ont., "Ice cream is a good line to handle, especially in the summer months." said Mr. Gilbert, "It helps to keep up the volume of sales, during the months when sales are inclined to be slow."

E. H. Crimp, Saskatoon, Sask., has been handling ice cream since 1920 and has found it a profitable line to handle. The store handles ice cream for home consumption, selling in bulk in quantities of pints and quarts.

This is Oil Time

This is naturally oil time for the grocers. With the coming of the fresh green vegetables it is salad-time and for salads there is a good demand for oils of various kinds and a window dressed to feature this line brings trade not only in the oil but in fresh vegetables.

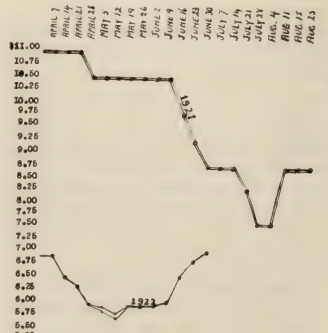
There are many ways of dressing a window for this purpose but the Paquet Co. departmental store in Quebec city had recently for their grocery department a striking window display which illustrated the many uses for making salads for cooking. The window was arranged to represent a corner of a kitchen with cooking utensils in readiness on a kitchen cabinet. Various kinds and brands of oils were arranged about the window with ribbons running from each container to some article of food on the cabinet in which that oil was used. There were a number of salads, cream puffs, doughnuts and biscuits.

Increased Sales

The manager of this department of the store told a Canadian Grocer representative that the display had brought a marked increase in sales for oils and besides, a general increase in the sales of the grocery department. All grocers cannot, on account of space and equipment, dress such a window but there are no less effective ways of dressing a window on the same plan. A blue crepe paper layout in the window with white paper doilies on which plates of salads and various confections are placed make an attractive display and the selling force is aided by placing alongside each dish the can or bottle containing the oil used in that particular item. Little showcards with a few remarks about the oil, also add to the selling force. Such a timely display cannot help but get extra business during the summer months.

Refined Sugar Situation Remains Steady But Raw Sugar Market Gains Strength

One Canadian Refiner Withdraws From the Market and is Not Quoting Any Price in the Meantime—Back Orders and Export Demand the Reason—Retailers Buy Heavily



MONTREAL — (Special).— The refined sugar situation offers a particularly interesting aspect just now. The market is gaining strength after the recent advances and according to local wholesalers, another advance would not be surprising. Indeed increased buying, noted locally, is proof of the general view of conditions taken by the grocery trade.

Raw Sugar Advances

Late last week the raw sugar market gained a few more points and Cubas c. t. f. New York went up to 3¼. Recent advances in the raw market have come rapidly and Canadian refiners claim that they are pressed to fill back orders. The market gave fair warning before it started on its way upward from $5.80 a hundred for refined and many wholesalers and retailers took advantage of the warning and bought heavily.

One Refinery Withdraws

The Atlantic Sugar Refineries state that they have withdrawn from the market and are not quoting any price in the meantime, until such a time as they are able to catch up on their back orders. There appears to be also considerable export of refined sugar which very likely plays a big part in putting some of the refineries behind in their deliveries. All the refineries report that they are working full time at full capacity. In view of the advance in the price of refined sugar it is rather peculiar that one of the sugar companies should withdraw from the market. The officials of the Atlantic Sugar Refineries decline to make any statement with regard to their position. Their last list price was $5.80 a hundred.

Big Demand for Sugar

There is no disputing the fact that there is a heavy consumer demand for sugar. Many retail grocers bought heavily early last month, anticipating an advance and have not been mistaken. Some are still buying beyond their immediate requirements, confident that the peak has not been reached. The preserving season has only begun and promises to be a heavy one. The prospect of low prices on fruit this year has stimulated this demand.

One retail grocer in telling Canadian Grocer representative his views of the market said, "I bought all the sugar I could take care of when the price was at its lowest point. I am now buying for immediate requirements and a little over, saving what I have in stock for August and September when, I am confident, there will be a higher price on refined sugar."

What the Chart Tells

The accompanying chart shows a comparison of prices of 1921 and this year for the five months beginning April 1st. Prices last year were much higher than they now are but it will be noticed that although the raw market was fairly steady refined sugar reached its lowest point towards the end of July and steadily advanced through August, holding strong in September. Last year there was comparatively little home canning or preserving. Yet the commercial demand was felt and forced the market up.

This year there is promise of much home preserving as well as the commercial demand. Added to this there is a heavy export demand caused by the low point which came in May. With the demand increased in August and September, and in view of the conditions in the raw market there is little likelihood of a break.

THIS FISH WILL BRING 90 CENTS PER POUND

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., July 4.— A monster sturgeon, weighing 310 pounds, eight feet in length, and a hundred years of age, as near as can be determined by experienced fishermen, was caught at Batchewana Bay on June 29 in the net of Frank Lapointe, a local fisherman. The fish has been cut into two pieces and shipped in ice to New York, where its owner has secured a market for it at a handsome figure. Lapointe figured that the fish should bring him on the average of 90 cents a pound, making a total of $279. With the shipment of the fish to New York without any provision being made for the return of the hide to the Sault for mounting and exhibition, a record of one of the largest catches ever made in Lake Superior is lost to the local municipality.

A New Way To Meet Competition

(Sixth of Series of Articles on Chain Stores)

MONTREAL. — There are other ways of defeating price cutting besides trying to race with it. Joseph Morrissette believes he has found a way to eliminate this competition by dodging it. He has a grocery store at 211 Sherbrooke St. W., that specializes in fancy grocery lines of quality. He told a Canadian Grocer representative that it was absolute foolishness for a grocer to expect that single handed he could meet present day price competition and therefore trade should be sought in another way. Knowing that there has always, and always will be a demand for quality, he has opened a store that features both variety and quality.

An Experienced Grocer

Mr. Morrissette has had fifteen years' experience in the grocery business which he got with his father who for a number of years owned a grocery business on St. Hubert St. in Montreal.

Avoiding Cut Prices

"There is no price cutting on certain lines and the grocer is free to concentrate on such lines which are noted for quality and where price is not a feature. In establishing such a class of trade it is essential that the store itself, the fixtures and the displays be in keeping with the class of goods offered. The highest grade of specialty lines will look cheap in a dark, ill-kept and untidy store. There must be an air of distinction about the store, and this will lend value to the goods displayed. Such a store can well ignore price cutting. In this belief, I have designed and arranged my store and have found my reasoning well grounded," said Mr. Morrissette.

Equipment Helps

In arranging this store Mr. Morissette has laid stress on his fixtures. In the front of the store is a glass front refrigerator counter in which cooked meats, potted meats, cheese, butter and eggs are displayed. This is an innovation in the display of dairy produce for in most stores such a counter finds a place in the rear of the store. In this case however, package goods, cereals and bulk goods take the place at the back of the store.

Neatly Arranged Shelves

The goods displayed on the shelves are all neatly and carefully placed, giving specialty lines prominence. As Mr. Morrissette said "the staple lines will sell themselves. The grocer wastes his space by giving them the preferred place. The goods which have to be 'sold' by the grocer and on which there is for that very reason a better margin of profit, should have the place of prominence. It is to the grocer's own advantage to study the lines he sells and the value of display space in his store and so arrange his goods so as to get the most from what he has to offer in the way of advertising and salesmanship."

Showing the interior of the store of Jos. E. Morrissette in Montreal, where good equipment stimulates sales.

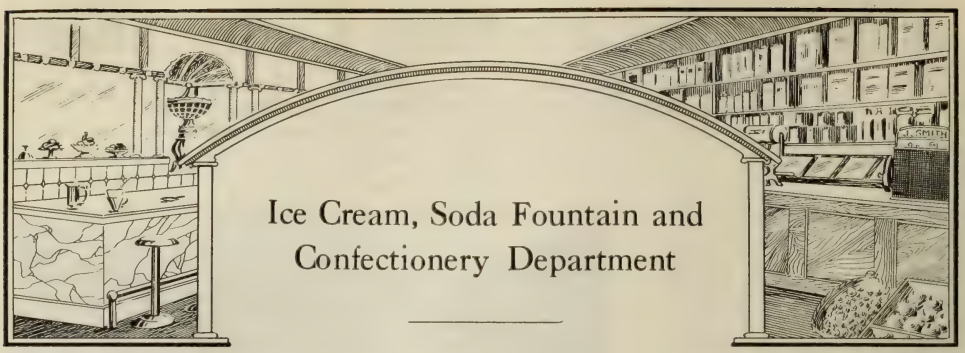
A Good Window

The exterior of the store also speaks of the unusual. The white enamelled lattice work which encases the window lends it and the goods displayed an air of distinction. Narrow shelves attached to the lattice work along the sides and across the back of the window add to the available space and so without the least crowding, more goods can be displayed in this window than in the average window. The white enamel sets off the goods in sharp contrast.

A Good Example

Mr. Morrissette's store stands as a good example of what many hope will be the result of the keen competition in the grocery business. It would seem that the featuring of reduced prices has gone the limit and that a new form of competiion must arise, which will bring a better class of grocery store into the majority with emphasis put on service, efficiency and attractiveness of the store.

Mushrooms and Peas Promise A Light Crop In France



Montreal—(Special).— Henri Jonas returned recently from France and reports that crop conditions in that country are not good. The weather has been against the crops in that early in the season the weather was warm and then heavy rains followed and more heat with the result that the soil became baked.

Since his return he has received letters from firms, these stating that the pack of French peas this year will be late and will be only about one-half that of last year. The price also shows an increase of about 50 per cent. This may go still higher. The same condition exists in the pack of mushrooms, according to the French growers. The weather conditions have been entirely against a good crop and what growth there is, is slow, so that this product will be late in reaching the market.

(From a country weekly.)—Some time Tuesday night George Reynolds, the groceryman, had his chicken coop robbed of ten fine fowls he had for his trade.

(From same paper.)—Wednesday noon the ladies of the Methodist Church gave a delightful chicken dinner.

Of course we don't insinuate anything we just happened to notice it, that's all.

Ice Cream, Soda Fountain and Confectionery Department

Sells Ice Cream By The Pound and Says He Eliminates Loss By Shrinkage

Grocers and Other Dealers Carrying Ice Cream Will Be Interested in the Solution of the Problem of Loss, As Worked Out By This Merchant

GROCERS and other retailers of ice cream who are troubled by the loss which occurs when they dig their scops into the cans and the consequent shrinkage, which eats a considerable proportion of their profit, will be interested in the plan which is proving so successful in a store in the west.

The solution of the problem is simplicity itself, according to Lee M. Pedigo, who operates the store in question. Pedigo sells the cream by weight instead of by the quart or pint and it therefore doesn't matter whether it's tightly packed or loosely wadded. The customer gets full value and the merchant receives the full market price.

"I weighed a large number of cans of ice cream," says Pedigo, "and found that their average net weight is around 400 ounces. The best grade of ice cream, therefore, costs two cents an ounce, and that gives me the basic figure on which to work.

"I weigh my bulk cream and give twenty-five ounces net weight for a quart. Figuring the cream at two cents an ounce, and the carton at one and three-quarter cents, your ice cream costs you fifty-one and three-quarter cents per quart: I have found, however, that most grocers do not weigh their cream, but just put all they can in a quart container, which will hold, packed down, from twenty-eight to thirty-one ounces, according to the condition of the cream.

"If you weigh your cream and only give twenty-five ounces for a quart you can sell it for seventy-five cents, and that is my price for 'New York' and vanilla. For chocolate and strawberry I get eighty-five cents. Bricks are sold at fifty-five cents.

"The easiest way to prove my statement is to sell bulk cream in the usual way from one can, and set the money received for it to one side. I doubt very much if you will have money enough to pay for another can.

"Bricks are cut four to the gallon, and if you put a brick of cream on the scales you will find that it weighs from nineteen to twenty-one ounces. This proves without a doubt that there are only three quarts of bulk cream in a gallon.

"A good friend of mine told me that if he raised the price of his cream to seventy-five cents a quart he would not be able to sell any. That is all tommy-rot. You don't see any one staying away from theatres because the price has gone up. They still eat candy and smoke cigars, don't they? Why is ice cream any different from other products?"

That Mr. Pedigo finds it profitable to adhere to his sales-by-weight policy there does not seem to be any doubt, and he is confident that it is the best method.

Man. Retailers Hold 9th Convention

President A. F. Higgins Reviews History of the Association Since Its Start Nine Years Ago—Secretary J. H. Curle Traces Work Accomplished in Interests of Merchants During Past Year

WINNIPEG, July 3.—The ninth annual meeting of the Manitoba Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada was held here recently, when the annual reports of the officials were presented, officers elected and resolutions passed. Reference was made to this convention in last week's issue, but the president's and secretary's reports are here given in more detail.

President's Report

President A. F. Higgins, addressed the convention as follows:—

Manitoba became a part of the Association in Canada nearly nine years ago. On Nov. 7, 1896, a little over 25 years ago, retail merchants of all classes formed themselves into one Association. The retail merchants of that day found it to their advantage to have the different trade sections united into one organization. What was arrived at by experience then, is of equal advantage to-day. Retail merchants may be handling many different lines of merchandise, yet they have practically everything else in common. The same principles of merchandising are applied in each case. The problems of one section of the retail trade are common to the others. It is natural therefore, that the many sections of the retail trade should be organized into one association in Canada, as any one section can always depend upon the others for co-operation whenever the occasion demands.

During 25 years many changes have been brought about. The Association has to its credit many reforms in merchandising. To-day we have 30 sections of retail trade which are now formed, or are in the process of formation. Dominion committees consisting of one representative from each province in each trade section are being organized. Working with each Dominion committee there will be an advisory committee in Ottawa for each trade section. You will see by this that provision is being made under our plan of organization to get the authoritative viewpoint of every section of the retail trade from every province of Canada.

Merchandising a Profession

To the outsider it seems to be a very simple matter to run a retail store. All that is required is to buy goods and sell them again, and the difference between the cost and selling price is all profit. But, to the merchant it means buying goods and selling them again at such close margins that after deducting selling expenses, profits often disappear. It is very difficult at times for the public to understand that overhead expenses, or the cost of placing the goods in the hands of the customer, is as much a part of the actual cost of the goods as the amount which appears on the retailers' invoice. Records show that the turnover in the retail field is enormous. In New York, the average life of a grocery store is two years. Does this not show that there is too much guessing and not enough knowing in modern business? It is stated that out of every 100 who go into the retail grocery business, five make money, fifteen break even, and eighty go behind. Does this not point to the need for men and women to prepare before entering business?

Many people who enter the retail trade find themselves seriously handicapped through not having had the training or experience necessary to conduct a business that will give satisfactory service so that it will survive. I believe it is the duty of men at present engaged in retail business to do everything possible to provide the facilities for teaching the principles of merchandising so that men can enter business with a greater chance for succeeding than now obtains.

It is not my intention at the present time to give any detailed account of the activities of your organization since our last annual meeting. These matters will be well covered in our Secretary's report which will be presented to you to-day.

Before closing, it is almost unnecessary for me to say that the Retail Trade throughout the province, in common with the rest of Canada, has suffered very seriously though business depression since our last annual meeting. In addition to rapidly declining values which were in evidence in all countries, the West harvested a very unprofitable crop. Prospects in most districts were good right up to harvest and threshing season, but through continued wet weather and declining grain prices many merchants were suddenly confronted with the fact that their outstanding accounts could not be collected. Farmers who in other years had always promptly provided for their obligations were unable to pay any portion of their accounts. As a large portion of the capital of many country merchants at threshing time is in outstanding accounts, one can easily understand how serious were conditions in the country. While the crop conditions and the fact that business was not so well established in the West might have made conditions here even worse than in the East, I believe that the West will come back more quickly and that it will come back stronger than ever. Business is improving, perhaps slowly, but the fact that it shows some improvement is most encouraging. The West has wonderful crop prospects, we hope to see the present fine crop threshed and turned into dollars before many months.

We have had an opportunity of learning many lessons during this period of depression, and will no doubt look back on these years as a memory of school days in which we had a hard master, but at least learned some valuable lessons. Perhaps one of the most important lessons learned is that the Retail Merchant should not be expected to function as a banker and carry the financial burdens of his community.

As president of your association during the past year, I would like to express my appreciation of the services of our staff, John Curle, our secretary, Mr. Ivey our organizer and Miss Dutton, assistant to Mr. Curle. The work in the office as well as outside, has been particularly heavy this year, but they have spared no effort in furthering the interest of the association.

Secretary's Report

Secretary J. H. Curle reported as follows:—

"I beg to submit for your consideration a report covering some of the more important work of the Association. The resolutions passed at the last annual meeting were acted upon as follows:—

Sales Tax at the Source: This resolution recommended that the Luxury Tax be replaced by a sales tax to be collected at the source of supply from Manufacturers and Importers.

The Dominion Executive Council received the fullest support of your officers in this recommendation. The Dominion Government has adopted this principle in both the 1921 and 1922 budgets.

Refunds of Luxury Tax: Resolution dealing with refunds of Luxury Tax on returned goods or exchanges.

This question was disposed of with the removal of the Luxury Tax on December 18, 1920.

Report of Treasurer: This resolution approved of the treasurer's report.

Membership Dues: This resolution dealt with the membership fees. The principle of graduation was endorsed. A basis fee of $25 now applies to each retail store or department employing sales-people. In other cases it is $15.

Community Development: This resolution requested action in respect to the establishment of a Department of Community Organization and Development under the direction of the Department of Education.

Your officers joined with others interested in this question. The Minister of Education was interviewed twice on this subject. No action was taken. The Minister stated that the Government did not wish to assume any new financial obligations. The work was considered a very worthy one.

Taxation of Business: This resolution requested the executive to endeavor to have the recommendation of the Manitoba Assessment and Taxation Commission regarding local taxation of business acted upon by the Provincial Government.

Your executive officers appointed a committee to deal with the taxation question. The committee had a number of interviews with the Provincial Executive Council during the 1921 session, all of which were aimed at getting a fair and equitable distribution of the business tax. Our representatives were assured that the taxation of Retail Merchants on the present basis would be changed because the system was too burdensome and lent itself to unfair competition, particularly in the case of Retail Merchants doing business in Municipalities where the business tax is based upon the assessment of personal property. The Government agreed that the assessment of personal property should be abolished. A definite promise was made by the Provincial Treasurer that the change would be made early in 1922 session.

Freight Rates: This resolution endorsed the action of the Winnipeg Board of Trade in their appeal against freight rates.

Your officers requested the Dominion executive to co-operate in an effort towards having freight rates reduced, believing that such reduction would lead to the improvement of busines conditions.

Fire Prevention: This resolution approved of co-operation with the Fire Commissioner of Manitoba in fire prevention.

The Association has interested itself in the reduction of fire losses, as this action on our part would result in the reduction of the fire insurance rates.

Commercial Education: This resolution requested the officers to co-operate with the University in its efforts to promote commercial education.

The officers are pleased to report that the enrolment at the Fifth Annual Short Course for Retail Merchants held at the University Feb. 28, March 1—3, 1922, was 190. A short course was also held in Brandon Feb. 23 and 24. The retail merchants of Brandon give their enthusiastic support in securing an enrolment of 75. Both orders were appreciated. The visiting lecturers were R. C. Line of Columbus, Montana; Alex Karr of Fargo, N. D.; and Herbert Sheets of Argos, Indiana. The University has conducted evening classes in accounting, commercial law, auditing, business English and business arithmetic, and will establish a Department of Business Organization and Research with a view to meeting the need for commercial training in Manitoba.

District Organization: A resolution was passed recommending that additional districts be organized. Of the sixteen districts into which Manitoba was divided, the following are now organized: Swan River, Dauphin, Boissevain, Morden, Carman, Brandon, Souris, Neepawa and Winnipeg.

Resolution Re Automotive Dealers: The other Western Provinces desired an organization of Automotive Dealers in Manitoba. A section of this trade was completed in Winnipeg following the Dominion Board Convention in August 1921, when a joint conference of the local dealers and the Secretaries of the various Boards was held. Steps are now being taken to have this section cover the entire province.

Reports on Standing of Business Concerns: The Association has had the opportunity of giving the members confidential information on the responsibility of many concerns who appeared to be in business with the sole idea of getting some easy money.

Accounting Department: Interest in bookkeeping and business records has developed with Dominion Income Tax, Provincial Net Profits Tax, the provisions of the Dominion Bankruptcy Act and the growing difficulty of conducting a retail business successfully without proper records which can be analysed to guide the proprietor.

The Association acknowledges with appreciation the co-operation received from J. D. Reid, C. A. in dealing with requests for information covering methods for handling accounts adapted to different classes of retail stores.

Credit Reporting and Collection Department: A credit reporting service is available for all members on customers who move from any point in Canada or the United States to any point in Manitoba, or from one point to another within the province. Winnipeg members desiring exchange information on customers applying for credit are required to belong to the Winnipeg Associated Retail Credit Exchange which is the official credit exchange of the Winnipeg Branch, 402 Canada Building.

The collection of accounts is undertaken by the Exchange on a commission basis. L. J. Fraser is the managing Secretary of the Exchange.

Legislation: Shops Regulation Act: The City of Winnipeg sought and secured in 1921 an Amendment to the Shops Regulation Act which provides regulations for retail stores which carry mixed lines but who remain open after the closing hours of other classes of shops. These regulations were adopted in the Winnipeg By-law and put into effect Sept. 15, 1921. In October the police magistrate granted an appeal on a stated case at the request of the crown prosecutor. The Court of Appeal in its decision did not wish to hamper the magistrate in making decisions, and stated that every case must be dealt with on its own merits. The by-law has not been administered since the appeal was lodged. The Winnipeg City Council has been asked to take the necesary steps to have the by-law put into effect.

During the 1921 session your officers gave consideration to the following: The Workmen's Compensation Act, the application of Collective Bargaining, Eight Hour Day, The Amendment to the Lien Notes Act. (This bill was defeated in Committee). The Income Tax Bill, and the Amendment to the Corporations Taxation Act, both of which required a great deal of attention. During the 1922 session a bill was introduced amending the Garnishment Act. It proposed increasing the monthly exemption from $40 to $100. This change would have rendered the Act useless. The bill was not reported upon.

The Dominion Board Meeting: Manitoba was favored in having the last Annual Meeting and Convention of the Dominion Board held in Winnipeg, Aug. 23-25, 1921. Representatives were present from every province in Canada. Mr. J. A. Banfield, Winnipeg, was re-elected Dominion President. Important conferences were held during the days of the convention. The secretaries of all boards met with the directors of the Winnipeg Associated Retail Credit Exchange. The secretaries met with the Automotive Dealers of Winnipeg. The second annual conference of secretaries was held.

Membership: The Organizer reports a membership as of May 31, 1922, as follows:—City of Winnipeg, 224, Country 447. Total 671.

Special Meetings During the Year:—Assisted Selkirk merchants in presenting Early Closing By-Laws to Town Council. By-law was afterwards passed.

Helped Transcona Merchants in making arrangements affecting local business tax, and interviewed the Government on their behalf.

Accompanied the Dominion Secretary, Mr. Trowern, who addressed meetings at Souris, Brandon, Neepawa, Portage La Prairie and Winnipeg during the month of October, 1921.

Attended special conference on taxation at Brandon of representatives of cities, towns and villages. The recommendations of our Association were presented and discussed.

Attended convention of the Union of Municipalities at Portage La Prairie.

Addressed meetings at Dauphin and Winnipegosis.

Discussed Community Development with local business men at the following places:—Gladstone, Neepawa. Minnedosa, Treherne, Glenboro, Souris, Reston, Melita, Hartney, Deloraine, Boissevain, Killarney, Pilot Mound, Manitou, Morden, and Carman.

Attended the Annual Meeting of the Brandon Branch held on May 10, 1922. A special feature of this meeting was the address of Prof. L. A. H. Warren of the University of Manitoba on "The University and its Relation to Modern Business."

Attended Hardware Conference held Feb. 27th and 28th. Herbert P. Sheets of Argos, Indiana, Secretary Treasurer of the National Association of Retail Hardware Merchants was present and addressed the meeting.

Officers elected at this convention, as well as the resolutions passed were given in last week's issue.

In this store every available space almost is used for displaying good and splendid results are obtained

New Freight Rates on Basic Commodities Effective Aug. 1

Railway Board Announces Reduction in Freight Rates of Seven and One-Half Per Cent.—Potatoes Are Included In List Subject to Lower Rates

OTTAWA. June 30 (Special.)—General reductions of 7½ per cent. from existing freight rates on products including pulpwood west of Port Arthur, building material, brick, cement, lime and plaster, potatoes, fertilizers (other than chemicals), ores, pig iron, blooms, billets, wire rods and scrap iron are ordered by the judgment issued by the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners to-day and are to be effective from August 1st next. This means that the freight charges on those commodities which were raised by the judgment of Sept. 13, 1920 to 140 per cent. of their former level in Eastern Canada and 135 per cent. in Western Canada, which receded to 135 per cent. in Eastern Canada and 130 per cent. in Western Canada on January 1st, 1921, and further to 125 per cent. east of Fort William and 120 per cent. west of that point on December 1st last, are to take a further drop. Those rates, after August 1st next will still be 17½ per cent. higher in Eastern Canada and 12½ per cent. higher in Western Canada than they were prior to Sept. 13, 1920. The judgment also reduces the rates on coal, other than anthracite and coal moving westward from the head of the Great Lakes, to the basis which prevailed before Sept. 13, 1920. This will be beneficial to the coal mining industry in the Maritime Provinces and also in the Western Provinces. The Board orders that schedule A rates, which means the general rate basis throughout Ontario and Quebec, be extended to include the territory between North Bay and Sault Ste. Marie.

Vinegar and its Correct Name

NOW THAT the heaviest consumer demand for vinegar is at hand, the merchant should take all precautionary measures in selling this line. The regulations under the Pure Food and Drug Act are very strict in regard to how the various kinds of vinegar are defined and by what name they are sold under. In the category of the grocery trade, any white vinegar is usually called White Wine and an amber colored vinegar, other than malt, is generally known as cider. Under the regulations of the Pure Food Act, however, there is a difference. Vinegar to be called and sold as white wine must be made from grapes and as most of the white vinegar sold to-day is a spirit vinegar, the merchant should be very careful to tell customers the actual facts. It is the same with cider vinegar. A real cider vinegar is made wholly from apples, but in recent years there has appeared on the market, a vinegar, similar in appearance and which under the Pure Food Act is called blended.

From force of habit, no doubt, some merchants are inclined to sell customers spirit or a blended vinegar when they ask for white wine or cider. The law in this regard is very strict. Merchants discovered selling vinegar other than what it actually is, leave themselves open to police court publicity, convictions and heavy fines.

Sell the Old Lot First

"DO NOT PACK these goods in front of the lot you already have. Sell the old lot first." That was the advice stenciled on a package of goods being unloaded from a truck yesterday. No doubt the majority of retailers are following that advice to the letter but for some reason or another, there appears to be some who through carelessness or thoughtlessness will sometimes sell the last lot of certain goods first, and consequently the previous arrivals are left on the shelves or in the warehouse as the case may be.

The need of the careful watching of stocks, is particularly good advice to digest during the hot days of summer. Breakfast foods and other foods of a cereal nature are more inclined to become "webby" during the summer than in the winter months. Pickles, catsup and canned goods also feel the heat and should therefore be moved off the shelves as rapidly as possible. In refilling shelves, particular pains should be taken to see that goods remaining there, are taken out and placed in front of the new supply.

Careless Wrapping

WHILE THE business of wrapping parcels is carried to extremes in a great many instances, yet there are many merchants who are not paying sufficient attention, and giving the proper care to the parcelling and wrapping of their merchandise. The remark of a customer was overheard the other day by a representative of this paper, and it was in reference to this very matter of wrapping.

"I certainly like that store," this woman was heard to say, "but they take no care in wrapping things up for you. That man has the nicest looking store around here, and he carries the very best goods that can be bought, but his one idea seems to be to get rid of them, and he does not care how you get them home. Mr. —— down the street hasn't as nice a store, but he certainly gives you a lot of attention when you shop there. He always collects all my parcels together, and if I am carrying them with me, which very often I do, I only have the one big parcel instead of a lot of little ones."

There is a lesson in service for the retailer in this customer's remarks, and while it may seem a little thing, it is the little things such as this that retain or drive away customers from the store. It is just one of the many courtesies, small perhaps, but nevertheless necessary to secure continued and permanent patronage for your store.

Care in the wrapping of parcels, and an endeavor to make them as easy to carry as possible for the customer is not a big matter, but as evidenced by the remarks of this customer, it is a service that the man with the fine store and high-class goods, in this instance has been overlooked.

What other grocers are doing in the way of boosting summer lines, you can do too. The way to keep business moving at this period of the year, is to get behind those lines that have a ready appeal at this season. There are attractive profits in a number of sidelines that take well in the hot days.

Location is an important factor in the success of a store, but frequently merchants in spite of the fact that they are situated on a side street perhaps, or on a generally considered poor site, are getting a full share of business for the reason that they are keeping their stores always attractive, giving good service, and building a reputation for only the best quality goods.

The window card is a small thing in itself, but as a reminder, in its influence or attention and interest no man can tell in advance what train of thought it might put in motion but it is safe to say that the card makes it easier to sell goods. The window card and price ticket are suggestive and people act upon suggestion. They answer the questions the merchant would otherwise have to take time to answer. They put an idea into the mind that may be retained for days and then acted upon. They are always good advertising.

Estimating Margins During the Year

General Merchant Writes Inquiring As to the Best Method of Estimating Profits for the Whole Business Without Taking Stock —Turnovers in Various Departments Are Not Enough

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—How can we arrive at a fair estimate of our profits in the main store, month by month, for our whole business without taking stock? We carry general merchandise—groceries, drugs, dry goods, hardware, boots and shoes, and keep record of sales from each line, but think it would be impossible to keep a stock sheet in each department showing each month the goods on hand, as clerks are not kept entirely in one department. Then in each department are goods that must be marked at very close margin and others that can stand much more, but our records of goods sold do not show this. Our inventory of Sept. 30 shows the following figures:

	Gro-Drugs	Dry Gds	Stnry	Hdw	Boots	Shs
Purchases	3,840.81	6,747.58	4,848.03	2,436.52
to 2-28-2	10,026.75	1,506.89	4,370.71	725.77
	13,867.56	8,254.47	9,218.74	3,162.29
Inventory	5,311.21	6,345.71	5,395.52	2,00800
Cost of Sales	8,556.35	1,908.76	3,823.22	1,154.29
Cged Branch	2,397.01	772.41	352.18	162.03
Sales M'n Store	8,401.60	2,864.68	5,173.85	1,276.70
Total Sales	10,798.61	3,637.09	5,526.03	1,438.73

On this basis, how often do we turn stock and which lines pay use best? Death of one member of firm in September caused stock taking then, though end of financial year is usually end of January. First eight months of 1921 showed loss, account drop in values, but as these were all marked previous to Sept. 30, business since has shown profit.

Without more complete figures, it is a little hard to answer that question. The figures hardly seem logical. For, in face of declining values and recent lessons in the evils of excess stocks, why should inventory be heavier in February than in September—$1,500 in groceries-drugs, $500 in hardware, nearly $1 200 total.

Margins Apparently Liberal Enough

Assuming figures just as given, however, and that cost of sales is accurate, also that sales at main store are accurately stated, we seem to have these margins: 20¾ per cent. in grocery-drugs, 47½ per cent. in dry-goods-stationery, 31 per cent. in hardware and 20 per cent in shoes. This seems about right for the first, excessive for second, right for third and very inadequate for fourth.

Taking total sales at $21,400.46 for the five months, less cost of total sales, we have apparent gross earnings of $5,-957.84, and that would show an average margin of more than 27.8 per cent., which certainly would be a fine showing. I do not know, of course, but it seems too good to be true. It would be especially remarkable considering that some $3,700 of the sales were goods delivered to the branch without margin.

But turnover is certainly 'way off—if my analysis so far is correct. For we find the average to be only slightly over twice a year. In detail, the grocery-drugs seem to be turned 4.5 times, dry-goods, 2/3 times, hardware, 1.7 times, and shoes, 1¾ times. These figures might be admissible as normal in some regions, but this business is located within easy reach of large wholesale centers and therefore—barring special circumstances with which I may not be acquainted—all the stocks should be speeded considerably. Putting it conservatively, I should fix the minimum on groceries-drugs at six, dry-goods-stationery, three, hardware, three and shoes at least 2½.

Perpetual Inventory Plans

You can arrive at a close approximation of what stock you have in all departments so long as you keep track of departmental sales. Having inventory at the beginning of any period, it is simple to add purchases at cost. Knowing from past experience what your average margin is in each department, all you have to do is take that margin from your sales. That gives you cost of sales. Subtract that from purchases added to inventory and the remainder will very closely approximate stock on hand in each department.

But let me say that a stock of nearly $18,000 to more than $19,000 looks very excessive for any business running between $50,000 and $60,000. To arrive at turnover in any department, or throughout the business as a whole take cost of sales made and divide by average stock carried.

Next question:—

The accounts of the branch store in our ledger show a profit of $757.44 on sales of $4,163.84, from October 1 to end of February, and expenses for same period of $775.79 exclusive of taxes, insurance or rent or interest on investment. The inventory end of February, including stock, accounts, cash, real estate, furniture and fixtures, was $8.548.93. How shall we arrive at a fair estimate of profits from this store and how should manager be remunerated? Is straight salary or percentage on sales or of profits to be preferred?

If Nothing From Nothing—What?

Surely, something is missing here! We have earnings—called profits—of $18.-35 less than expenses, and the expenses do not include many important and costly items, yet I am asked how to arrive at an estimate of profits. I am stumped by this question—must await further light.

But I am strongly inclined to the view expressed last week, that the branch store is running at a loss, and a serious loss at that. This is not an unusual condition. Many a branch, supposed to be a feeder, has come to be recognised as a sucker on a show-down. These figures show a margin of 18.2 per cent. with expenses of 18.65 per cent.—not including all expenses!

The question of how to remunerate managers—who make profits, that is!—I covered in detail a few weeks ago. If my correspondent did not see the item, I can give him specific reference. But my present urgent suggestion is that he get busy and check up that branch store most drastically. I know how branch stores are. I have been right through the fire of that ordeal from two important angles, and frankly, I am very skeptical. I have to be "shown."

Next question:

Our salary account for the whole year is 7.5 per cent. on all sales, including goods delivered to branch store, 9 per cent. if calculated on retail sales in main store alone, and is practically the same for the four months. Is this a reasonable figure? Expenses, including salaries amount to 13.14 per cent. of sales, but we did not keep account of oil, gasoline, etc., for truck, wrapping paper, string, pencils, etc., used in store, and made no allowance for rent or interest on investment. In 1920 the percentage of salary expense was only 4.88 per cent. and the total expenses, 9.8 per cent. This difference is partly due to drop in values and partly to business being lighter in 1921.

Salary Expenses Moderate

Those salary expenses are not out of line from any standpoint, I should say, but it is a question whether the total is as favorable as it should be. It should not be difficult to ascertain what it costs to "feed" the truck. Indeed, by this time the cost per mile of operating the truck should be so well known, down to a fraction, that this expense could easily be ascertained. Incidentally, here is one item that, if known, would go far toward settling the question of the wisdom of trucking goods six miles to the branch store.

Alberta Retailers Discuss Provincial Income Taxation

Edmonton, July 5.—Imposition of a provincial income tax for which it is said the provincial government will introduce legislation at the fall session, was discussed by the Alberta Retail Merchants' Association meeting in annual convention in Edmonton the other day.

The convention was arranged to take care of the requirements of all sections of the retail trade. It was split up into small gatherings during the early sessions, and each separate trade section discussed the problems which most closely affect it. Later there will be a general meeting of all classes represented.

It was suggested that a license of $100 be imposed on all small order houses and peddlars operating within the province, and to have them pay in the way of taxes say five per cent on all business transacted.

It has been contended that it is unfair to ask that the merchant whose business is definitely established in Alberta should pay for the upbuilding of the province, while outsiders are allowed to participate in these business privileges without paying taxes in proportion.

CALGARY GROCETERIA, LTD., HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC

Competition in the various sporting events was most keen, and altogether an enjoyable afternoon and evening was spent.

W. G. Patrick of W. G. Patrick & Co., Wellington Street, W., Toronto, has just returned from a six weeks' trip to the Old Country. Mr. Patrick reports industry in most of the lines in which his firm is interested as being very good. There is, he states, a decided improvement in business conditions in the Old Country, and while Mr. Patrick does not anticipate any higher price on the particular lines his company represents, at the present time, he states that he cannot see how manufacturers over there can lower their prices for the reason that they are so heavily taxed, and overhead charges on this account are greatly enhanced.

Letters To The Editor

Editor, Canadian Grocer:

Will you answer through your columns the following: What should be the overhead for a grocery, flour, feed and produce business, with meat market in connection? Selling at retail, delivering and charging goods. Also what should be the cost of wages including wages to partners?

Yours very truly,
Subscriber.

Editor's Note—The average cost of doing business is 16½ per cent. Some stores operate at 13 per cent. while others will run as high as 19 per cent. Wages are generally considered safe at between 6 and 8 per cent. although some stores run up to 10 per cent. In the matter of wages to partners, some merchants claim that they should draw for themselves one-third more than their highest paid employees. If subscriber would send us a detailed statement of their business we would then be able to answer the questions more definitely.

Editor, Canadian Grocer:

Are you aware of any Canadian customs regulations which will not permit the export of canned chicken, say from P. E. I.

If there is such a law, would you be good enough to state the reasons or cause, responsible for such an arrangement.

Yours very truly,
E. P. E.

Answer.—There are no Canadian customs regulations which would prohibit the export of canned chicken from any province in Canada to another province or to another country, according to our laws. There are however some very strict laws with regard to the canning of chicken.

For instance many firms in the United States are unable to sell canned chicken on this market since they do not conform with the regulations regarding the post mortem examination of the fowl. While they have their own inspection it does not conform with the inspection required by the Canadian customs authorities. It is necessary that a bill of good health be obtained on the fowl before they are killed in order that they may be put up in tins for shipment into Canada.

Since these regulations are strictly enforced in Canada there does not appear to be any reason why shipments of the said goods cannot be made from Prince Edward Island. Upon enquiring of some firms who are packing chicken in Montreal we find they are making shipments to Newfoundland.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE raw sugar market was easier during the early part of the week under review, with Cubas declining 3 1-8c c. & f. New York. Later, the market recovered and considerable business transpired at 3 3-16c and 3 1-4c. One U.S. refiner purchased 14,000 bags at 3 3-16c c. & f. New York, which figures 4.80c duty paid. On the same day one other refiner purchased 10,000 bags for August shipment at 3 1-4c c. & f. or 4.86c duty paid. Operators were buying at 3 3-16c and some business developed at 3.10c f.o.b. Cuba. The U.S. refined situation remains practically unchanged as far as home consumption is concerned. All refiners with the exception of one are quoting $6.20 f.o.b seaboard basis less 2 per cent. The other is quoting $6.30 and is able to secure that price on account of prompt shipment, the others being two to four weeks behind. Export business, after being easier has since firmed up with sales at $4.22½ f.o.b. in bond New York. Later $4.25 was freely bid but holders' ideas were above this basis.

In Canadian refined, all refiners are quoting $7 Montreal basis, while one refinery, the Atlantic, is still withdrawn. Other refiners are accepting orders subject to delay which may be anywhere from two to four weeks. There does not appear to be any actual shortage for domestic requirements nor does any seem to be anticipated. It is an undoubted fact, however, that all refiners are participating freely in export enquiries which absorbs the production from time to time. It is understood that the policy of refiners is to protect requirements of the home country. Refiners are making no future sales nor any guarantees given, and this policy seems to be resulting in more confidence all round. But in view of this situation, there are no indications at the moment, for any immediate change in prices.

There is little change in the spot situation on teas. Recent cables from primary markets indicate strong tendencies as well as in London, and it is generally held that this condition will continue well into the fall months.

Cereals, beans and flour hold fairly steady with little change showing in quotations. Rices are steady on spot but have an unsettled appearance on the New York market. Nuts continue quiet and unchanged.

Canned goods are moving freely. Canners are now busy with the new pack of peas but nothing of definiteness is announced as to probable prices. New pack of strawberry jam is in a strong position and a little stiffening in prices. New lobsters are a short pack with quotations considerably higher than the opening prices.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, July 5.—The whole grocery market presents a strong front this week with cutting being eliminated and more confidence in evidence. Sugar is in a strong position and with the low prices on fruit this year there promises to be a big demand. Molasses has taken another jump of 3c a gallon in sympathy with the sugar market. Canned goods promise to be cheaper but the spot stocks now stand firm. Coffee is unchanged. Green teas are higher than was expected and the first crop now on the market shows an advance of two cents over the old prices. Black teas are strong. Self-raising flour is reduced. Cereals are quiet. There is more activity in the spice market. Caraway seed is advanced. Lemons are easy in price and strawberries are lower. Oranges are high. Local vegetables are plentiful on the market with lower prices. There is no change of note in nuts. Citron peel is scarce and higher.

COFFEE PRICES STEADY

Montreal.

COFFEE.—The coffee market is quiet with a fair amount of business passing. Importers state that no change in price is looked for within the next two or three months. There is little to be said about the new crop but coffee dealers expect prices to be about the same level as last year since the production and market conditions are about the same.

CANNED GOODS LOOK EASIER

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—All attention in this market is directed towards the new pack. Much depends upon the conditions of this crop. Although strawberry prices did not go as low as was expected this year prices are lower than in past years and the lower price of sugar has helped the manufacturers of strawberry jam and preserves to put their products on the market at a lower figure than last year. Strawberry jams in 16 oz. glass jars are quoted at $3.40 per doz. for the new pack. According to th jam manufacturers only about 60 per cent. production of raspberries is expected with probably a little higher price. Local wholesalers state that they expect lower prices in general throughout the canned vegetable and fruit market. All attention is given to unloading bought stocks and since these are now low the market stands firm. Retailers are also endeavoring to unload their holdings so that they may buy on the new level of prices. An advance of 10c. is quoted on Cyclone cohoe: talls are quoted at $3 a doz. Lobster has advanced 10c. per doz., ¼'s being quoted at $2.75.

SELF-RAISING FLOUR LOWER

Montreal

PACKAGE GOODS.—Brodie & Harvie's Self-Raising and pancake flour is reduced 10c. per doz. for the 6 lb. packages and 5c. per doz. for the 3 lb. packages. This makes the price $4.40 per doz. for the large size and $2.25 per doz. for the small size. Other lines are steady in price with a fair demand for package cereals. The cutting in puffed rice, in wholesale circles, has been discontinued and the price is now firm at $5.70 per case.

Montreal

NUTS.—There is little of note in the nut market. Wholesale buying shows more activity since prices have been temporarily reduced on walnuts. Some wholesalers are showing a reduction of 1c. per lb. on Marbot walnuts the price now being 27c. per lb. The market however varies from 26 to 28c. per lb. but importers state that this price is due for an advance if the exchange on French currency strengthens up.

CITRON PEEL IS SCARCE

Montreal.

DRIED FRUIT.—Dealers in candied peel report an increase in business with heavy buying for fall delivery. The price on orange and lemon peel is easier but citron is high and scarce. The price of citron balances up the lower price on the other two peels so that in mixed cut peels the price remains about the same as last year. Higher prices may be expected in dates since bought stocks are low and available supplies are held in the U. S. The currant market is firm but a weak tone is noted in raisins.

SUGAR MARKET STRONG

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The general opinion in the trade is that a higher price is due on refined sugar. The market for raw sugar has strengthened up with an advance of from ⅛ to ¼c. during the past week. The refiners price is firm at $7 per cwt. and wholesalers are quoting $7.05 strictly for city delivery. Many retailers who bought, speculating in the sugar market when prices were low, are now selling below the wholesale price at 10 lb. for 69c.

GREEN TEAS HIGHER

Montreal.

TEA.—Contrary to early reports, the new crop of green teas are not lower but are now on this market with prices about the same as last year, which were, in comparison to other years, fairly low. The first crop of Japan teas are quoted at an advance of about 2c. over the o prices and in some cases the advance amounts to 3c. per lb. Ceylon green Young-Hyson teas are quoted at an advance of 2c. per lb., making the price 50c. per lb. The same teas in chests of 165 lbs. are quoted at from 40 to 44c. per lb. by some local wholesalers. China country green Young-Hyson teas are quoted at 37c. per lb. Reports of a second crop Japan teas show a little easier than the first crop but the market is eager to pick up these teas and prices are not expected to be any lower than last year's quotation. The first crop was picked up quickly by U. S. importers and the whole of the crop has been shipped to Canada and U. S.

PRESERVING WAX REDUCED

Montreal.

MISCELLANEOUS.—With the approach of the preserving season comes a demand for accessories for preservers and wax is being featured: Local wholesalers are quoting Parowax at a reduction of ½c. per lb. In case lots the price is 10c. per lb. and in less quantities 11c. A reduction in glass washboards has been made by local wholesalers making the price $7.50 per doz.

LEMONS ARE REDUCED

Montreal.

FRUIT.—This has not been a good season for selling lemons and prices are a little easier with plenty on the market. Oranges are high and have reached $11 a crate. Cherries are plentiful and prices are already running low. Strawberries, contrary to expectation came down with a crash this week and were selling in the middle of the week at 15c.. a quart basket. The supply seems to be plentiful. Georgia peaches and plums are now offered at comparatively easy prices. All fruit prices, except oranges are lower than at this date last year.

The local tomatoes are not yet on the market but the imported ones are lower with a good demand. Beets are down as low as 50c. a doz. and the same price is quoted on carrots. Cucumbers, cabbages and beans are also reduced. In this district a heavy crop of market tomatoes is expected.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, July 5.—The sugar situation shows little change as compared with a week ago. Refiners list remains firm at $7.34 and one refiner is still withdrawn. Rolled oats continue to show an active movement and quotations are firm at the higher basis. Beans are quiet but supplies are not large. The new pack lobster is very short this season and in consequence shipments have been cut 50 per cent. Some wholesalers, as the result of this shortage find themselves oversold and are selling only in broken case lots. New strawberry jam is stronger. Teas continue in a strong position and coffees are stiffening. Rices indicate an unsettled condition. Flour and millfeeds are unchanged. Domestic fruits and vegetables are arriving in heavy volume and prices are generally tending easier.

ROLLED OATS ACTIVE

Toronto

CEREALS—The market generally, for cereals holds fairly steady. The strength displayed in rolled oats a few weeks ago, still continues to be in evidence. Millers continue to report an active movement and quotations are firm at $3.30 per bag, single bag lots.

NEW LOBSTERS SHORT

Toronto

CANNED GOODS—Some canners have commenced on the new pack of peas, and from present indications, the pack promises to be well up to normal. There are reports, however, in certain sections of the pea lice which is causin some damage to the crop. Delivery of new pack lobsters was only 50 per cent. The result is that some whole-salers are cutting commitments and only selling in less than case lots. Quotations on new pack lobster vary; in some quarters the price on halves is $4.85 and on quarters, $2.80. Others, however, are quoting as high as $5.25 for halves and $3.25 for quarters. Strawberry jam is in a stronger position. The majority of manufacturers are not quoting at present, while others claim they are completely sold up.

COFFEE PRICES STIFFENING

Toronto.

COFFEE—For some time past the coffee market has been in a comparatively strong position and although primary prices would seem to warrant an advance on spot, prices locally have been fairly steady. During the past week, however, there has developed a stronger undertone in the local situation and there appears to be a tightening sentiment which indicates that there are likely to be some price changes in an upward direction.

DRIED FRUITS—There is little activity in the market for futures, buyers appear to be playing a waiting game apparently content to wait until later in the season when something of a more definite character will be known about the packs and price propects. RICES LOOK UNSETTLED

Toronto

RICES—There is no change in the local situation in the rice market. The demand is very light both in this country and in the U. S. and there appears to be some indications by holders to sacrifice prices in order to stimulate sales. A report from the New York market says: "The rice market is dull and shows signs of weakness in domestic stocks, as some holders are getting anxious to increase turnover and see no way to encourage the movement except by feeling out buyers by quoting lower prices. The situation is critical as the present inactivity is the culmination of hand-to-mouth trading. There is no excess stocks in sight, but this is overlooked by the trader, who gauges the market largely by the consumptive movement."

SUGAR HOLDS STRONG

Toronto.

SUGAR—There is no change in quotations; refiners list remains at $7.34 although the Atlantic still remains withdrawn from the market. The market holds fairly strong but there does not appear to be anything at the moment which would warrant a further advance. In the raw market, values were slightly easier during the early part of the week but later recovered and some sales were made for shipment during the last half of July and the first half of August at 3¼c c. and f. New York which figures $4.36c duty paid.

HEAVY RECEIPTS OF CHERRIES

Toronto.

FRUITS—Shipments of cherries during the past week were very large and even heavier shipments are expected this week. Prices in consequence dropped considerably and on Friday were as low as 50c per 11 qt. basket for sour reds. This, however, was due to the holiday coming the next day and during the early part of this week, the average prices were from 90c to $1 per basket. At no time this season has there been a glut of any kind of fruit on the market such as usually occurs other years. The reason for this is attributed to the better marketing facilities now used by the Niagara shippers. Blueberries have made the first appearance on the market and are quoted at $2.50 to $3.50 per basket.

NEW POTATOES DOWN: OLD UP

Toronto.

VEGETABLES—Old potatoes firmed up during the week and prices advanced to $1.10 f. o. b. track, car lots. Dealers quotations are also up about 15c per bag. New potatoes, however, are quite the reverse and quotations are down about $1 per barrel. No. 1s are quoted at $6 and 2s at $4 per barrel. Carrots, beets, wax beans and peas are arriving in fair volume and prices are easier. Leamington tomatoes are expected to arrive this week and the probable price will be $2.75 to $3 per 11 qt. basket.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, July 3.—There is little change in the grocery situation. The coffee market is marking time till the new crop is marketed. Canned goods show no change. The California Prune Association prices on the new pack prunes are expected shortly. Rolled oats are ruling easy and a decline has been noted. Trading in nuts continues quiet with the peanut market developing a firmer tone. Sugar continues strong with an upward tendency. New California fruits are arriving and are in good demand. Mississippi tomatoes are lower.

COFFEE CONTINUES STRONG

CANNED FRUITS SCARCE

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—Many lines of canned fruits such as cherries, strawberries and raspberries are practically cleaned up and the new pack in August will arrive practically on a bare market. There is little change in the canned vegetable situation with many lines becoming scarce. There is little interest to note in the canned fish situation. Salmon of the pink and cohoe variety is in fair demand with small sales of sockeye on account of the high prices.

PRUNE PRICES EXPECTED

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—It is expected that the California Prune Association will name prices on new pack prunes within a short time. Raisins are ruling firm and from reports just received the Association advises that present prices of raisins will not be reduced until such time as prices will be named on new crops as at the present time the total tonnage is less than it was at this time last year.

WILL NOT MEET AGAIN UNTIL SEPTEMBER

Montreal, July 3.—Results of the conference of the representatives of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association with the Canadian Freight Association here last week will not be made known until September. The latter body will not meet again until after the Summer vacation. The wholesalers are protesting against changes in present freight classifications and minimum car weights.

Easier Prices On Salmon Result In Increased Turnover For This Line

High Prices Have Hurt Sales in the Past Say Retail Dealers—A Few Cents Less Profit Per Pound Brings More Dollars in Gross Profit, According To One Merchant.

MONTREAL—(Special).—The recent low prices on fresh salmon on account of the good catch of the season, have stimulated interest in the fish market and started something that fish dealers have been long hoping for. Many retail grocers and provisioners are now featuring this fish, with the result that it has meant a big increase in the sale of the fish. The delicate flavor of the salmon easily wins it favor when given the opportunity.

In the past the price of salmon has almost been prohibitive and for that reason little real interest has been taken in it. During the last few weeks a number of local retailers have had banners on their windows announcing a feature price started at 40c a pound and through keen competition has been worn down to 25c and even 20c a pound. The cost of the fish whole is about 15c a pound. Some retailers claim to have bought at 12½c.

A Retailer's Story

One retailer said this week, "I have had heavy sales of salmon in the last two weeks. I have sold as much as 60 pounds a day and I have found the secret of a good profit in fish. It is a big turnover. Salmon costs, say thirteen cents a pound now. I allow four cents a pound for what I lose in cleaning, including head and tail. I sell it at 25 cents a pound, giving me eight cents a pound profit. I wish I could get that on all the meat I sell. There is very little trouble with salmon. It has not the odor that some other fish have and when the price is low it sells rapidly. The trouble has been that sometimes too big a profit has been asked on it in the past, and the merchant had simply spoiled a good thing. I make far more now than I did at 30c a pound, and I intend to let it go lower as a special on Fridays. It is a good drawing card and a fish that gets repeat orders.

A Matter of Turnover

"Mathematically it is a matter of turnover and from a merchandising point of view it is publicity. The profit is there if one can get the turnover and the reputation of the fish and the lower price seems to guarantee that."

Can Handle Smoked and Cooked Meats More Economically With A Slicer

Hicks and Bamford, Burlington, Ont., Sell From Twelve to Fourteen Sides of Bacon Each Week and Believe that a Slicer has Increased their Turnover in Smoked and Cooked Meats

"IT CERTAINLY enables a grocer to handle smoked and cooked meats much more economically," Mr. Bamford of Hicks and Bamford, Burlington, Ont., told a representative of Canadian Grocer recently when speaking of the meat slicer in his store. "That slicer is a splendid machine," he added. "We have had it for five years and we have never had to have a thing done to it. It has given splendid service, and we believe that it has meant increased sales for us. People nowadays want their bacon sliced, and want it sliced too as they like it. This is only possible with a slicer, and I think a merchant sells more bacon and cooked meats when he is able to give this service than in any other way."

The slicer in the store of Hicks and Bamford is situated prominently at the end of the counter, and is in easy access of the refrigerator. Sales of bacon run from twelve to fourteen sides each week. "We sell only one brand of bacon," Mr. Bamford remarked. "We believe it is the best, and find it gives the greatest satisfaction to our customers. It is a good idea to specialize in one brand of bacon, when we know that it is of first-class quality, as it gives the store a reputation that brings business, not only in bacon, but in other lines."

Montreal Prices On Strawberries Are Quoted High

Montreal.—Rain has delayed strawberries so much that the trade is pessimistic about there being any noticeable demand for preserving. Two weeks ago the prospects were fairly bright. The prices on American berries ran low and fruit dealers predicted an easy price on Canadian berries, a good crop and a good demand. Heavy rains have however upset the calculations and the supply is limited. Towards the end of last week Montreal berries were quoted at 18c a box wholesale and ran up to 20c. Some New Brunswick berries were quoted as low at 16 cents and retailers were advertising them for preserving at $2.10 per doz. boxes.

Berries of Good Quality

The quality of the local berries is surprisingly good and for table use easily bring 25c a box. Steady and heavy rains through the middle of last week retarded picking and stunted the ripening. On the whole the prospect is poor for lower priced strawberries. Some fruit dealers still hold out hope and predict that the berry crop, although late will come in the first week or ten days of July.

Raspberries Good

Early shipments of raspberries from the United States to this market look good but the price is high. At the time of going to press they were retailing at 28c for a small box. Farmers on the local market speak well of the appearance of the raspberry bushes but little can be foretold of the domestic raspberries as yet.

A CANADIAN SAMPLES EXHIBITION IN LONDON

London, July 3—A Canadian sample exhibition in London will, it is hoped, be opened next September or October. The Consolidated Export Displays, Limited, which is behind the project, has met with encouraging spirit. A large number of Canadian agencies in London have disappeared during the past two years, and, apart from food products, there remain few lines of Canadian manufactured or natural products now being shown here. A good sample collection will help to fill the gap.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, July 5.—The hog market looks as though it were going to stand fairly steady at around $14.50 for light weights. Bacon, smoked and cured meats and hams are firm but the season has not brought the demand that was expected. The butter market has shown weaker tendencies with a reaction in the export market after the recent advances. The cheese market also shows weakness for the same reason, although the make of cheese shows an increase. The egg market has a strong tone with some advances recorded. The demand for domestic trade is still heavy and the production is smaller. The lower prices with an increased demand for Gaspe salmon features the fish market. The lard market is quiet with no changes and only a limited demand.

BUTTER MARKET EASIER

Montreal.

BUTTER—A lull in the demand for export creamery butter has brought an easier feeling to the market. The high level to which prices ran, cut down to some extent the demand for export, a reaction occurred and prices were easier. The demand for the English market still exists and it is hardly expected that prices will drop any considerable amount. Local wholesale prices show a decline of one cent per pound.

CHEESE MARKET WEAKER

Montreal.

CHEESE—Influences bearing on the cheese market tend toward lower prices. Partly in sympathy with butter, but mainly on account of less competition in buying and because of slightly heavier supplies, cheese prices at country boards are lower. The wholesale prices are unchanged although there is a weaker feeling.

LIVE HOGS FIRM

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS—There is little change in the market for hogs or fresh pork. Selected light weights are selling as high as $15 per cwt., which shows a slight advance over last week's prices. The general trend of prices for light weights however run from $14.50 to $14.75 for cwt. Dressed hogs are selling from 21½ to 22c per lb. The market shows a firm tone and while the demand for fresh meat shows a falling-off the export demand and the domestic demand for cured and cooked meats is fair which holds up the prices in consideration of the fact that the offerings of hogs on the market are not heavy. Packers expect the price to hold steady throughout July. The beef market shows some easier tendency but not to an appreciable amount. Local butchers are expecting lower prices on beef this month but the demand for fresh meat is light.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, July 5.—Butter and cheese continue with a firm tone under active buying and higher prices. Eggs are also in a firmer position, due to the lessening in production and considerable spoilage. Live hogs are higher. Smoked bacon is a shade higher while hams are unchanged. Lard and shortening are unchanged. Cooked meats show an active movement, but quotations are unchanged. Fresh caught halibut is higher, while trout is slightly lower. Poultry prices are easier.

BUTTER HOLDS FIRM

Toronto

BUTTER.—The market continues with firm tone under an active demand for storage and export. The consuming demand is also heavy. Quotations in some quarters are advanced one cent while in others, prices are unchanged. No. 1 creamery prints now range from 39c. to 41c.

CHEESE PRICES HIGHER

Toronto.

CHEESE.—The market continues to reflect the firm situation of the butter market. Throughout the month of June, market showed steadily increasing strength. This was attributed to the keen demand for storage and the improvement in the export conditions. Prices, too, gradually advanced, which stand at the present time 5c. per lb. over the price at the beginning of the month. From present indications it is likely this condition will continue well into the month of July. Supply of September cheese is gradually getting into smaller compass, and prices are firmly held at 24c. per lb.

Toronto.

EGGS.—The market continues with a firm tone with dealers quoting one cent. higher than a week ago. Production of eggs is very light and some dealers are having difficulty in obtaining sufficient supplies to meet present requirements. A considerable spoilage is also quite apparent. These two factors are attributed in the main to the firmness and higher prices.

But the omissions are important. Rent probably will figure close to one per cent.—easily more. I have no information as to capital employed. Suppose only $10,000 and we figure 6 per cent. Here is $600 a year which, on a business of $60,000, would be one per cent. Very likely the capital is larger. Take all the other items mentioned and add a little for slight miscalculations and one and one half per cent. looks reasonable to me.

On such basis, expenses in 1921 were 16 64 per cent. and in 1920 they were 13.3 per cent.—with no provision yet made for the truck "feeding."

I am not sure I have hit any nail squarely on the head—maybe only struck a glancing blow, but maybe also I have succeeded in hinting the direction of some of the chance leakages and losses in this business. If so, I have done what I could.

Variations in Margins Normal

There are yet several interesting points to cover in this letter, but my space is filled for this week and I have other matters which must be handled during the next two weeks. Thereafter I shall revert to this problem, and meantime I should like to hear further from this correspondent so matters now in doubt may perhaps to further cleared up.

For a closing to this instalment let me go back for a minute to the first question used this week, above. I want to say that in all departments of all lines of business "there are goods that must be marked at very close margins and others that can stand more," and few records, aside from those of some exceptionally managed department stores, show such items in their true relation to the profit account.

I am constantly engaged in studies which I hope sometime to tabulate and publish in book form wherein low-end merchandise will be analyzed in detail. I believe such study can be made to demonstrate that not all goods sold below cost of operation are money-losers, also that not all long-margin items are profitable. I wonder if such a book will find purchasers and readers.

ICE OF CHEMICAL PURITY WILL SOON BE DEMANDED

Charleston, S. C.—Ice closely approaching chemical purity will soon be necessary to supply the commercial demand, says R. H. Hemphill, who has been conducting experiments to this end in his plant for years.

"I found that nature freezes out the impurities," he says. "There is no question in the world but that the crystal of pure ice will freeze out of a solution unless it is tremendously embarrassed. Certain portions of the Hudson river, for instance, which have sewage and all sorts of contamination in it will produce chemically pure ice.

"I have made chemically pure ice in cans. I have produced it out of sewers. I have produced it out of sea water. I have mixed up 25 to 30 packages of purple dyes and poured into the can, forming as perfect a solution as possible with coloring matter, and have frozen it out until I have produced what our chemists say is chemically pure ice, but the process has not yet been reduced to practice on a commercial scale."

Bowser Equipment Makes Larger Profits Sure!

Because car owners everywhere are being taught by Bowser advertising in the Saturday Evening Post and Literary Digest to look for Bowser pumps as their guarantee of full mileage, you will be able to catch and hold the most trade if you use Bowser equipment.

The Chief Sentry, either air-driven or hand power, is mechanically accurate. It has five distinct features that make the public like it.

First, there is the centrifugal water separator, which delivers the gasoline as pure and dry as when fresh from the refinery, then there is the tally bell which announces the delivery of each gallon of gasoline. Third, the sight glass through which the customer sees the gasoline go into his tank. Next, the dial register which tallies the total amount of gasoline purchased. Finally, the increased speed at which the customer gets his gasoline—no delay when a Chief Sentry is used.

We have been telling you that a Wayne Pump on your curb will bring you new customers to buy the merchandise inside your store. Now let merchants like yourself tell you their experience. Here are two letters from our file of correspondence from satisfied users of Wayne Pumps. The first is from a dealer in groceries and general merchandise. The other is from a hardware and furniture dealer.

W. H. Humphries & Son, of Big Spring, Georgia, say: "I would not take anything for my Wayne Pump and Tank. I am now doing big business with it and it also helps my other business."

The S. G. Catlett Hardware Company, of Dardanelle, Arkansas, writes: "While we are strictly in the hardware and furniture business, we feel that this pump has brought many a customer to our store who would not have come otherwise."

The profitable experience of these merchants can be your experience. A Wayne Pump on the curb in front of your store will give you a good return on gasoline sales alone. It will also bring trade to your door for other articles of your stock.

A few Good Reasons for the Outstanding Leadership of

Borden's St. Charles Milk

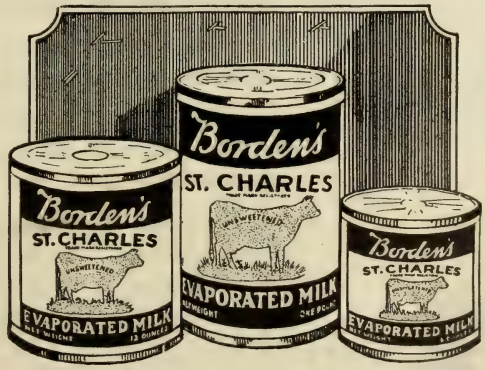
Borden's St. Charles Milk is the highest quality evaporated milk on the market.

Borden's St. Charles Milk is so rich that it whips like cream.

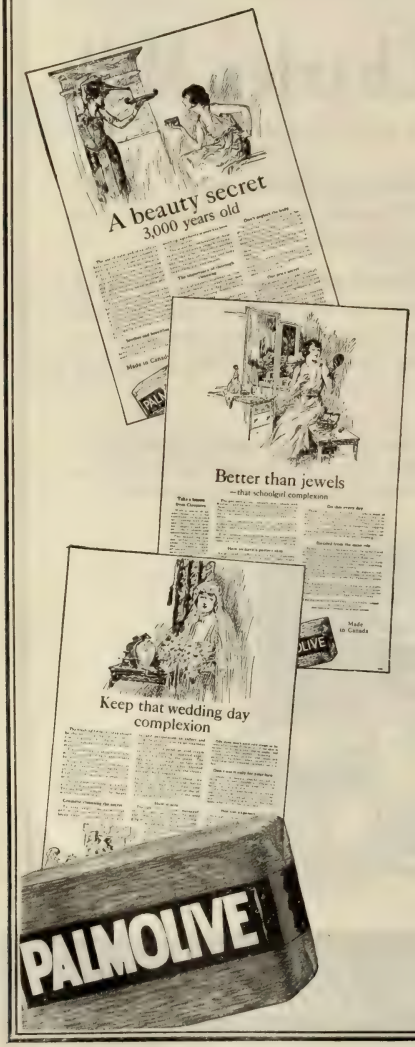


Borden's St. Charles Milk when used in cooking is actually so rich in butterfats that less butter is required.

Borden's St. Charles Milk is prepared under ideal sanitary conditions from Borden's selected and carefully inspected herds of healthy cows.

Borden's St. Charles Milk is just pure rich creamy pasteurized country milk with moisture removed.

Borden's St. Charles Milk is the safest milk for the children, and for the table while its great purity and richness make it the most economical for all cooking.



Canadians from coast to coast know these facts and Borden advertising is constantly jogging their memory.

A Powerful Sales Agent

Which Proclaims Quality

ADVERTISING would have no value if the statements made were not verified by quality. This supreme quality is the first requirement of a selling-campaign-in-print, for sales must repeat after first trial or the money spent is wasted.

The enormous demand for Palmolive results from first perfecting quality and then telling the world about it. We know that better, more satisfying soap can't be made, and every user agrees with us.

These users are largely attracted by the romantic Palmolive story which we tell in every popular publication in the Dominion. You see the forceful, appealing Palmolive advertisements in your home paper and your favorite national magazines and on billboards.

As you admire them, remember that your customers are reading and admiring them, too.

Palmolive is a Canadian product, with main factory and offices at Toronto and branches in Winnipeg and Montreal.

This expansion is the best proof of Palmolive popularity. Join the Palmolive procession and get in touch with a Palmolive salesman or ask your jobber today.

Quaker Talks

No. 2—Keep up your Sales of Package Rolled Oats.

"Oatmeal porridge" is the national breakfast dish from one end of Canada to the other. Even in warm weather, a dish of Quaker or Tillson's Oats is the regular, every-morning favorite of a great many people. Nothing else seems to fill the bill.

Quaker Oats, Tillson's Oats and Tillson's Aluminum Oats are steady sellers right through the summer. They are just the same and keep the same in warm weather as in cold—and they give the dealer the same quick, profitable turn-over.

The sealed packages not only insure clean, fresh, uniform quality; they save the dealer all the little losses that are always associated with bulk goods.

Quaker and Tillson's Package Oats save the loss in down-weight—the loss in wrapping paper, bags and string—the loss of time in weighing and parceling—and the inevitable loss of the last few pounds in the barrel that you cannot sell.

Hold your rolled oats trade right through the summer—make your usual profit—and enjoy the quick turn-over—that come with the well known, well advertised, highly regarded Quality Cereals that are milled in the largest cereal mill in the British Empire.

Every wholesaler in Canada, from coast to coast, will give you immediate delivery of Quaker Oats, Tillson's Oats and Tillson's Aluminum Oats at prices that insure you a good profit.

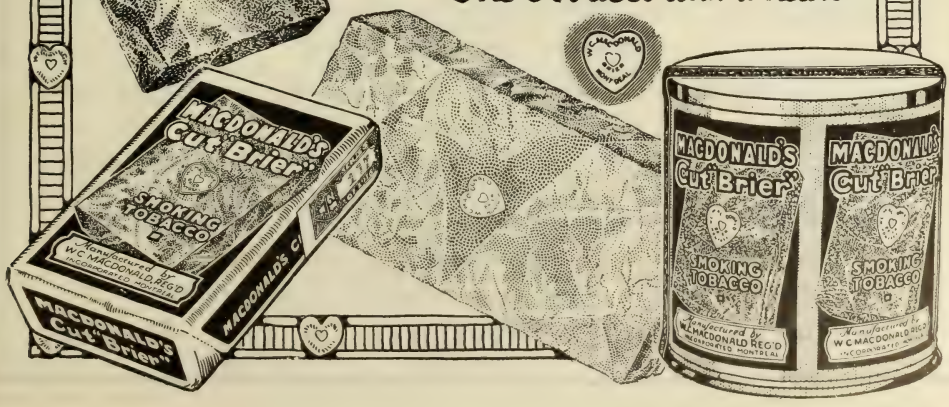
MACDONALD'S

Increased Demand Brings An Increase of Profit

As the result of over sixty years' leadership, aided by successful advertising, Macdonald's is in greater demand now than ever. It is now possible for the retailer to get larger returns from his stock of Macdonald's Tobaccos than from almost any other commodity on the market.

Because:



—the always generous Macdonald profit is increased as the turnover is speeded up.

—there is an extra profit in the 4 to 6 plugs over-run in each 10 lb. caddy.

—little or no sales-effort is required to move Macdonald's.

So keep your stock of Macdonald's well displayed, and see that the increased demand brings an increase of profit TO YOU.

Wholesalers' Expenses 11.5 per Cent

Operating Costs in the Wholesale Grocery Trade in 1921 as Tabulated From Reports Submitted by Both U.S. and Canadian Firms Indicate the Above Average—Higher Expense for Credits and Collections

OPERATING costs in the wholesale grocery business, as contained in the table on this page, will be interesting to retailers. According to the statement prepared by the Bureau of Business Research, Harvard University, 344 firms have furnished statements as to their business. While the majority of them are located in United States, A. C. Pyke, Secretary of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, told a representative of Canadian Grocer that a number of wholesale firms in the Dominion submitted their statements to the Bureau and are included in this analysis. However Mr. Pyke did not think that the average cost of doing business for Canadian firms would be quite as high as the average struck by the Bureau, from the statements submitted to them, namely, 11.5 per cent.

A Decline of 30 per cent.

In reporting on the operating expenses in the wholesale grocery business in 1921, the Bureau of Business Research says:

"The reports on the cost of doing business in the wholesale grocery trade in 1921 are particularly significant in that they furnish a picture of conditions in a year of generally severe business depression, during which problems of readjustment had to be faced that had not arisen for at least fifteen years prior to this time. For two hundred and twenty-nine firms that submitted fully comparable statements for both 1920 and 1921 the aggregate volume of sales showed a decline of 30 per cent.—from $495,879,000 in 1920 to $341,912,000 in 1921. Gross profit, in percentage of net sales, was greater in 1921 than in the preceding year; in 1920 the common figure for gross profit was lower than in any previous year for which records are available. This indicates that wholesale grocers generally took their inventory losses, occasioned by the heavy drop in prices, at the end of 1920. Despite the higher percentage of gross profit in 1921, the average net loss was greater in that year than in 1920. For all the firms reporting, the average net loss in 1921 was 1.9 per cent. of net sales, as compared to a common figure of 0.5 per cent. in 1920. This increase in net loss, even though gross profit was higher, resulted from the difficulties that were encountered in readjusting expenses to the falling-off in sales and the drop in prices. The common figure for total expense in 1921 was 11.5 per cent. as compared with a common figure of 9 per cent. in 1920. Practically every firm showed a higher percentage of expense for 1921 than for the preceding year.

The rate of stock-turn was lower in 1921 than in any previous year.

Higher Credit Expense

The effects of the crisis of 1920 on credits and collections became apparent in the reports for the year 1921, rather than in the year in which the crisis occurred. According to the reports received by the Bureau, in the wholesale grocery trade credit and collection expense was substantially higher in 1921 than in the preceding year, losses from bad debts also were somewhat higher in percentage of net sales, and the ratio of accounts and notes receivable to average monthly sales was greater. At the end of 1921, 73 per cent. of the firms had accounts and notes receivable greater than their average monthly sales; at the end of 1920 only 50 per cent. showed accounts and notes receivable greater than their average monthly sales. The ratio of accounts and notes payable to average monthly purchases, on the other hand, did not show any increase in 1921. The fall in prices served to release capital through a reduction in the amount tied up in merchandise inventories so that despite the increase in the ratio of receivables to sales, it was possible for most firms to avoid an increase in their indebtedness to their creditors.

The ratio of current assets to current liabilities tended to be higher at the end of 1921 than at the end of 1920. This indicates that the wholesalers generally improved their own credit position during this year even though the length of credit that they were extending to their customers was increased.

344 Reports Are Used

The total number of reports used in the preparation of this summary was three hundred and forty-four, with an aggregate volume of sales of $487,951,000. These firms were located in forty-four states and Canada. Of these firms two hundred and fifteen were located in cities with a population of less than 50,000; forty-nine were in cities of 50,000 to 99,000 population; sixty-eight in cities with a population from 100,000 to 749,000; and twelve were located in cities with over 750,000 population.

The net sales of these three hundred and forty-four firms in 1921 ranged from $127,000 to $16,680,000. In the appended table the firms are grouped according to their volume of sales in 1921. This indicates that there were sixty-six firms, for example, each of which had sales less than $500,000. In this table a comparison also is made of the number of firms in each group for the two hundred and twenty-nine firms that submitted fully comparable statements for both 1920 and 1921. Thus, out of the two hundred and twenty-nine firms reporting for both years, twenty had sales less than $500,000 in 1920 whereas thirty-seven had sales below that figure in 1921. In determining net sales for the tabulations in this bulletin, returns and allowances to customers, prepaid freight and express collected from customers, and cash discounts taken by customers were all deducted from gross sales. The table is as follows:—

Volume of Business in 1921

Operating Expenses in 1921

The cost of doing business is indicated by total expense. In accordance with these standard definitions, total expense includes not only the outlay for such items as office supplies and postage, salaries and commissions to salesforce, insurance and taxes, but also rent for office and warehouse whether owned or leased, a fair salary for the proprietor or partners, and interest both on borrowed capital and on the net investment in the business.

Operating expenses in the wholesale grocery business in 1921, (net sales—100 per cent.) are tabulated as follows:—

Total sales force	2.7 %
Advertising	0.05
Other selling	0.1
Total selling		2.9
Wages of receiving and shipping force	1.4
Packing cases and wrappings	0.06

Lowest Costs 6.5 per cent.

This table shows that the common figure for total expense was 11.5 per cent. of net sales in 1921. The lowest figure for total expense shown by any wholesale grocery firm for 1921 was 6.5 per cent. of net sales; the highest cost of doing business was 22.5 per cent. of net sales. The firm which reported this highest ratio suffered a reduction in net sales from $4,350,000 in 1920 to $1,438,000 in 1921. The rate of stock-turn of this firm fell from 7.5 times in 1920 to 3.3 times in 1921. Because of the heavy drop in sales, practically all the expenses were substantially higher in percentages of net sales for this firm in 1921 than in 1920.

As in previous years, total salesforce expense, which includes salaries, commissions, bonuses and travelling expense, was the largest single item in the cost of doing business in 1921. The common figure was 2.7 per cent. of net sales, the individual reports showing a range from a low figure of 0.9 per cent. to a high figure of 6.2 per cent. For advertising, several firms reported no expenditure. The highest figure for advertising was 1.5 per cent. of net sales in 1921. The common figure was 0.05 per cent. Other selling expense ranged from 0.01 per cent. to 1.59 per cent. with a common figure of 0.1 per cent. Wages of receiving and shipping force ranged from 0.3 per cent. to 3.4 per cent. of net sales, with a common figure of 1.4 per cent. Packing cases and wrappings ranged from 0.01 per cent. to 1.26 per cent., with a common figure of 0.06 per cent. Outward freight, express and cartage ranged from 0.01 per cent. to 3.1 per cent., with a common figure of 0.6 per cent. Executive salaries, which include the salaries of buyers because of the difficulty that has been experienced in separating buying salaries from management salaries, showed a low figure of 0.2 per cent. and a high figure of 3.4 per cent. of net sales. The common figure for this item was 1.1 per cent. Office salaries ranged from 0.3 per cent. to 3.1 per cent. with a common figure of 1.0 per cent. The lowest figure for office supplies and postage was 0.02 per cent. and the highest 0.63 per cent. with a common figure of 0.2 per cent. Telephone and telegraph ranged from 0.01 per cent. to 0.43 per cent. Credit and collection expense ranged from 0.01 per cent. to 0.59 per cent., and other buying and management from 0.01 per cent. to 1.15 per cent. of net sales.

Upkeep Expense High

Fixed charges and upkeep expense were especially high in percentage of net sales in 1921. The common figure for rent was 0.5 per cent., the individual reports showing a range from 0.12 per cent. to 2.18 per cent. For heat, light and power the lowest figure was 0.01 per cent. and the highest 0.61 per cent. Taxes, not including taxes on real estate or on income and profits, ranged from 0.01 per cent. to 1.92 per cent. Insurance, not including insurance on buildings, ranged from 0.02 per cent. to 1.26 per cent., repair of equipment from 0.01 per cent. to 0.71 per cent., depreciation of equipment from 0.01 per cent. to 0.88 per cent. of net sales.

Total interest, which includes interest both on money that is borrowed for use in the business and also interest on the net investment, ranged from 0.6 per cent. to 5.4 per cent. of net sales. This figure was checked with especial care by an examination of the financial statements submitted with the reports on the cost of doing business. The common figure for total interest was 1.9 per cent. of net sales in 1921.

Miscellaneous expense varied from 0.01 per cent. to 2.15 per cent., and losses from bad debts ranged from 0.01 per cent. to 3.75 per cent., with a common figure of 0.3 per cent.

Sugar Market Continues Strong With Another Advance of 25 Cents This Week

Two Refineries, Atlantic and St. Lawrence Withdraw From Canadian Market Owing to Heavy Demands for Export—Other Refiners Quote $7.25 Per Cwt. Montreal Basis

MONTREAL (Special).—This week opened with a very strong market in sugar. In New York, American and National refineries have withdrawn, while others are quoting $6.50 and $6.60 seaboard basis. Canadian refineries, Redpath and Acadia, have advanced their prices 25 cents, making the Montreal quotation $7.25. Atlantic prices were withdrawn last week, and St. Lawrence refinery withdrew theirs this week. In the raw market Cubas are now quoted at 3½c. c. & f. New York, at which price 27,000 bags were sold to the Federal Refinery for first of August shipment, 20,000 bags to the National Refinery for August delivery. Canadian refineries have bought 20,000 bags for July loading at 3.30c. f.o.b. Cuba, while some holders are asking 3.35c., at which figure some 25,000 bags were sold to operators. Six Centrals are closed now, with only fourteen operating.

Shipments to July 1

Weather is reported favorable and shipments continue to be very heavy. Up to July 1 shipments of new sugar were 2,377,510 tons, of which 362,011 tons were destined to United States Atlantic ports, the balance principally to Europe, some to the Orient and some to Canada.

Filling Back Orders

One of the officials of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries said to a Canadian Grocer representative, "We are so far behind in filling our export contracts that we find it necessary to temporarily turn all our attention towards meeting our obligations abroad." Still the price here continues to advance. There is no shortage of sugar locally, nor is there any indication that there will be. Wholesalers are well supplied and many retailers have fairly large reserve stocks on hand, which were bought when the market was at its low point.

Proof of the improvement in the sugar refining industry in Canada is given in the statement on production of the last six months, made by the Atlantic Sugar Refineries. The company has been working to full capacity for the past six months and with the improvement in the price of sugar is finding an improved outlook. From January 1 to June 30 of this year, the Atlantic Company has sold as much sugar as they did in the twelve months of 1921 and twice as much as they did in the corresponding six months of 1920. The average output in the period under review has been more than 1,200,000 pounds per day and so far they are continuing at that rate.

Adjusted Freight Rates Help

The recent changes in railroad rates by the Railway Commission restoring the arbitrary rates from St. John and Halifax to Port Arthur and points west will help the sugar refiners in the Maritime Provinces in meeting competition in the west. The traffic in sugar, however, at the present time does not appear to be going westward.

Is Worse Than Chain Competition

Problem of the Independent Grocer Giving Service of Credit and Delivery Who "Cuts" to Meet the Cash and Carry Stores is More Difficult Than the Chains, Says This Merchant

Eighth Article of Series on Chain Stores

"IT ISN'T the competition of the chains that is so much to be feared, as it is the competition of the man who is giving the service of credit and delivery, and at the same time is cutting prices to meet the cash and carry stores." That is the way an independent grocer expressed himself the other day, when asked how he was meeting the competition of the chains.

Loses the Transient

"We are doing a regular credit and delivery trade here," he continued, "but do not think that our family trade has been affected to any great extent by the coming into the town of the cash and carry stores. However we find that we do not get the same amount of transient and catch trade, since these cash stores opened. We are trying to overcome this by making a feature of certain lines of goods in window displays from time to time, using the windows constantly to attract people into the store. We believe we will be able to do a great deal in this way to get back the occasional customer that is now going to the 'chains.'

"We have not cut prices to meet the lower quotations on certain commodities, as offered by the cash grocers, and we do not intend to do so. The independent grocer who is giving credit, and delivering his goods, and at the same time is trying to meet the easier prices is bringing about his own ruin, and also making it difficult for the other fellow who gives the same service but who feels he should be paid for it. Such competition provides a much worse problem than does that of the out and out cash and carry stores."

Must Buy Carefully

"The independent grocer must be a very careful buyer in these times. The chains have been able to take advantage of special buying, because of purchases in large quantities. Independents have not been able to do this to the same extent. Consequently I think we should be very careful in buying, getting the best possible prices wherever they can be obtained. During a period of unsettled business conditions, bargains have been offered by some firms, who have wanted money right away, and grocers who desired to buy in large quantities could get special inducements. With business becoming more stabilized all the time, the number of such opportunities will not be as great, and advantages will be more or less equalized to all grocers.

Will Not Cut Prices

"We have not cut prices. Our store is conducted on a policy of service and quality goods. We have built up a reputation for handling only the best merchandise that can be bought, and the class of people who are regular customers in this store are largely persons who are not attracted by the offer of one or two staple lines at a little lower price than their regular grocer, but rather prefer to have their grocery supplies delivered, knowing that they are getting first-class quality. I believe there will always be a class of people who will demand service and quality, and the independent grocer, providing this, will have nothing to fear from the competition of cash and carry prices."

Getting Mail Order Business

Another merchant in this town declared that the cash and carry merchants were now getting the business that heretofore went to the mail order houses. "As we are situated in this town," he remarked, "we are close to two cities, and we have always had the competition of big stores in these places. People who used to shop in the city and through the mails are now buying from the chains."

This grocer claimed that he had been able to meet the prices of the cash and carry stores, and the way he had done it, was through a few of the grocers in the town clubbing together to buy certain staple lines. One merchant for instance would buy a carload of one line, and on receipt of the same would distribute it to other grocers who were sharing in it. "In this way we are able to buy at as low a price as the cash fellow," this grocer added. "He has to pay that cost of distributing to his several stores, has to have a truck to do it with, and consequently has overhead charges in a way perhaps that we haven't.

"Our turnover has not been seriously affected by the inroads of the chains. Our trade at the present time is showing good increase, and we do not feel that the presence of two chain and cash and carry stores in the town is hurting our trade in any pronounced material way."

Dried Apricot Tonnage Will Likely Be Less Than Last Season

While Crop is Heavier High Prices Are Being Paid By Canners and Green Fruit Shippers—A Small Portion of Dried Fruit Sold at 17½ to 27½c

SAN JOSE, CAL. — (Special)— Though the California apricot crop will be slightly larger than the one grown last year, the dried apricot tonnage during the coming season will probably be less, according to a statement issued by the California Prune and Apricot Growers' Association. Last year's dried tonnage of California apricots amounted to about 25,000,000 pounds.

The high prices being paid by the canners and green fruit shippers for this year's crop apricots is responsible fo the small tonnage of dried fruit which is expected, according to the growers' association. A heat wave during the height of the ripening season, however, would result in a much larger production of dried apricots than is now estimated, as hot weather would ripen the fruit so rapidly that it would be impossible for the canners to handle the fruit and would result in the growers drying their apricots.

Exceptionally high prices are being paid for future dried apricots owing to the prospects of a small production, according to H. G. Coykendall, general manager of the association.

The California Prune and Apricot Growers' Association, has temporarily withdrawn from the market, after selling a small proportion of the San Joaquin dried apricots which are first to be packed. Opening prices at which the association sold these apricots range from 17½ cents to 27½ cents per pound.

AN AUTO IN CANADA FOR EVERY 19 PEOPLE

Ottawa, Ont.—Canada's registration of motor vehicles for 1921 shows an increase of more than 50,000 over the previous year, according to official figures issued by the highways branch of the department of railways and canals. Last year there were 463,484 motor vehicles registered in the Dominion as against 415,268 the previous year. Total revenues from registration were $7,669,493.

On the 1921 census of 8,782,422 persons in the Dominion, there was one motor vehicle for every 19 persons in Canada.

Customer is Master, Salesman is Servant

Studying the Art of Salesmanship is Interesting and Profitable —Things a Man Should Know to Make a Good Salesman— Fine Points of Selling Have Been Frequently Neglected

ANY MAN who will, may become a good salesman. This is true, but it is not an easy thing to become a good salesman. Just how to make known what good salesmanship is would be a heavy task, but it may be taken for granted that a good salesman is among the "top-notchers."

Salesmanship is a profession. It can be learned just about as easily as law, medicine or any of the other professions, and it cannot be learned any easier. Like any other profession, it requires persistent and arduous application to master it, and to keep posted in its newest phases and developments.

These men are paid to be agreeable and polite; to dress in a manner befitting the establishment; to make friends for the store by their affability. The wares, or the prices placed upon them are expected to effect the sales.

Educated in Smaller Shops

On the other hand, many of the so-called salesmen are getting their education in the smaller shops under men who have no inclination or ability to instruct properly the apprentices under them.

The man who wants to become a good salesman must do so by his own efforts. If he is ambitious and willing to give the time to the study he may succeed in spite of all things that combine against his success. It all depends upon his own endeavors.

There are three things a man must know before he can become a good salesman. These are: Himself, his wares and his customers.

First of all, he must study himself. Very few men know themselves although most men think they do. They do not.

To become a successful salesman a man must be able to govern his thoughts and control his actions. He must have a good impression on his customer and he cannot do this if in any way his actions create in the mind of his customer the slightest degree of antagonism.

He must study his appearance and make it pleasing. He must study the very expressions of his face. He must be able to assume all the appearance of surprise, pain, joy, sympathy, respect and a host of other emotions.

He must be able to concentrate his thoughts upon the thing in hand. He must be able at will to exclude all other thoughts from his mind. If his thoughts are allowed to dwell upon outside subjects his magnetic force is divided and becomes greatly lessened in power if not negative in effect.

He must cultivate good taste and judgment. Good taste more especially in respect to his personal appearance and dress. A careworn face or one showing signs of dissipation has a marked negative effect upon his customers. So also has the appearance of lack of taste in his dress.

Personal Attributes

The pleasing man will have a cheerful countenance, a clear eye, a clean-shaven, well-groomed face and a neatness in dress that will at once place him, in the customer's opinion at least, among that class of men in whose company cultivated persons like to be seen.

He must cultivate good judgment in the choice of friends. Our likes and dislikes, if allowed to rule us without restraint, are sometimes prone to work evil for us. A salesman should never condescend to lower himself in his own estimation in choosing companions of a lower order of morality, culture or refinement. If he does he will eventually lower himself to their level in the sight of others, if not in reality.

Salesmanship is a profession and requires persistent study.

"Order Takers" must now train themselves in salesmanship in order to make progress.

Some of the necessary personal attributes.

Study wares, line up sales arguments and learn to present them in the most forceful manner.

The salesman must cultivate his voice. He must be able to modulate his tones to harmonize with his thoughts and with the feelings of his customers.

He must study correct modes of speech. He must study to put his thoughts into pleasing sentences. He must study to make his sentences produce logical arguments.

He must recognize the fact that he is the servant and that the customer is the master. He is at all times open to all sorts of senseless abuse, suspicion and discomfort at the hands of the public. He must learn to sink his feelings behind a stoical exterior and smile as pleasantly as if nothing had occurred to disturb his equanimity. It is in these situations that tactful control of himself will win a reward in the end.

The second proposition is important. He must study his wares. It is only the man who knows what he is selling that can reach above the average in sales.

The street vendor and itinerant peddler is usually a salesman of considerable ability. This is due in some measure to a knowledge of his wares. He knows the good points of the article he has for sale. He has learned by constant contact how to present these good points and to keep them to the front, to present them in such a way that they overshadow all the weak points.

Many men behind the counters not only fail to recognize the good points in the goods they have to sell, but see looming up largely before their mind the weaker points. A well-balanced mind would not allow this state of affairs.

Must Know His Customers

Lastly the salesman must know his customers. This is an easy task after he has mastered the story of himself. We are all human. All have, more or less, the same emotions and the same method of expressing them.

Psychological experts can read the human mind like an "open book," because they have learned to read the expressions of the face, the effects of the emotions on the face and physical form of man. The salesman must make almost as exhaustive a study of his customers as the professor of psychology does of mankind.

The art of control, which is recommended to the salesman, is practised by so few that he will have a chance to read the public with little effort. Once he knows the feelings of a customer towards his goods and himself he is in possession of the means of securing sales.

All this may seem formidable to the unpractised salesman, but rest assured that once this study is undertaken it will be continued for the fascinating disclosures that are being made every day. The study is both profitable and pleasing.

T. A. Clayton, Grocer at Centre Island, Toronto, Finds Biscuits Constitute One of His Best Selling Lines in the Summer Months —What Summer Residents at Toronto's Popular Resort Buy in Hot Months

"BISCUITS constitute one of the biggest sellers we have," T. A. Clayton, grocer on Manitou Road, Centre Island, Toronto, remarked the other day, when discussing summer business with a representative of Canadian Grocer. Mr. Clayton's store of course is solely a summer proposition. Centre Island is the summer residence of hundreds of Toronto people, who move across the bay early in the season and stay until late in the Autumn, going to and from business in the city every day. Mr. Clayton serves a large population. While many families live on this Island, it might be truly said that it is largely inhabited by business men and women, bachelors and bachelor girls who have small apartments and who are doing their own housekeeping. These people constitute a great buying public, and while they purchase in small quantities they are constant and regular customers.

Illustrating the store front of T. A. Clayton's store on Centre Island, Toronto Large quantities of fruits and vegetables are sold here every day.

30 Tins in Less Than a Week

"Biscuits are certainly a line that a trade such as this goes heavy on," Mr. Clayton continued. "Last Friday we got thirty tins of those biscuits, each tin running anywhere from five to ten pounds," he added, as he pointed to a row of tins, thus indicating the manufacturer. "They are all gone to-day (the following Thursday), and we just received thirty more tins a few minutes ago. We sell over four hundred dollars' worth of biscuits a month. Our customers are buying them all the time and we are continually ordering fresh supplies. From our standpoint they show a nice profit, and are easily handled.

"Naturally in a place such as this people are not buying large quantities of anything but they are buying often. We make a point of selling those lines that are particularly desired by a summer population. These include canned goods of all kinds, soups, fruits, vegetables, jams and marmalade. There is a marmalade," he remarked, taking a jar on the counter in his hand, "that is a big seller here. We got ten cases of it in the other day, and a big portion of it has already gone. We have sold more of it this season than any other. We also have the first shipment of this season's strawberry jam, put up by the same firm that makes this marmalade. We are pushing the sale of these lines for the reason that we have found that our customers who first tried them were so well pleased that we have continued to recommend them. We think they represent first-class quality, and we do not hesitate to suggest them with the result that there is an increasing demand."

Fresh fruits and vegetables loom large in the weekly turnover in Clayton's store, and a good deal of care is taken to give only the best. These lines are well displayed at the front. "Last week-end we sold more than thirty cases of tomatoes alone, to say nothing of all the other vegetables and fruits that were disposed of."

One side of the Clayton store is devoted to the sale of fresh meats. The grocery section really grew out of the butcher business that was the first to be established. Mr. Clayton for some years conducted a butcher trade in Toronto, but finding it impossible to manage the two satisfactorily sold his store in the city, and now devotes all his attention to his island trade. Adding groceries a few years ago, he finds that the sale of groceries and meats works so well together, the combination is decidedly worth while. One helps to sell the other and people appreciate the fact of being able to buy all supplies at the one place. Over 600 tons of ice were put in storage last winter, and many residents buy their supply at this store.

Mr. Clayton serves not only people at Centre Island, but the two adjoining summer colonies, known as Hanlan's and Ward's, are to a great extent supplied from this store. Order takers go out every morning soliciting, different days being allotted to the various sections. Goods are delivered at certain times, and people place their orders accordingly.

"The meat department certainly has built the grocery trade," Mr. Clayton remarked. "The latter now is on a big scale, and I think is equally as good as the meats. We turn over large quantities of meats however. Cooked meats of course are much in demand. Many sales are made in less than pound lots, but we cut up on an average from three to five hams every day, in addition to tongues and other cooked varieties." Sales of bacon too are heavy. Mr. Clayton has a glass enclosed counter for displaying meats, and when people are waiting to be served, and it seems that there is always a "rush" in this store, they have an opportunity to look about for suggestions, to help them in their purchases. A meat slicer stands convenient to the counter. Speaking of it, Mr. Clayton remarked that it was absolutely essential in his business as he could not handle the heavy volume of trade fast enough without it.

Good Equipment Helps

Equipment of a kind to facilitate service and provide for the proper protection of stock, at the same time displaying goods well, is everywhere to be found. Pivoted bins, silent salesmen, glass enclosed counter for meats, scales conveniently situated for quick access, are all to be found in this store.

Should Have Charged Double

Smart and glib of speech, he had found the townspeople of Little Litville very simple folk and easy game.

He had obtained credit right and left, and then he had gently flown away without disturbing the dust or the pile of unpaid bills in his lodgings.

"By gosh!" muttered Wilkins, the grocer, who was hard hit by the defaulter. "If I'd known he didn't intend paying, I'd have charged him double, I would!"

Crop Outlook Favorable

A HOPEFUL outlook on the crop situation in Western Canada is broadcasted in the third crop report of the Manitoba Free Press published in Winnipeg in its July 4 issue. In a detailed statement covering the three Prairie Provinces the report reviews the three weeks that have passed since the last analysis on June 13. There has been some damage and deterioration during this time from drought, insects or hail, but it is pointed out that the total damage does not appear large or serious, and judging from conditions as most thoroughly covered in this report, Western Canada is promised more than an average crop, the outlook on the whole being much brighter than a year ago.

In Manitoba, wheat may be said to be 90 per cent. in the shot blade and 50 per cent. in head. There appears to be sufficient moisture for the time being and no damage from drought is reported. Some harm has been done by hail, but there has been no frost damage since the last report. However, indications are on the whole excellent and the people are optimistic. In Saskatchewan the crops are a week or ten days later than in Manitoba. Wheat is reported about 60 per cent. in shot blade, with very little actually in head. Alberta has not made the favorable progress that was expected, but present conditions, with no further drawbacks, give promise of average crops.

With the likelihood of a fairly bountiful harvest in Western Canada, the general effect of it will be to stimulate trade, bringing about a return of prosperity to the West, and re-establishing business on an altogether better and more stable basis than ever before.

Getting the Customer's View Point

PUTTING yourself in the customer's place is a thing that a merchant or a clerk can very often do with a good deal of advantage to himself. Getting the customer's viewpoint will help one to increase service to the customer, and will result in cementing more closely the proper relationship that should exist between merchant and customer.

Realizing that he is the servant and the customer is the master of the situation, the merchant must be prepared to hear criticism and perhaps complaints, in a patient manner, and at times be open to a certain amount of senseless abuse, suspicion and discomfort at the hands of the public. He must learn to sink his feelings behind a stoical exterior and smile as pleasantly as if nothing had occurred to disturb his equanimity. A tactful control will win its own reward.

The merchant or clerk who makes a study of his customers will be greatly assisted in his salesmanship. At once he knows the particular likes and dislikes of his buying public, that is, of his individual customers, his selling will be made very much easier. Knowing his goods and knowing his customers, the salesman is well equipped to put across sales.

In an article to be found on another page in this issue the art of salesmanship is discussed in an interesting way, and is worthy of the attention of the readers of this paper.

Licenses for Cheque Tax

MERCHANTS and business people generally will be interested in the circular that has been issued by the Department of Customs and Excise at Ottawa, relative to the increased stamp tax that comes into force on August the first. As amended on June 12, and previously referred to in these pages the stamp tax on cheques is now two cents for every unit of $50 up to $5,000, making the maximum tax $2.

According to the circular, embossed cheques will be issued to licensees subject to certain conditions. A licensee, for instance, will be required to keep an account in which shall be entered at the time each cheque is drawn particulars of the cheque, showing the serial number, the date of issue, the amount and sum due as excise tax thereon. A separate account, it is pointed out, should be kept for each bank or branch of a bank on which the licensee draws cheques. On or before the fifth day of each month the licensee must forward to the government the amount of the tax on all cheques for the preceding month. Embossed cheques cannot be cashed if drawn by other than the licensee.

The idea of the government appears to be that of convenience for merchants and business concerns. By the issuance of licenses people writing a large number of cheques in the conduct of their business will be saved the bother of affixing stamps to each one. Keeping monthly account of the amount expended in cheque taxes, and paying it at a fixed date each month, adherence to the stamp tax law will be greatly facilitated.

Nothing is said of any compulsion on the part of individuals to take out these licenses, and it would seem that doing so is entirely optional. According to a banking authority it is merely to make it easier for the large user of cheques, to carry out the new regulation. Retailers using a considerable number of cheques in the course of a month, it would seem, would be benefited by the license system. In this way they would know definitely their expense in this regard and be able to figure it accurately in the cost of doing business.

Editorials in Brief

Put speed into the slow sellers via your windows and display tables.

Little attentions to little children produce big profits in time.

The cheapest thing the salespeople of the store can offer customers is courtesy, and it is the best also.

The grocer who has added ice cream to the lines he carries is reaping the benefit these days in extra profits. Increasingly large is the number of retail grocers who are finding ice cream a profitable sideline.

The merchant who is watching his stock carefully from month to month will not be forced to have special sales at "cut" prices in order to get rid of dead stuff. Slow moving lines should not be allowed to accumulate but special selling effort should be directed to their turnover.

Should Branch Store Pay This Expense?

Ontario Merchant Operating a Main Store With Branches Brings Up Interesting Question—What Percentage Should Be Charged a Branch Store for Goods and Service from the Main One

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

MY PRESENT correspondent's letter is self-explanatory:

Ontario, May 30, 1922.

Dear Mr. Johnson:—We have been much interested in your articles in the Canadian Grocer and greatly appreciate your common-sense handling of the many financial problems that retail merchants have to contend with. We know of no better way of expressing our appreciation than by laying before you a fresh supply of such problems. So we enclose a few items containing points on which we would be glad to have your opinions.

P. S. Now that we have written them we seem to have a rather long list, but possibly they can be divided up and dealt with in different issues if we are taking up too much space for treatment in one issue.

Yours————

Inasmuch as the questions attached to my friend's letter run into such detail that I have divided them into six major subdivisions, each covering a distinct question, my readers may be prepared to read attempted solutions for at least three numbers. But the stuff is good, so here goes:

We have a branch store about six miles from the main store. Stock there is largely supplied from main store, though some groceries are shipped there direct. In case of direct shipments, branch pays freight but we pay invoices. Goods supplied by main store to branch are charged at invoice price, plus six per cent. which we add to cost of all goods when marking them: 1½ per cent. to cover sales tax and 4½ per cent. allowed for freight charges. We charge branch with goods delivered direct at invoice price, goods from main store at invoice price, as stated, and credit it with cash remitted to us. Is this a fair deal to main store? All goods in question are brought to main store from depot on our truck, checked in and marked and, when needed by branch, they are again handled by our staff, invoiced to branch and delivered by truck. This service brings no revenue to main store, except, of course, the net gain from branch at end of year's business. What percentage should we charge the branch for this service, on goods from main store, or what proportion of cost of truck and driver's wages should be charged?

Nobody Gets Anything for Nothing

The answer looks rather simple. Nobody anywhere gets anything for nothing. Even if he does not pay directly himself, somebody must pay. Two plus two makes four. Therefore the work done as described is paid for. Wages are paid, truck expense is paid, all time and material expenditure is paid. It must come back from the branch in money or it stands as a loss to parent store. There is no other way out!

If that is conceded as logical, the only question is: How much? That question should not be so hard to determine, it seems to me. If this arrangement has been in vogue for any considerable time, it should be fairly easy to ascertain what the cost of the six mile trip to and from the branch actually is, counting driver's time and incidental expenses, figuring mileage against the truck, plus time taken marking and checking goods in and handling them out. All this figured against the value of goods delivered will yield the percentage of cost of all this service.

If things are faced out this way—and I can see no other proper or logical course—we may run against some serious figures. Here is the main store performing for the branch the function of a grocery jobber in relation to a considerable proportion of its requirements—just what proportion not being stated. As concerns that proportion, therefore, it is proper to calculate expenses on the wholesale grocer's basis, at least. Probably it would be correct to calculate more, because here the main store has only one wholesale customer, distant six miles, to whom it supplies only a portion of its goods. Deliveries cannot be made to others along the route so cost of delivery cannot be spread over many. Probably there is often only a partial load—and that makes things extra expensive.

According to Harvard's researches, it cost jobbers an average of 9.5 per cent. in 1916 and 9.1 per cent. in 1919. The lower figure undoubtedly is accounted for by the peak values which prevailed in 1919, for actual money outlay for expenses was surely much greater then than in 1916. The extreme figure in 1917 was 14.71 per cent. and, in 1919, that was 13.74 per cent., apparently substantiating my deduction.

What Does the Service Cost?

Consider all the circumstances above detailed and I think you will agree that probably the cost of that service rendered to the branch store is fully 10 per cent. of the value of the goods handled to it. I feel rather sure that close investigation will reveal a higher cost. It occurs to me that this service must be rendered in addition to the jobbers' service—for most of the supplies for the main store must first come from a jobber—so here is a duplication of expense without a corresponding benefit, therefore plain waste.

It is a ticklish business to handle a branch store. The handling must be thought out along logical lines, for it is very easy to run up expenses that have not been foreseen—"little things" that are not supposed to "count." Then some day we face an aggregate of services, such as we have in this case, which pile up a prohibitive burden. It seems to stand to reason that the branch cannot stagger under an additional expense of 10 per cent. on any portion of its goods—yet the main store cannot render this service free.

The way out, it seems to me, is to keep the two establishments as separate as if they were individually owned, except only as to such benefits as may readily accrue from unified management and buying power—although this last is a factor too often much overrated. If there be some special items which it is not feasible or desirable to carry regularly in both places, for which there is a limited yet important demand, small lots thereof can be sent by mail to the branch.

But if I have not correctly appraised this situation, I shall be glad to have further light and try again to solve the question.

Accounting Problems on Unprofitable Goods

We keep the following books: Purchase book, cash book, bill book, journal and ledger. In our merchandise sales we enter as sales the goods turned over at cost to the branch store. Should these items handled and delivered at cost be included in our annual turnover? Handling these goods at cost materially lessens our percentage of profit on the whole, and also lessens the percentage of expenses on sales.

That seems to be the only logical method. You handle the goods. You pay for the handling. You get no profit on them. Those are the facts, and the primary function of accounting is to reveal facts. If accounting reveals facts which are unpleasant and which operate to our disadvantage it has performed the most valuable possible service. Then we are prepared by accurate knowledge to devise remedies. There is never any nourishment in blinking facts.

Is annual turnover estimated on purchases or sales, and how should

Will Likely Appeal Judgment in the Wholesalers' Case

Toronto July 12.—It is understood that the judgment of Mr. Justice Orde, in the wholesale grocers' case rendered a fortnight ago, will be appealed. Canadian Grocer is creditably informed that in all probability an appeal will be entered. The fact that the court holidays are in progress during July and August extends the time in which to make the appeal. Where ordnarily an appeal would have to be entered within fourteen days the expiration coming in the holiday period means that it is not necessary to enter it before September.

As announced in these pages in June 30 issue, Mr. Justice Orde ruled that the Attorney-General had no power to institute a civil action against the wholesale grocers and certain manufacturers, alleging an unlawful trade combination.

Delivery Boys Can Often Sell Goods As They Deliver

Montreal.—A local retail grocer has a plan by which he makes his delivery boys advertise his business and a few particular lines. It is a good plan and helps build sales, particularly of fresh fruit and vegetables that are perishable lines and have to be moved quickly.

This grocer coaches his delivery boys every day on advertising a certain line which the store wishes to push. Then when through the day the boy delivers some parcels to a house he simply says, "We have some splendid strawberries in to-day. The price is 18 cents a box. If you would like some I will bring them to you on the next delivery, or he may use the same sales talk to sell cucumbers, tomatoes, cherries or what not.

The advertising, coming as it does from the delivery boy carries a particular selling force, for it is quite unexpected. The customer is more impressed on hearing the merits of the goods from this quarter than if it came from the grocer himself or his clerks, whom she expects to laud the offerings. In this way additional sales may be easily made by one who is not counted on the sales force of the store.

This idea has worked out splendidly for this grocer. He has made many extra sales, partcularly of strawberries, but he does not limit the delivery man's advertising to strawberries. Another idea is to instruct the delivery man to ask each customer to whom he delivers goods if there is anything else required, at the same time stressing the fact that it is no trouble to make another delivery later. This too will bring extra business for often a customer thinks of something she has neglected to order. If this item is left over till another time it may be forgotten or go to another merchant.

Pure Food Building At Ottawa Fair Is Being Improved

Ottawa, July 10.—More than $9,000 is being expended this summer in repairing and improving the Pure Food Building, Lansdowne Park, the Retail Grocers' Association was informed by A. S. Moreland at its regular meeting the other evening. Mr. Moreland stated that most of the booth space in the building had already been sold out.

The petition being circulated among grocers of the city advocating closing stores on Wednesday afternoons during June, July and August is meeting with a ready response. When 75 per cent. of the grocers have signed the petition the matter will be placed before city council seeking to make closing compulsory.

Government Will Issue Embossed Cheques To Persons Taking Out Licenses

In Connection With Increased Stamp Tax on Cheques Which Comes Into Effect on August First, the Government Issues Important Circular, Relative to Applications for Licenses

OTTAWA, July 12. (Special).—Valuable information regarding the operation and enforcement of the stamp tax, which becomes effective on August 1, this year, is contained in a circular just issued by the Department of Customs and Excise to the collectors of that department.

"It is proposed to levy two cents per unit of $50. The tax as amended on June 12 provides for a graduated tax up to $5,000, which would mean a tax of $2. That will be the maximum tax. The large proportion of the cheques of the country are $50 or less, and this will remain as at present at two cents."

Securing a License

The circular issued under the direction of George W. Taylor, Assistant Commissioner of Customs and Excise, relates to the application for a license: "There shall be forwarded with the application for a license a requisition (Form E., 159) for the numbers of the embossed cheques required by the licensee, together with a certified cheque, by way of deposit, payable to the Receiver-General for an amount equivalent to the estimated tax as per assertions 1 (A) and 1 (C) on application for license plus 25 per cent. The commissioner may at any time require a larger deposit."

Cheques will be embossed and issued to a licensee subject to certain conditions most of which are as follows: "A licensee shall keep an account in which shall be entered at the time each cheque is drawn particulars of the cheque, showing the serial number, the date of issue, the amount and the sum due as excise tax thereon. A separate account shall be kept for each bank or branch of a bank on which the licensee draws cheques. On or before the fifth day of each month the licensee shall forward through the Collector of Customs and Excise at the port through which the license was obtained to the commissioner the account or accounts, as the case may be, for the preceding month, verified by the statutory declaration of the licensee, and accompanied by a certified cheque, payable to the Receiver-General, for the total sum of tax shown as accrued by said account or accounts; and all bank statements of cheques debited to the licensee's account and all relevant books of account of the licensee shall be open to inspection and audit, for the purpose of these regulations, by officers of the Department of Customs and Excise, and such audit shall be made by officers of the department at such times as are deemed necessary.

"Each embossed cheque shall have printed or lithographed on it, in a prominent manner, the name of the licensee, the number of the license and the name of the bank on which the cheque is to be drawn; and no person other than the licensee whose name is so printed or lithographed shall draw such cheque, and no bank shall pay an embossed cheque drawn by any person other than the licensee whose name is so printed or lithographed, or on which the license number does not appear.

"In the event of a licensee abandoning his license, there may be repaid to him the amount of his deposit in excess of the amount payable in respect of the stamp tax on all embossed cheques issued by him, less the cost of embossing and transportation of that portion of unused cheques remaining on hand, and the unused cheques must be returned to the commissioner. If a license is cancelled for a violation of any of the provisions of the Special War Revenue Act and amendments, or of these regulations, or for any other reason, no portion of the deposit will be repaid to the licensee, and he shall be liable for any further amount payable by him in respect of stamp tax on embossed cheques which he has issued, and he shall return to the commissioner all un-issued embossed cheques.

Forwarding Blank Cheques

"The blank cheques must be forwarded to the American Bank Note Company, Ottawa, who must be advised by the shipper as to the quantity and description of blank cheques in the consignment, the outer covering of the parcel being also marked to indicate the name and address of the shipper. Packages the gross weight of which exceeds 90 pounds, if shipped from Montreal; 60 pounds if shipped from Toronto, or 40 pounds if shipped from Winnipeg, must be forwarded by freight. Under these weights shipment must be made by express. From each of the three places mentioned the parcels are to be forwarded by Canadian Government Railways or Canadian National Express (as the case may be), charges collect."

In this connection it is pointed out that there will be no expense to the licensee for the embossing itself, provided all the conditions stipulated in the circular are complied with.

Clause 24 refers to the conditions of refund: "Refund of excise tax may be allowed on embossed cheques returned to the department, when it is established to the satisfaction of the commissioner that the cheques, although drawn, were for some valid reason never negotiated, but on which the excise tax has been paid. Minimum amount of tax for which a refund will be allowed under this section shall be $5."

Letters To The Editor

"THE PARTICULAR GROCER"

Victoria, B.C. July 3, 1922

The Canadian Grocer, Toronto.

Dear Sir:

I am paying a visit to the above city and during my wanderings around I came across a good grocery concern. He advertised himself as a particular grocer, which I thought was a good stunt. The words were combined with his name. I thought it was one of the best ads. I had seen. It was painted in one line on his window as follows:—

"James Adam, Particular Grocer."

What do you think of this?

Yours truly,

APRICOT CROP WORTH $4,000,000

More than $4,000,000 will have been returned to California apricot growers for their 1921 crop of dried apricots when final payments to the growers are completed by the California Prune & Apricot Growers' Association. The prices paid during the past season ranged from 11/1-3c. to 23½c., according to size and quality. The average price paid to growers was slightly more than 16½c. Though the 1921 apricot was far below normal, there was a normal production of dried apricots, owing to the fact that canners put up only a very small amount of fruit, due to the large holdover of 1921 crop apricots they had on their hands in the summer of 1921 as a result of the business depression during the fall and winter of 1920 and 1921. Where in ordinary years only 25 to 30 per cent. of the California apricot crop is dried, more than 50 per cent. of the 1921 crop was dried by the growers.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE feature of the Canadian markets in grocery commodities this week is the advance in sugar by Canadian refiners. Two refiners announce an increase of 25 cents per cwt., in the price of sugar, and another refiner has withdrawn from this market making two that are not quoting prices. The reason for this withdrawal is the fact that export orders are receiving all their attention. The New York sugar market is gaining strength, and two of the large refiners there have withdrawn their prices, while others are quoting $6.50 and $6.60 seaboard basis. The situation generally is stronger and Cubas this week were quoted at 3½c c. & f. New York, at which figure one U.S. refinery bought 27,000 bags for first of August shipment and another bought 20,000 bags.

The quotation of Canadian refiners, Montreal basis, is now $7.25.

Markets generally speaking apart from sugar are without any changes of note this week. Movement is on the whole very good, although buying is not heavy. Cereals are moving in good volume with quotations steady. Teas are still very strong, and some dealers are quoting higher prices on some of the lower grade teas this week. Canned goods are in fair demand, and the new pack of canned strawberries is offered this week. The rice market is very quiet, and dealers report little movement. Domestic fruits and vegetables are now arriving on the various markets in abundance, and prices are showing easier levels.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, July 13.—The grocery market is quiet this week with limited buying and a steady tone to prices pretty well throughout the market. Sugar is strong with further advances in raw sugar and a 25 cent advance in the price of refined. Two refineries are now off the market. The buying of canned goods is limited and the trade is looking forward to lower prices on the new pack. In the meantime prices on spot stocks stand firm. The spice market shows more activity with a stronger tone on account of an increased demand for the preserving season. The coffee market is quiet and shows no change. Tea is steady in price with a little higher quotation on the new Japan teas than was expected. Package and bulk salt is slightly lower in price. The feature of the dried fruit market is the downward tendency in raisins and figs with bumper crops reported. Currants are strong and evaporated apples show a weakness with a decline of 1 cent. per lb. French walnuts show an advance in price with the exchange strengthening up and a higher market value for the nuts. The cereal market is unchanged with only a limited demand.

COFFEE PRICES STEADY

Montreal.

The coffee market shows no change. Prices are steady and trade is a little dull. Importers state that according to indication the prices on the new crop will be about at the same level as present stocks.

CANNED GOODS—The market for stocks of canned goods is strong since local holdings have been pretty well cleaned up. Buying is dull since retailers are endeavoring to unload all their stocks so as to be able to enter upon the new market with a clean sheet. Everywhere the opinion is expressed that prices on the new pack will be lower than on the old. Early June peas show a slight advance in price and tomatoes are strong. Imported French peas will be higher in price however since the crop has been poor and is backward.

RAISINS AND FIGS LOWER

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS—Reports coming to the market of big crops of sultana raisins and figs feature the dried fruits market. Smyrna reports a bumper crop of figs and there is every indication of much lower prices this year. Local importers admit that prices on raisins and figs will be lower this year than last. While some importers have made quotations on the new crop, no prices have been issued yet by sources which are regarded as the most reliable barometers of the market. The current market in London shows a stronger tone but there is no change in local prices. Dried apples show a weakness with a drop of 1¼ cents in price but wholesale grocers do not yet show the declines.

MOLASSES MARKET STRONG

Montreal.

MOLASSES—The molasses market stands in a strong position after the recent two advances, which brought the price up to 6 cents per gallon. The raw sugar market shows stronger tendencies and this has an important bearing on the molasses market. Influences bearing on the molasses price are entirely outside this market and therefore it is hard to make any definite prediction as to the trend of prices.

FRENCH WALNUTS HIGHER

Montreal.

NUTS—The feature of the nut market is the advance in prices of French walnuts. Market values have been low in the past few weeks on account of the drop in value of the French franc. This alone was accountable for the lower prices on walnuts but since the exchange shows improvement and the walnut market itself has advanced, import prices show a marked increase. Local buying also shows improvement with a stronger tone to the market. Other nuts are steady in price with a quiet market.

SALT PRICES LOWER

Montreal.

SALTS—Lower prices are quoted on salts this week. Windsor Table salt in 2 lb. packages is reduced to $7.55 a barrel plus cartage for the styles of 140 packets. Regal table salts in cartons reduced to $1.45 per doz. or $2.60 per case. Dairy salt in barrels is quoted at $3.60.

SPICE MARKET MORE ACTIVE

Montreal.

SPICES—Advice from primary market shows that seasonal needs are in some ways broader than were expected, particularly in seeds, all spice and a few other grades. The demand has been fairly heavy and prospects for a good preserving season and prices show a stronger tone. There are however, no changes in the wholesale quotations. There is a firmer feeling in black peppers, because of the evident approach of the finish of Malaber arrivals, and the steady shrinkage in the Lampong supply.

PACKAGE CHEESE HIGHER

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS—The feature of the package goods market is the reduction in the price of package salt. Regal table salt is now quoted at $1.45 a dozen. In case lots the price is $2.60. Due to the higher price on Canadian cheese Kraft Maclaren Cheese Co., have advanced their prices, making the Canadian Cheese Loaf 30c per lb.

SUGAR MARKKET STILL STRONGER

Montreal.

SUGAR—The sugar market still stands in a strong position. Prices have recently advanced and only two refineries in Montreal are now quoting. Both the Atlantic and the St. Lawrence sugar refineries have withdrawn officially from this market and are not quoting any price. The other two are quoting $7.25 a 100 pounds. The retail trade feel that the market is due for still another advance but expects that 8 cents will be the peak of the price.

TEA PRICES STEADY

Montreal.

TEAS—There is no change in the condition of the tea market. Japan teas are a little higher in price than was predicted a few months ago. Their level is about that of last year. It is expected however that the second crop will be slightly easier in price. Ceylon teas are firm with a fair demand. Most retailers are fairly well stocked with black teas since there was a good warning prior to the advance in price.

PLENTY OF FRESH FRUIT

Montreal.

FRUITS—There is an abundant supply on this market with prices running much lower than they did last year. Fruit dealers report an over supply of canteloupes on the market and prices are easy. Strawberries are practically finished. A few cars of New Brunswick berries came to the market early this week but the price was high. Raspberries vary considerably in price but run from 30 to 35c a qt. Cherries are in good supply, quoted at 65c to 75c a basket.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, July 12.—An advance is reported in the market for sugar this week, and another refiner has withdrawn his price. The quotation, Toronto basis, is now $7.59 per cwt. The sugar market is generally very strong. Cereals both bulk and the package lines are moving in good volume, prices remaining firm and unchanged as compared with a week ago. In canned goods, the new pack of canned strawberries is quoted this week, twos being offered at $3.50. Teas continue in a strong market with higher prices quoted on some of the lower grades. Dried fruits are steady, with demand inclined to be fairly active for immediate requirements. Domestic fruits and vegetables are arriving in fairly heavy volume, and prices in some instances are lower.

CANNED GOODS—New pack of canned strawberries in heavy syrup, twos, are quoted this week, and the price shows easier levels as compared with previous quotations on the old pack. The new price is $3.50. Peas are now being packed but quotations on the new crop are yet available. Standard peas, old crop are quoted somewhat easier this week, one wholesaler offering them at $1.75 per doz. As announced last week owing to the light pack of lobsters this season, the market is very strong, and sales are being made only in small lots. The quotation is $4.90 per doz. for the half pounds and from $2.90 to $3.25 for the quarters.

COFFEE SITUATION STRONG

Toronto.

COFFEE—Spot quotations on coffee show no change as compared with a week ago. The market at primary centres is inclined to be strong, and the tendency is decidedly towards higher levels. This condition is reflected in a strong spot situation although prices to the trade are yet unaffected. Stronger values in the near future would not be entirely unexpected.

MAKING A FEATURE OF LINES THAT GO WELL DURING THE HOT WEATHER

Illustrating how Jos. E. Morrissette, in Montreal, recently dressed his window to boost the sale of summer specials.

Refrigerator Counters Are Silent Salesmen With a Good Selling Argument

Morris Abramson, Montreal, Has Refrigerator Counter in His Window and it Sells—"Is Not Hard on Ice and Easily Pays for Upkeep," Says the Proprietor

MONTREAL (Special). — Particularly during the hot summer weather, there is perhaps no piece of equipment in a grocery store that will show more definite results than a refrigerator counter. Morris Abramson has put a small one in the window of his new store at the corner of Fort and St. Catherine Streets, Montreal. This piece of equipment takes up the whole of one of the windows, save for a strip at the front which is used to display bulk and package teas.

Brings Extra Business

But Mr. Abramson assures Canadian Grocer that this case easily pays for the space it occupies and the ice it consumes in a day. Three sides of this case and the top are of glass but the whole is air-tight with an air space between the two thicknesses of glass. In the top section of the case are a number of blocks of ice upon which he displays lettuce, fresh vegetables and fruits. Below are trays of fresh meats, jellied and cooked meats and bacon.

An Attraction

The display itself is truly attractive and invites customers to the store. It speaks of coolness and cleanliness. It is a silent salesman that is continually on duty and irresistibly puts its sales arguments before every passerby who sees it. There is no limit to the variety of lines that can be made a feature in such a display case.

Not Hard on Ice

Mr. Abramson says that the case is not extravagant with ice. One filling of four blocks will last well over the day. "Yet even if it were," said the proprietor, "it would easily pay for itself for it has not only shown a big increase in the sale of cooked meats and vegetables but has brought many new customers into my store. It is my fault then if I cannot sell them. But I do and the case is a great boon to the business."

receipts from branch store come into this?

Turnover can be figured accurately either on the basis of cost of merchandise or on sale values. The only thing to be sure of is that both ends of the problem are reduced to the same common denomination. For example: A merchant does a hundred thousand dollars business on a stock which averages $10,000. It is a common error for him to believe and state that he is turning his stock ten times. He forgets that his sales records are based on selling price values while his stock is taken at cost or replacement value—wholesale.

To arrive at the true figure, he must either add to his stock of $10,000 enough to put it on its selling basis, or reduce his sales of $100,000 to cost. Say his average margin is 17 per cent. Take 17 per cent. from $100,000 and you have $83,000 left. That in turn being divided by $10,000, you find a turnover of 8.3. It shows that the man who loosely says ten times, is fooling himself to the extent of 1.7 times: and that is plenty to make him show a loss where he might otherwise confidently look for a profit.

Or you may take the proper average mark-up to yield 17 per cent. margin on the $10,000 stock. That will give you a selling value of $12,048.19 plus. Divide $100,000 by that and you will have 8.3 and a fraction—because of the fraction indicated by "plus." Or multiply it by 8.3 and you will get $99.999.97 plus. That proves conclusively that our figure of 8.3 is correct for turnover in this case.

Do Not Confuse Turnover and Volume

There is a tendency to confuse turnover with volume. Volume is more nearly synonymous with sales than with turnover. For example: A man may do a given business one year on a given stock. He may increase his sales next year by a third but to do it he may carry 60 per cent. more stock. In this case, his volume has grown but his turnover has been reduced.

It seems to me that you must keep receipts from branch store separate. In fact, you have to do it as an intermediate step anyway. Best way is to keep a separate account with store No. 2, say, charging it with all goods delivered to it and crediting it will all receipts from it.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, July 5.—The produce and provision market shows a stronger and steadier tone this week. The butter market, however, shows weakness with a like feeling in cheese which follows in sympathy with the trend of butter. There are no changes however in wholesale prices. The egg market shows a stronger tone with evidence that points towards higher values. The prices on light weight hogs stand steady and packers predict a firm market throughout the summer. The demand for smoked and cooked meats shows improvement and prices are well maintained. There is no change in the lard market.

BUTTER MARKET EASIER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—The feature of the butter market is the more pronounced weakness that prevailed in the situation, owing to a further increase in the offerings, more so to the different attitude on the part of English buyers with regard to securing supplies. Consequently the volume of business was much more than the previous week and receipts here have been larger. There is a decidedly easy feeling in the butter market the wholesale prices are so far unchanged.

STRONGER TONE TO EGGS

Montreal.

EGGS.—The feature of the egg market is the improved demand for export to England. Cable advices from leading English centres have been stronger and the prospects for the export trade here for fall shipments are more promising. There has been no important change in the condition of the local market. Prices have been fully maintained with supplies coming forward amply to meet immediate requirements but according to advices from producing centres the competition for the offerings has been keener than usual, which gives a firmer tone to the market.

The supplies coming to the market are not heavy and the demand for smoked meats and bacon shows improvement which tends to hold prices at the present levels. The beef market is a little easier however but there is no radical change in wholesale prices.

MAKING SURE OF IT

A salesman walked into a country grocery store one day when business was quiet and soon a rather animated converation was going on. Finally the grocer pointed out a Swedish looking fellow who was dozing in a corner and told the salesman that the Swede could eat ten quarts of oysters inside of fifteen minutes.

The salesman rather scoffed at this and soon a $10 bet was made. They awoke the Swede and told him of the wager. The Swede excused himself for a few minutes and went out.

He soon came back and started in. Sure enough he won the bet for the grocer. As the salesman paid he asked Mr. Swede where he had gone when he went out.

"Oh," replied the oyster swallower, "I wasn't quite sure I could do it so I went into the grocery store next door and tried it there first."

It is proposed by a councillor of New Toronto to introduce a by-law imposing a license of fifty dollars on persons operating traveling groceterias. It is felt that as the owners of these stores on wheels are not paying taxes, they should contribute to the town's treasury in some way.

A Bit of Humor In This Window Gets the Passerby

Montreal.—A bit of humor may be a big attraction in a window display. The most surly being in the world cannot resist the appeal of real wit and, knowing this, a Montreal merchant has for two years back been using this principle to attract attention to his goods.

The effect of this simple attraction upon those who daily pass this store can hardly be exaggerated. The fact of the matter is that many men and women, yes all those who frequent that district, look eagerly for that bit of humor. It merely consists of a small oak picture frame that encases a page from Punch.

One rarely passes that store but there are five or six people enjoying the sketch and the humor. As it happens these are the very people to whom this merchant looks for his trade.

Perhaps the cockney humor bears a particular attraction, for almost everyone who stops to read the few lines or glance at the sketch, goes on his way with a smile. Naturally when looking at the sketch one cannot help but see the display in the window and notice the prices neatly printed on tickets attached to each line. There is something about the attraction that is more subtle than the mere humor or the goods and the price tickets. There is an impression left with those who enjoy the layout of the window that it would be pleasant to deal in that store. Perhaps it is hard to substantiate that theory but nevertheless such is the case. One is favorably impressed by the atmosphere that surrounds that window.

This idea can be easily applied to any grocery business. The picture frame is inexpensive and the sketch costs only what one pays for the magazine that contains it and the little thought and extra time it takes each week to select a suitable page.

LIMA BEAN CROP FAVORED

The California Lima Bean Growers Association, of Oxnard, Calif., writes "Weather conditions have been very favorable for the growing of lima beans up to this date. There has been some replanting done on account of damage by worms and during the past week we have received reports from Orange County, which produces about 20 per cent. of limas raised in California, to the effect that they are sustaining considerable damage on account of worms, estimates running as high as 20 per cent. of their crop. There have been no reports, however, from other lima bean districts."

SMYRNA RAISIN CROP IS LOOKING GOOD

A report from Smyrna commenting on the raisin crop there says:

"The crop is looking very well and the output is expected to beat last year's. Germany and Holland unfortunately have bought at prices quoted for September-October shipment and this has given a firm tone to the market. The quantity sold, however, is very small, and it is not expected to have much effect, so that lower prices, it is felt, will prevail. Owing to a large crop of California raisins expected this year, California will be in a position to compete favorably with Smyrna Sultanas and that the latter must lower, as otherwise there will be small chance of doing any business. Already there is a tendency to lower prices. We have had offers fully 2c per pound cheaper for the good qualities and about 1c for ordinary grades."..

"Mailing Lists Obsolete"

A large Canadian manufacturer enquiring about a mailing list of retail grocers in a certain Canadian city has been unable to secure an authentic one. He writes us that he has used certain alleged lists, but finds that they were practically obsolete.

In other words, there are so many changes in the grocery business from month to month that it is almost impossible to keep up a list that will approach accurateness.

Canadian Grocer is read by the largest number of retail grocers in Canada. It comes to their stores by paid invitation every week.

Moreover, it is subscribed for by grocery departments of large general and department stores and other big buyers whose names would not appear on a grocery mailing list.

From a recent investigation into our records we found that quite a number had been taking the paper continuously from its inception in 1886. Many more had been continuous subscribers for more than 20 years, a great many more than 10 years, and the big majority more than 5 years.

The readers of Canadian Grocer are the permanent business men in the Canadian grocery trade.

This is the type of merchant manufacturers want to reach. The most economical and effective method of reaching them is through the advertising pages of Canadian Grocer.

There is no other satisfactory way of reaching the clerks in these stores.

Other brands cost you more money.

You can sell QUAKER at 10c a package—meet the "cut-raters" at their own game—and still make a profit of 33 1-3%.

Or—if you are happily situated where you don't have to compete with "cut rate stores," there is no reason why you should not sell QUAKER CORN FLAKES at 2 for 25c, giving you a profit of 66 2-3%.

There is no reason indeed, because the QUAKER brand stands supreme to-day for quality in Corn Flakes.

They are made from selected white corn. They are rolled thinner. They hold their delicious flavor indefinitely. Testimony of thousands of buyers prove it. By economy in preparation and volume of output we have been able to accomplish our end—of putting out a profitable 10 cent seller of the best quality.

FRESHNESS

Is always considered when purchasing either eggs or butter. This is quite natural because both eggs and butter deteriorate very rapidly unless prevented artificially from doing so. Few people, however, realize that the same applies to tea. Tea is also most susceptible, and loses flavour very fast when exposed to the air. When sealed in air-tight aluminum (even wood or cardboard being inadequate) as in the "Salada" package, the natural "garden" flavour and fragrance are all retained. CANADIAN GROCER

Vol. XXXVI TORONTO, JULY 21, 1922 No. 29

Say Motors Reduce Delivery Costs

Gibb Bros., Yonge Street, North Toronto, Changed From Horse Drawn Vehicles to a Motor Truck Last May, and Find Delivery Costs Are Reduced More Than Half—What Other Merchants Have Found in Their Experience.

THE PROBLEM of delivery is one that has been given a good deal of thought by the service grocer, and the question as to which is the more satisfactory as well as cheaper method, the horse drawn vehicle or the motor truck, has its champions on both sides. Many grocers who have changed from the horse deliveries to the motors declare that they would not go back to the old way, and insist that in adopting motors they are saving money, having greatly reduced the cost of delivering.

"We changed from the horse-drawn vehicles to the motors last May," Mr. Gibb of Gibb Bros., North Yonge Street, Toronto, told a representative of Canadian Grocer the other day. "Previously we had two horses on the road all the time. With one motor truck now, we believe we are giving better service, covering the territory in much better time, and cutting the expenses more than half what it was formerly. Where we had to employ two drivers under the old scheme, now we have only one. In wages to drivers alone we have effected a saving of twelve dollars per week. We have a garage at the rear of our store, and have done away with the necessity of renting stable accommodation. Feed and blacksmithing charges were heavy items of expense in the old mode of delivery, as yet we have not found them exorbitant."

Have a Big Trade

Gibb Bros., have an extensive grocery trade, and a good deal of it comes over the telephone, although the situation of their store is such as to attract a fair portion of catch business. But service of delivery and credit has been given for some time. Consequently any change in the method of delivering goods is an important factor in the way of reducing overhead expenses. "Not only have we brought about a saving in delivery costs, but we think we have improved the service, since making the change," Mr. Gibb added.

Thos. Collins, a grocer in Ottawa, is another merchant who finds the motor truck the cheaper way to deliver. Mr. Collins declares that where a grocer is employing more than one horse to do his delivering, he will find a motor is the cheaper. That at any rate has been his experience.

"In my own business," stated L. O. Pearson, grocer at St. Thomas, Ont., "the motor is the cheaper. I can only answer as my own experience dictates. I was employing a driver at $12 a week, and a clerk at $20. I let them both go, and engaged one man at $25 per week. He not only drives the truck, but in between deliveries, helps a great deal in the store. In one item alone I have thus effected a saving of $7 per week."

What Vancouver Grocers Say

The correspondent of Canadian Grocer on the Pacific Coast interviewing a number of grocers in Vancouver on this this question as to which is the cheaper delivery, relates some interesting expressions of opinion.

One grocer in Vancouver states that $45 per month covers the cost of maintaining his delivery waggon. In his computations, however, tires and repairs and insurance seem to have had scant attention.

Mr. Dean, of Morrow and Dean, retail grocers in Vancouver states that he estimates the cost of maintaining his delivery truck at $95 per month. This figure does include gasoline, oil, tires, repairs, insurance and depreciation. The last named is shown each month at $15.

All those who seem to have given the subject their thoughtful attention name figures for maintaining a light delivery truck and its driver around $175 to $200 per month. The London Grocery Co., informs me through its manager, D. Shore, that the two trucks which they formerly employed cost about $350 per month.

Charging Depreciation

Fen. E. Newton, manager for the Northwestern Messenger Service which operates a fleet of such trucks states that M. Shore's figures are just about correct. Mr. Newton further pointed out that Wanamaker, in Chicago, operates a fleet of such trucks and every year puts a new chassis under each body and sells the old ones. That is how Wanamaker figures his depreciation. This same executive estimates that the only safe way for a retailer operating a light truck to figure, is to charge off to depreciation the first year 40 per cent. of the cost of the truck, 25 per cent. the second year, 20 per cent. the third year and the balance 15 per cent. the fourth year. He further points out that the grouped amounts for depreciation and repairs will remain fairly constant during the four years. In other words, as the amount for depreciation drops the amount for repairs will mount correspondingly. Another point made by this experienced merchant is, that the totals for the man employing cheap drivers will be about the same as for the man employing capable and experienced drivers. As the actual value of the driver's services comes down, the outlay for repairs and expense generally advances.

EFFECTIVENESS OF WINDOW DISPLAYS

Gibb Bros., North Yonge Street, Toronto, believe thoroughly in the effectiveness of window displays as a means of increasing sales. They use their windows all the time to attract the passerby. Situated as they are on a much travelled thoroughfare, the opportunity to sell merchandise in this way is particularly good. The other day, when a representative of Canadian Grocer happened to be calling at this store, a man who was passing came in, and said: "Give me a tin of that——, in your window. I have never tried it. If I like it, I will come back and get some more."

One of the windows on this occasion was dressed with canned lines that should have a particular appeal at this season. Canned milk and cream, a certain brand of canned fish, were the features of the display. "We have sold a lot of that canned fish since we put that window in," Mr. Gibb added. "It is a line that we have not had long, but it is going to go good. It has already. Window displays always help the sale of goods for us."

Operation of Sales Tax In Regard To Transactions By Manufacturers

Rulings From Ottawa Clear Up Some Interesting Points, But Fact Remains That All Sales by Manufacturers or Wholesalers Must Show Tax on Invoice

IN CONNECTION with the operation of the sales tax, many enquiries seek interpretation of amendments made recently in this Act.

One of these rulings was to the effect that it is absolutely necessary that manufacturers and wholesalers in billing retailers for purchases, show the total amount of the sales tax applicable to the sale, as a separate item on the invoice. If a manufacturer wanted to absorb part of the tax, say 2¼ per cent. on a sale direct to the retailer which ordinarily would carry a 4½ per cent. tax, it would be contrary to the provisions of the act for him to show only the 2¼ per cent. on the invoice. He must show the full amount of the sales tax as a separate item.

Sec. 199 B. B. B. of the Special War Revenue Act, as amended at the last session of parliament, provides that: "The purchaser shall be furnished with a written invoice of any sale which invoice shall state separately the amount of such tax."

Discussing the question of the operation of the sales tax as between manufacturers and wholesalers, A. C. Pyke, secretary of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association told Canadian Grocer that an arrangement had been made with a large number of manufacturers whereby the wholesaler did not have to lose the two and one quarter per cent. tax on goods purchased from manufacturers. Through this arrangement, while the manufacturer shows the amounts of the tax on his invoices, he allows the amount by either increasing his percentage of discount to the wholesaler, or quoting his prices to allow for the same.

Another interesting point raised was whether manufacturers on transactions of semi-finished products had to pay the sales tax on these transactions as between themselves.

How Tax is Pyramided

This enquiry was answered in the affirmative.

It was pointed out to the department that if a manufacturer who purchased articles from another manufacturer to incorporate into his product before it was ready to be marketed, had to pay a sales tax on these articles before they went through the regular channels of distribution, it meant that the tax would be greatly pyramided and would work much hardship in a number of cases.

"That may be so," said the official, "but the transaction constitutes a sale."

It was pointed out that the tax must be shown as a separate item on the invoice. If part of the tax or the whole tax is absorbed by the manufacturer it is either adjusted in a lowering of prices on the commodities listed or a clause appears in the invoice stating "above amount includes Sales Tax paid by us of $———"

Freight Traffic and the Storage Warehouse

Westerner Shows Advantages of Eastern Firms Taking Advantage of Car Load Rates and Utilizing the Warehouses of the West—Thinks This Will Promote Business

By A. V. MANAREY, Calgary

WHAT better market offers for the products of Eastern Canada than that of the prairie provinces; yet, it is only gone after by a few of the more courageous firms, and why?

It has often occurred to the writer it is mainly because of distance and the high freight rates staring the producer or manufacturer in the face. When high freight rates are added to the cost of selling, it makes the figure so high in the eyes of the manufacturer, it seems unreasonable to assume the commodity can be marketed at a fair price and give a profit and satisfaction. This is unfortunately true when one does not thoroughly understand the marketing and distribution of commodities. The misunderstanding is particularly due to a lack of knowledge of traffic problems. Many persons will look at a freight classification tariff and see their product marked for example: less than carlot, second class, carlots, fourth class and possibly right there and then, conclude second class freight rates are too high and that this would make the selling price beyond reach of the consumer, knowing they have not enough weight to make up a carload.

Advantage of Pool Cars

It is also possibly a fact, that such a firm has not studied the question from the point of Pool Car Service or through distributing warehouses; consolidation of merchandise from various firms at a distributing warehouse for the purpose of shipping small quantities to distant points in pool cars. Getting the benefit of carload rating, is one way of reducing the cost of transportation.

Shipping in quantities of buyers' demands and carrying spot stocks in merchandise storage warehouses, for the purpose of service and convenience is rapidly being adopted by many progressive firms who realize the value of service and duties that the stores' own warehouse would perform. Manufacturers in the East can conduct the shipping and handling of stocks to the utmost advantage at a fraction of the cost by having one's own warehouse—usually acting as receiver—warehouseman, shipper, stock-keeper and accountant.

Seasonal accumulations of raw products and manufactured articles must be spread over a period of consumption. Products of the East and products of the West must be readily available for the use of both. Here the storage warehouseman is playing an increasingly important part. Many ways are to be found where the warehouseman can be utilized both profitably and economically in the distribution of foodstuffs, whether the finished article or the raw product for manufacture.

Not a Last Resting Place

It is the desire of all storage warehousemen to alleviate if possible, the aversion of many business houses towards the warehouse industry. The modern warehouse is not a morgue for articles that have lost their sale or for dead issues of stocks. The activities and facilities for improving the better distribution of goods for the benefit of manufacturer, jobber, wholesaler and the ultimate consumer are of infinitely more importance than to be used as a last resting place for dead stocks. The storage warehouse to-day is a bee-hive of industry from the office staff, who look after the customers' accounts and credits to the shipping room, where they look after other peoples' goods with the same care and accuracy as if they were their own.

It may be mentioned that members of the Canadian Storage Association are endeavoring, through proper organization and legislation, to put their business on the same high standard as the banking system and one of their axioms, "Choose your warehouseman as you would your Banker," bespeaks the realization of their responsibilities.

One of the questions which young men applying to Thomas Edison for jobs are required to answer reads as follows: "You are a salesman making every effort to get an order from a big manufacturer who is married to an unusually jealous wife. One evening you see this prospective customer dining in a restaurant with a chorus girl. What would you do?"

That's easy. Either cop the girl or cop the order. The real scientist in salesmanship would cop both.

Baskets of Fruit for Steamship Travel the Feature of This Window Display

A. Dionne Son & Co., 581 St. Catharine St., Montreal, Make Attractive Window to Boost the Sale of "Specials" for Picnics and Summer Outings—Results Are Good.

MONTREAL.—A. Dionne Son & Co., retail grocers, 581 St. Catherine St., West Montreal, have, during the past week, had an attractive window display, designed to sell fresh fruit, not for preserving but for the picnic and holiday trade and as a gift that is appreciated in the summer time. Their idea is that fruit can be sold to people who are not preserving and, according to John Daly, who dressed the window, their idea is correct. The window did sell fruit for eating, for picnics and for gifts.

Carrying Out Picnic Idea

The design of the window carried out the picnic idea. The base, sides and back of the window were trimmed with evergreen and red and green crepe paper. Dainty baskets of mixed fruits, bottles of soft drinks, lime juice and fruit extract were nestled among the fruit baskets. Some of them were quite fancy, being arranged with ribbons and bearing tags, illustrating some of the uses to which the fruit might be put.

A Parting Gift

For instance one of the baskets bore the store's tag with the address of some lady, care of S. S. Metagama, Pier 27, sailing Friday morning. Written on the bottom of the tag was "Bon voyage. Goodbye and good-luck. Mrs. Peters." This store makes a specialty of preparing these baskets for delivery to outgoing vessels and this display illustrates effectively the idea.

Everything For a Picnic

Besides the fruit there was everything for a picnic in this window, biscuits and candies, figs and dates, olives and nuts. The main selling point of the display was for "Steamship Baskets," as announced in a big placard that was stretched across the window.

To Prevent Dumping of Red Raspberries on U. S. Markets

Ottawa, July 17 (Special).—United States anti-dumping regulations are to be applied to Canadian raspberry imports according to a letter which has been received by the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa, from Frederic Hudd, Canadian Trade Commissioner in New York. Mr. Hudd has written as follows:

"The United States Treasury Department Decision No. 3,177, dated June 19, 1922, makes finding under section 201 (a) Anti-Dumping Act, 1921, of dumping in the case of canned red raspberries imported from Canada. The treasury department's finding reads as follows:

'After due consideration I find that the industry of canning red raspberries in the United States is being or is likely to be injured, by reason of the importation into the United States of canned red raspberries, imported from the province of Ontario, Canada, and that such merchandise is sold or is likely to be sold in the United States at less than its fair value.

'Hereafter an appraising officer will scrutinize every entry of Canadian red raspberries into the United States and should entries of canned red raspberries indicate that they are offered to United States importers at less than the home market value in Canada the special dumping duty will be assessed, which is the difference between the price to the United States importer and the home market price in Canada, when the former is less than the latter.'"

New Pack Dried Peaches Are Higher Than A Year Ago

Prices on the new pack of California dried peaches are announced, and are somewhat higher as compared with a year ago. This is said to be due to the fact that the demand for peaches for canning purposes was so great, that values for dried peaches were consequently enhanced. Quotations f. o. b. California for 25 lb. boxes, yellows and Muirs are as follows:

	Yellows	Muirs
Standards	0 11	0 11¼
Choice	0 11¾	0 12
Extra Choice	0 13¼	....
Fancy	0 15¾	0 16¾
Extra Fancy	0 17¼	0 18¼

The peeled varieties are one cent higher. Shipment of new crop is promised latter end of August and September. Quotations named by the California Packing Corporation, the California Peach Growers, and Rosenberg Bros. are all alike.

The marked difference in exchange this year, will more than offset the increase in prices. Last year exchange was ruling around twelve per cent. and to-day it is only a matter of one per cent. Last year's opening price on standard Muirs was 8¼c as compared with 11¼c this year. Extra fancy dried peaches were quoted a year ago at 11c as compared with 17¼ and 18¼ this year.

TOO TRUE

Grocer: "What do you want, little girl some candy?"

Little Girl: "Yes, sir, but I hafta get some eggs."

A window of baskets of fruit, suitable for taking on steamer or holiday trip proved a popular "stunt" with this grocer's buying public.

Illustrating how A. Dionne, Son & Co., of Montreal, dressed their window recently as a means of stimulating the sale of summer lines such as fruits and picnic delicacies.

Carry Lines that Sell Most Readily

If the "Chains" Kept All the Independent Grocer Does, They Would Suffer in Competition—Standardization on Quick Sellers Is Very Important in Chain Store Management—Advantages Have Disadvantages Sometimes

Sidelight Into "Chains" by DR. PAUL H. NYSTROM—Ninth Article in Series on Chain Stores

ONE OF the principal points of competition between chain stores and independent stores, according to the recent chain store study by Dr. Paul H. Nystrom, in the New York Journal of Commerce, a part of which appeared in Canadian Grocer a few weeks ago, is the competition of management between chain store experts operating indirectly through assistants and the independent store managers who operate directly and in personal contact with their business.

That some independent store managers are out-distanced in this race is not surprising, when one considers the lack of training many of them have when entering the business. Many independent store managers are quite content to sell out or give in to the chain and become lieutenants or rank-and-file men under the direction of the chain store experts.

Sometimes Meets Defeat

On the other hand, the chain store sometimes meets defeat. I have heard chain store executives say: "I never locate a store in a community in which there is a live independent dealer" and "sometimes we make a mistake and get into a community where there is a live merchant or where one who formerly was more or less dormant began to adopt up-to-date merchandising methods on our arrival. As soon as we discover these conditions we pull up our store and sell out our lease."

I suppose it is the experience of practically every chain organization to find it impossible to make progress in certain localities, and in consequence more profitable to drop their store there and move elsewhere.

Practically all chain store organizations place the highest emphasis on proper location, seeking situations which are the most convenient for the public. The department store consolidates several lines of merchandise under one roof; the chain store keeps department store type of ownership and management but decentralizes the location of its departments. It goes to the people instead of asking the people to come to it.

All chain organizations make a strong point of having a suitable building of pleasing appearance, east entrance, appropriate fixtures and display space, adequate lighting and efficient use of selling aids, "silent salesmen," etc. All chain organizations continually strive for better sales service, including promptness from their sales people or attendants, courtesy, knowledge of goods and sales ability.

Lines That Sell Most Readily

Most chain stores specialize in the goods they handle, not only in dealing in but one general line of merchandise but also attempting to have and sell only those items out of that line that sell most readily. Slower selling lines, goods offering smaller profit making prospects and merchandise in which losses are likely to occur, such as perishables, are usually left out and allowed to go to the other stores of the community.

Chain store organizations must have accounting systems that tell their managers in great detail whether their retail units are going ahead or not and precisely where the progress or lack of progress is taking place. As everyone knows, the average independent retailer, in the past at least and probably even now, has little definite accounting knowledge of his establishment.

To illustrate, the chain store manager, by studying the records of his perpetual inventories, may learn of changes in public demand almost instantly, while the independent store manager who depends on impression or intuition for getting such information is not likely to discover the trend until considerable sales opportunity has been lost in the new goods wanted and after the old merchandise on his hands has been held so long that it must be sacrificed at considerable losses.

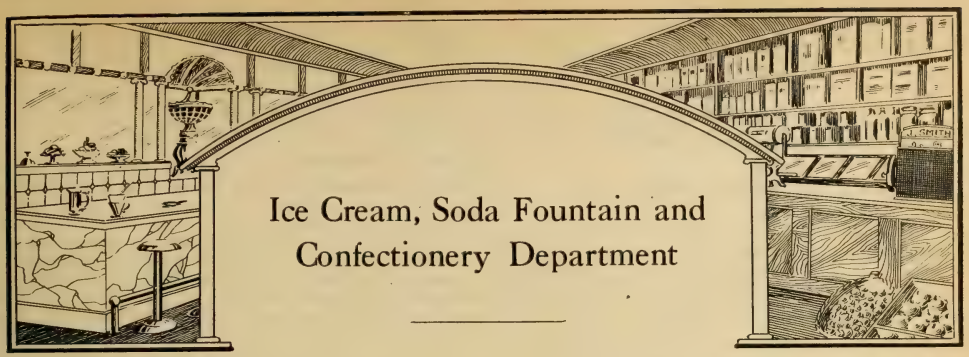
Whether a store shall specialize in goods handled in the way that the chain stores do depends to some extent upon trade posibilities. In a small territory, such as a chain store would not think of entering, the independent retail store must of necessity handle a wide variety of goods in order to secure sufficient volume to make the institution pay. In large communities, after the chain store concentrates on a few of the best selling lines, the independent store must of necessity handle what the chain store does not push.

Difference In Management

Chain stores do not even locate where there are too few prospective customers for their specialized lines to make their stores pay. Ordinarily a 5 and 10c store cannot be made a success in a town of less than 4,000 population, but a general merchandise store could no doubt make a 5 and 10c department a success.

For generations retailers have agreed that goods well bought are half sold. In most of these points, therefore, the essential difference between the chain store and independent stores is nothing more nor less than a difference in capability of management. The chain store can and ordinarily does procure the best possible talent in its executive management. It can afford to pay the necessary salaries to procure such talent. The independent store gets its management from its owner and no selecting agency other than ultimate failure determines who shall and who shall not become an independent store manager.

But the chain store problems of management do not end with the selection of expert executives. The capable independent store manager can as a rule carry out his ideas in person, or at least under personal supervision. The chain store expert must work through instructions and assistants, and the ultimate result depends largely upon how well the expert's instructions are followed.



Because of the difficulties in chain store management, standardization is introduced at every possible opportunity. There is no essential virtue in standardization of methods in retailing except in so far as it sets the minimum requirements for success. Standardization sacrifices the benefits from individual application to local needs in order to make sure that none of the units may fall below minimum safe requirements.

So chains standardize their equipment, their displays of merchandise, their advertising aids, their merchandise and even their sales service. In addition to standardization, the chain store expert also requires for successful operation of his plans a minute system of instruction, of inspection and supervision of the work done according to his instructions. Everything is done by proxy.

So while the chain store can procure the best trained brains to plan the management of its enterprise, it also must sacrifice something, due to the fact that its managers are out of personal contact with the rank and file, and the value of the expert's work is almost certain to lose some of its qualify and inspiration as it flows outward through the mechanism of the organization.

LONG CONTROVERSY OVER FISH

Washington, July 17.—A long controversy over duties on North Pacific fish, which involved alleged discriminations by Canadian authorities against United States fishermen, was finally settled by the Senate adopting an amendment to the proposed tariff bill, which requires that fish caught by United States fishermen but packed at a Canadian port and later shipped in bond to the United States, to pay the two cents per pound duty.

Ice Cream, Soda Fountain and Confectionery Department

This Grocer Has Heavy Sales of Ice Cream and Finds it a Profitable Line

Sells Anywhere From Six to Twelve Gallons in Bulk, and From One to Three Dozen Bricks a Day, according to the Weather—Soft Drinks Too Have a Big Inquiry.

"OUR SALES of ice cream run anywhere from six to twelve gallons a day, and from one to three dozen bricks, depending altogether on how hot the weather is," R. T. Holland, grocer at 1276 Yonge Street, Toronto, told a representative of Canadian Grocer the other day. Mr. Holland has been handling ice cream for the past year and a half. He has a soda fountain, and serves a full line of sundaes and specials in the way of ice cream. While his store is not large he has sufficient space for a few tables, where customers can sit down and be served refreshments. A small counter at the rear of the store accommodates the fountain, and people can also be served here.

12 to 15 Cases Each Week

"We sell from twelve to fifteen cases of that drink, every week," one of Mr. Holland's assistants remarked, pointing to a case of empties that was being removed from the store. "In the line of soft drinks it is one of the best sellers we have. It is sold chiefly for consumption in the store, but our turnover in ginger ale is for the most part with family orders of groceries. We sell a good deal of it by the case and in less than case lots."

Speaking of the sale of ice cream in connection with a grocery store, this grocer finds the two work very well together. Mr. Holland carries a full line of groceries. In fact he declares that having ice cream helps the turnover of the other food commodities. "People very frequently telephone an order for ice cream around the dinner hour, and we deliver if it is not too far distant. Such an order is very often accompanied by a request for other groceries. Then again people who come into the store purposely just to purchase groceries are frequently tempted to buy ice cream before leaving. Thus it is that the two departments work so well together. Ice cream shows a good profit, and is well worth while."

Cakes and Confectionery Sell Well

Mr. Holland has a silent salesman for the display of cakes and confectionery, a line that is a good seller along with ice cream. He endeavors to keep a good assortment on hand all the time, and always fresh. He also has a good turnover in candy, and carries high-class chocolates. These too are shown in silent salesmen.

Business is conducted on a cash basis, and a good deal of "catch" trade is a feature of this store.

A Western fountain owner recently doubled his sales on lemonade by having a stonecutter make a top of sandstone which he placed on a section of his counter. Beneath this he placed a ten gallon stone jug in a box lined with ice. A sign reading "Ice-cold lemonade direct from the old stone well" completed the arrangement. Each person who secured a check drew his own dipper of ice-cold lemonade from the stone well. After a few days' advertising his store was thronged all day long.

Retailer and His Advertising

THE RETAILER and his advertising is an important subject. To get the best results and to know the best mediums to employ are matters of moment to the merchant who is advertising. What the head of the advertising department of a great department store has to say on this subject should be of interest to every retailer in the country. His remarks are contained on the opposite page to this one, and in short he states that advertising to be useful to a store, must first be of benefit to the public. It must tell the news of the store, new arrivals of merchandise, new lines just being introduced, of attractive prices, and in the case of grocers, how different commodities can be used to make appetizing and delicious foods. Plain, simple truths must be told in advertising. Advertising of the right sort brings people into the store not only once but coupled with good merchandising brings them back many times.

The value of advertising for the retailer cannot be underestimated. The story was told in these columns not many weeks ago of the merchant who sued a certain paper for the non-appearance of his advertisement on a particular date, claiming because of its failure to appear he had lost several hundred dollars' worth of business. Coupled with good selling displays, advertising of an intelligent sort can do much to stimulate the sales of the average retailer, and grocers as well as all other merchants should endeavor to deal with this question in the most intelligent manner. By a stricter attention to this important subject, the merchants will do more than merely state their name and address but will give some real live news of the store, saying something that will bring people into the store.

Conditions Are Promising

AGRICULTURAL reports from various sections of the Dominion are uniformly encouraging, says the Canadian Bank of Commerce monthly report. The acreage sown to wheat this year was, according to the most recent estimates, slightly under normal, owing to the unusual amount of precipitation in the spring, which had the effect of delaying seeding from one to two weeks. More recently, however, the rainfall has not been so copious, and this has permitted a large acreage of coarse grains to be sown. The crops are emerging from the most critical period of their growth in a healthy condition, and during the early weeks of June were favored by frequent showers. Only a few areas report lack of rain.

Although the external trade of Canada is still adversely affected by the disorganized state of the European market, it continues, there is evidence of an improved domestic demand. Merchants throughout the country are ordering a little more freely, not in large quantities, it is true, but there is a general tendency to build up depleted stocks in anticipation of a revival in trade. When the prospects of a good crop are definitely assured, wholesalers anticipate a volume of orders which it will tax their ability to fill. Stocks on hand are generally regarded as being sufficient only for day-to-day requirements and inadequate in case present crop prospects materialize.

Reports on the fishing industry vary greatly, but indicate that, on the whole, operations will be attended with a substantial measure of profit. Lobster fishing on the Atlantic Coast has been somewhat unsatisfactory; to such an extent has the catch fallen off in certain sections that the Government was petitioned to extend the fishing season. The request was not, however, granted. Mackerel and other fishing has been attended with success. On the Pacific coast the market has shown improvement of late, and forward sales of all varieties of salmon are said to approximate one-quarter of the season's estimated catch. The canneries are in receipt of heavy orders, chiefly from France, and future contracts are the largest known for this season of the year.

Ontario fruit farmers appear to be well satisfied with the prospects for the season. Prospects for grapes and peaches are good, also for plums and pears, and for apples the outlook is promising. On the whole the rural districts have much to encourage them, a contributing factor being the firmness in price of live stock, more especially of cattle and hogs.

Do Not Misrepresent

MISREPRESENTATION never pays. This is a truism whether it is applied to the individual, the man in business, the manufacturer or in fact to anyone. J. T. Crowder, president of the British Columbia branch of the Retail Merchants' Association, in addressing a gathering of the Kiwanis Club in Victoria, B.C. the other day cited the experience of a British trade representative when travelling through South Africa at one time. He had purchased a five cent lead pencil, and proceeded to sharpen it, only to find that the lead did not extend far into the wood. He tried the other end of the pencil and found the same fault, and so took the pencil back to the merchant who had sold it to him. He learned that the article was a product of Japan. Later the trade representative was sent through the Empire, speaking on trade matters, and he never lost an opportunity to tell about the pencil, and thus through the dishonesty of a Japanese manufacturer, great damage was done to the reputation of Japan.

The average retailer should not have to be told that selling an article, representing it to be something which it is not, is bad business, and possibly spreads a more damaging reputation for his store than anything else almost that might be mentioned. Representing commodities to be only what they really are, and selling them strictly on their merits will be found to be the best policy in the long run. In fact a merchant is well advised to try out a new line of goods in his own experience before reccommending it to others. Hundreds of merchants through the country follow this method with a good deal of success.

Editorials in Brief

Keep your eyes open for the opportunity to add side lines that will increase the number of your customers and add to sales volume without increasing overhead.

The most important thing in getting customers to stick by your store is to give them satisfaction. The satisfied customer is a hard one for your competitor to lure away.

What Retail Advertising Must Do

To Be Effective Advertising Must Be of Value to the Public—Only the Truth Must Be Employed to Make Advertising Profitable—Successful Stores Have Won Through Greater Skill in Advertising

EDITOR'S NOTE: Merchants will be interested in some of the ideas expressed in regard to the handling of retail advertising, as outlined at the recent convention in Milwaukee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. Effective retail advertising can be of great assistance to the merchant in stimulating trade at present, and no matter how much each retailer thinks he knows about advertising he will find some points which he can make use of to advantage in this report.

"RETAIL advertising and therefore the people who devote their time to it, can be just as big, as important, as influential, as those engaged in the business desire," asserted Louis Blumenstock, of St. Louis, advertising manager of one of the great department stores of that city, and president of the Associated Retail Advertisers, at the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs.

"Throughout the sessions of the retail advertisers, who are gathering from the four corners of the earth to discuss methods for improving such advertising, the fundamental thought has been that advertising, to be useful to the store that uses it, must first be of benefit to the public. It must tell the news of a store of new merchandise arrivals, of attractive prices, of the uses to which merchandise can be put to obtain the largest possible benefit from its purchase. Strong emphasis has been laid upon the fact that the best advertising of today is not that which tells merely about the goods offered, but rather, that which tells about the use of the goods.

The Truth Only

"Another deep current in these sessions has been the unanimous agreement that nothing short of the plain, simple truth, as to qualities, prices, etc., can be employed profitably in advertising, and this was especially stressed by Mr. Blumenstock. He showed that advertising does more than merely bring people into a store once—that proper advertising and sound merchandising will bring the customer back time and again.

"A business that is properly built," he said, "is not entirely dependent upon the daily advertisement. It possesses a clientele that has been culivated and has been encouraged to come, day after day, to the establishment to satisfy its wants. And this clientele, which is termed 'natural business,' should be sufficient to assure an average business. The advertising should merely give it a greater impetus, and the occasion should be carefully planned and honestly presented.

"Many things in a business have to do with its future, with its progress, with its place in the community. The establishment that interests itself in municipal affairs, advocates progress in an editorial way, is advertising itself as a progressive business and indicates to the public that it is vitally interested in the progress of the community, and that the establishment consders itself a factor within it."

The great gathering of retailers has developed the interesting fact that during the last few months when many stores have had to retrench sharply and even have shown financial losses, there have been other merchants, similarly situated, who have been distinctly prosperous; and in every case, the successful stores have won through the exercise of greater skill in advertising and merchandising shown by the successful ones.

Sharp emphasis has been given, by several speakers, to the need for better advertising copy—a better understanding of merchandise and the customer—and the use of attractive advertising illustrations. An illustration, attractive in appearance and truthfully describing the merchandise to be sold or clearly reflecting the character of the store, it has been shown, can be of the greatest importance in selling goods and building permanent good will.

"The successful retail advertising man of today must know the store through and through—the management, employees, merchandise, customers—every element and phase of the business, and moreover, he must not only reflect the spirit of the institution he is advertising, but also be in the position of helping to guide the management in the adoption of policies which will win greater good will." Such was the declaration of Edward S. LaBart, of Wilson & Co., Chicago, in addressing the retail section of the advertising convention.

What I Would Want to Know

"Were I a young man," he said, "and had an opportunity to become identified with a retail store in the advertising department, I would want to know about all that I could of the retail store business because I would consider that as long as I had to interpret the store to the public, I would have to know within myself those things I should have to consider and write about.

"If I owned a store and wanted to have an advertising department, I would first make certain that I actually had something to offer the public and then I should insist upon my advertising man knowing every employee of my establishment and to spend some time both behind and in front of the counters absorbing everything possible concerning my busness.

"As an advertising man in a retail store I would not stop in my endeavors until I had sold every employee on the value of advertising; until I was certain every one of them knew the great underlying thought or message that I was carrying along in my copy. I would not stop until I found it possible to make it easer for those higher than I to understand that advertising was the mouthpiece of the business they were building and to be open to suggestions and means for improving the store policies where needed and to permit me to carry to the public the great impelling story that surrounds every successful enterprise. Every success is a business romance and has attached to it wonderful stories, principles and ideals—splendid merchandising facts that await the touch of a human mind trained and directed towards revealing them in a way easy to be understood.

"You cannot row a boat across a river with your hands tied behind your back, any more than a retail store can hope to have its ideals and purposes dug out and properly supported by one whose hands and ideas are tied tight by the big boss, who himself does not thoroughly understand what advertising actually is.

"Every department of a retail store must understand the power of advertis-

Systematic Investment is the Only Way

Some Sane Advice to the Merchant on the Subject of Investment —The Man Who Saves $35.52 Every Month Starting at the Age of 30 Years, Will Have a Competence of $50,000 at 65 Years

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

SAM Partridge, industrious young grocer, lifted the telephone receiver.

"Partridges," he said, in his usual attentive, ready-to-serve, well-modulated voice, and this came back to him over the wire in carefully measured unhurried tones:

"Mr. Partridge, this is Worthington Cranmer speaking, representative of Henry Blonson & Co., members of the Chicago and New York Grain Exchanges. I have opened offices in the Beck Block, directly across the street and should like to have the opportunity to invest a little money for you where it would make a nice profit."

Sam was a bit flustered, but also he felt flattered with the courtesy of Mr. Cranmer's address and a trifle unbalanced to find himself all at once in the class supposed to have money to "invest," but, though he talked a little with Cranmer, he did nothing further, except say he'd "drop in and see" Cranmer.

About a week later, Cranmer got on the line again and spoke thus:

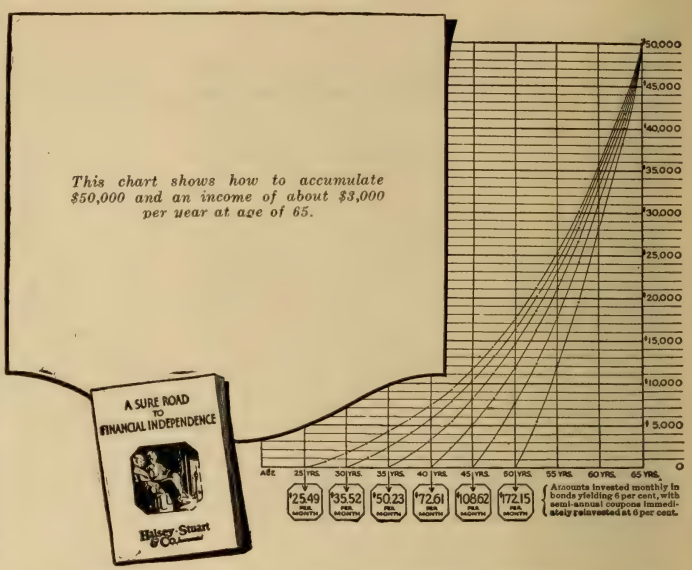
"Pardon me for taking the liberty to call you again, Mr. Partridge, but the wheat market is very active to-day. Prices have been low and appear to be due for a sharp advance. Why not trade in a small lot—say a thousand bushels—and make a little profit on the side?"

Sam was swept off his feet and before he knew it he had placed "an order" to buy a thousand bushels and and promised to send over the require margin of $35. In the first interval of leisure, he took the money over himself and, nothwithstanding Cranmer showed him that the market already he jumped half a cent so that he "made five dollars profit" in the three hours since he had placed his order, he had a scarey feeling as he parted with his coin.

The Sucker Always Loses

Sam's instinctive fright was correct premonition; for his "account" at Cranmer's showed "profits" and "losses," but the profits never came clean and the losses made further margins persistent.

Weeks followed during which Sam spent so much time in Cranmer's "office," neglecting his business in such noticeable fashion that he had to invent excuses. His nights were sleepless. For hours he lay restless or dropped into fitful slumber from which he awakened in a cold sweat from dreams of losing all he owned. His appetite suffered. He became fretful and snappy to his wife and the babies. Mrs. Sam could not understand her husband's moods.



Finally, with a sudden slump in wheat he realized that he was some $700 to the bad. It was a sum he could in no way afford to lose, but he knew that to continue was to risk all he had. So he closed his account and took his medicine. His lesson was learned. He had paid a stiff price, yet his experience was cheap at the cost, for he had one wonderfully valuable fact:

That investment is not speculation! Cranmer always talked of "investment" but what he dealt in was pure gambling. Sam knew that now.

With the close of his account, Sam recovered his sanity. The pull was hard, but only a few weeks after he had regained his poise so that he could laugh even though a little grimly at something he saw in a comic sheet. It re thus:

"One trouble with having a run for your money is that it is such a long walk back."

It was some time before Sam had any spare money to invest; but when he did he really did invest it. He had the sense to consult his banker. He learned about sound bonds. He looked carefully before he leaped. He learned discrimination. He knew now that money accumulated by thrifty self-denial was too precious to risk on promises of alluringly high "interest" or "earnings" and that six per cent. is about the limit consistent with safety.

Shortly after the experiences I have outlined, Sam happened across a chance which pictured the potentialities of consistent savings and safe investment so graphically that any child could understand it. That chart I reproduce, and I urge every reader to study it with the greatest care for such study may readily result in the accumulation of a sufficient competence by many who otherwise would have little or nothing to show for their life work

Sam was still a young man. What struck him about the chart was the smallness of the monthly sum necessary to produce a handsome competence while yet any normal man's expectation of life would promise several years of independent ease.

By tracing the graphic lines carefully, one by one, he found that a man who began to save at thirty years putting aside $35.52 per month and who continued this without a break until he was 65, would then have the comfortable sum of $50,000. "Surely, such a sum—only $426.24 a year—can be put aside by any business man, and he will never miss it," he thought.

He traced the lines more minutely and discovered another important point: that such accumulations would result in his having $17,500 when fifty years

Official of Customs and Excise Dept. Thinks Tax Applies to Counter Sales

Believes Receipt Tax Applies to All Cases Where Receipts Are Voluntarily Given But Adds That Such Is Not Official As Nothing Definite Is Yet Decided

OTTAWA, Ont.—"I would be inclined to think that the tax on receipts would have to apply to all counter sales where receipts are voluntarily given," said a high official of the Department of Customs and Excise at Ottawa.

It was in an effort to secure a definite ruling on this point that the Ottawa representative of Canadian Grocer called at the department. The official expressed his opinion, as above and then added: "Nothing definite, however, has been decided. We are still considering the matter and it will probably be some time before we have drawn up any regulations."

The section of the Act dealing with this matter was gone over carefully by the official and Canadian Grocer. When the former had finished reading it, the writer enquired:

"And what would that seem to you to imply?"

"I would interpret it as meaning that all counter sale receipts would be affected; but you cannot take that as the department's definite interpretation of the Act."

What "Receipt" Means

A memorandum by the department points out that for the purposes of the act, the expression "receipts" includes any note, memorandum or writin whereby any money amounting to $10 or upwards, is acknowledged or expressed to have been received.

The receipts which do not come under the provisions of this section are outlined as follows:

(a) A receipt for or upon the payment in any bank as defined in section twelve of this Act to be accounted for to the person to whose credit the money is deposited.

(b) A receipt or document in the nature of a receipt which is taxable under any other section of this Act.

(c) An acknowledgment by a bank of the receipt of a bill of exchange or promissory note for the purpose of being presented for acceptance or payment.

(d) A receipt for or upon the payment of money paid for any purpose to or by His Majesty for or out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund or for or out of the Consolidated or General Revenue Fund of any province of Canada.

(e) A receipt endorsed or otherwise written upon or contained in any instrument liable to stamp duty and duly stamped acknowledging the receipt of the consideration money therein expressed.

Cancellation of Stamps

The Act is clear on the method of stamp cancellation. It reads: "Cancellation shall be effected by the person who cancels the stamp, writing or impressing his name or initials on or across the stamp together with the true date of such writing or impressing."

The Act, nor the department's memorandum nor the department officials themselves do not make it clear who is to pay the tax in the event of it applying to counter sales.

"That is one phase of the question that we must decline to discuss at present. All the regulations governing this section of the Act, will be made public in due time," said the official.

Retailers Antagonistic

The attitude of retail merchants to this piece of legislation is one of bitter antagonism. "It is a clumsy piece of legislation, and if it goes into effect, it won't be our fault," said E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Board, Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, who announced that the board was making plans to fight the matter to a finish. "Our case is being prepared at present and we will have something very interesting to report before long," said Mr. Trowern. He added that he firmly believed the provisions would never be enforced.

WHAT RETAIL ADVERTISING

ing so that patrons of the store will be handled and treated courteously, that they might come back again and again. Stocks advertised must represent themselves as shown in the advertising, else the prestige sought after will not withstand.

"The advertising department is one of the most important departments of any store and it must be treated and considered accordingly. And by the same reasoning the advertising department manager should be one of the best known and among the most intelligent workers in the organization; one whose duties extend from knowing how goods are received, unpacked, handled and priced through all details up to the duties and ideas of the president of the company, himself. Only in this way can every detail be possessed and only in this way can really good pulling merchandising copy be prepared and presented to the public."

Far too little attention is given to writing craftsmanship in the preparation of advertising copy by retail merchants, in the opinion of Sherley Hunter of Chicago, who has attained a national reputation as an advertising writer. He told retail advertisers attending the convention, that advertisements should be news, and he insisted that business houses are too easily contented when they go out to look for an advertising man.

B. C. Retailers Meet in Convention

Merchants From All Over the Pacific Coast Province Gather in Victoria Where Work of the Past Year Is Reviewed, and Lines of Endeavor Outlined for the Next Twelve Months—Thirteen New Branches Added to R.M.A.

By Staff Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

VICTORIA, B. C., July 19.—Delegates representing the thirty-three branches of the Retail Merchants' Association of British Columbia gathered here last week to the number of nearly a hundred for the fifth annual convention of the association, when the president, J. T. Crowder, welcomed them on behalf of the executive of the association. For the first time since its establishment in this province, he said, the Retail Merchants' Association was able to speak with a voice which carries the weight of numbers, and the programme set before the members was one of far reaching influence on the destinies of merchandising in this province, and on the prosperity of the retail trade of British Columbia.

Secretary's Report

G. S. Hougham presented the secretary's report.

Referring to the period of industrial uncertainty which has passed since the convention last met in Duncan, a year ago, Mr. Hougham said that in Canada "the steady deflation of values, coupled with the change of government at Ottawa, involving uncertainty in the fiscal policies of the Dominion of Canada, plus widespread unemployment, has meant a testing time for business men which is not yet at an end."

He stated that the association in this province has been passing through a time of exceptional growth nothwithstanding. Last year at this time the membership stood at 882; at the end of June last it stood at 1,176, distributed in the membership of thirty-three branches, making a net increase of 294. Thirteen new branches have been added to the list during the year and other centres are in line for an organization at an early date. Changes had been made in the provincial office arrangements of the association, and the segregation of this office from the Vancouver branch had made it possible to give more attention to the outside branches than was formerly possible.

Dealing with the resolution which will be presented to the convention today, Mr. Hougham emphasized the importance of that covering the personal property tax. He stated that a campaign had been instituted against this tax by the executive of the association throughout the province.

Shops Regulations

Another important resolution which would concentrate the opinion of the members on political issues that affect the retailers in this province and which will be dealt with by the convention, Mr. Hougham pointed out, was that dealing with amendments in the Shops Regulations Act, compelling places of business carrying more than one line of goods to segregate that portion of their goods which they could not sell after hours prescribed in the Weekly Half-Holiday Act.

Comment was made also on the action that had been taken and which was proposed by the executive regarding the standardization of trades. It was felt that some sort of recognized standard should be established to define retailers. Some effort along the lines of persuading wholesalers to sell only to retailers had been made during the year, and in one case the wholesaler had notified the association that they had ceased to sell to any but legitimate retailers.

Mr. Hougham stated what had been the action taken by the executive in co-operation with the various branches regarding the immigration policy of the country, and the exclusion of Orientals from British Columbia. He said that an opportunity had presented itself for the exertion of the influence of the organization when W. G. McQuarrie, K.C., M. P., presented his resolution to the House at Ottawa calling for total exclusion of Orientals entering Canada in future

Other matters touched upon by the report were the necessity for amendments in the Bankruptcy Act and collective buying, and other important matters.

New business for the association's consideration was suggested along the lines of some method of keeping a record of the removal of householders from place to place for the protection of retailers extending credit.

An Indication of Service

Mr. Hougham said that the report as presented by him was a record of accomplishment of things attempted, but it was interesting also as an indication of service demanded by the membership in their respective trade sections and collectively. The programme as outlined is one that is constructive, he said, and is an answer to the criticism that the retail merchants are prone to offer something in their convention that is intangible and idealistic. The executive has recognized that the time has arrived when more attention should be given to practical service, because the foundation of the organization has now been laid and there is not the same need for attention being given to the adding membership to the branches.

The president, J. T. Crowder, in giving his report to the convention after that of the secretary, urged that a policy of rigid economy should be followed by the Provincial Government, and he proposed that a resolution on the subject should be brought before the convention. The resolution, which he read, was as follows:

"Be it resolved, that this meeting, having duly considered the grave financial position of the Province of British Columbia; pledges itself to support a policy of rigid economy, and to submit cheerfully to any inconvenience arising from the curtailment of all public services that the government may, in its wisdom, impose, and

"Be it further resolved, that this meeting absolutely condemns any representations to the government, involving additional expenditure of public funds, on the part of any city organization or community until such time as the finances of the province have been placed on a solvent basis."

Continuing his report, Mr. Crowder said:

Work for Sections

"Most of the R. M. A. activities in future should be conducted through the trade sections, functioning through a provincial chairman with a vice-chairman and possibly a second vice-chairman, in every locality for every trade section. The branches should continue to function by having as their officers the local vice-chairman, who could elect a presiding officer for the year. All expenses for local activities would be met by local provincial fees.

PICNIC ATMOSPHERE IN SUMMER WINDOW

A single window for use sometime during the Summer Picnic Season is to show an out-of-door's window. One can be made with a few accessories and a little effort.

Build a tripod of sticks and hang it from a kettle over an imitation fire. The fire effect can be obtained by pulling some broken twigs over a ruby electric light, or over an ordinary electric light covered with red crepe paper.

At the side have a small, rough table on a linoleum covered box, set with aluminum or tin cups, saucers, plates and other picnic table service.

A fishing rod placed upright in another corner lends additional atmosphere.

Merchandise suitable for picnic use, such as condensed and evaporated milk, prepared coffees, canned goods of all kinds, biscuits, can be displayed; otherwise a card reading:

"Buying of us is a Picnic—
should be lettered and placed in a prominent position in the window.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

NO CHANGE is reported in the sugar situation, save that the two Canadian refiners who had withdrawn from the Canadian field, are again quoting, all Canadian refiners with the exception of Dominion quoting on the same basis. The raw market is again strong after a slight reaction, and sales are reported for the second half of July shipment at 3 5-16c c. & f. The f.o.b. situation is also improved, prices for August shipment being 3.22c and 3.25c, with holders now asking 3.30c. Some second hand selling is reported in the refined market, on both sides of the line, including sugar for export at 4.35c net cash in bond. There appears to be a seasonable movement, and while some second hand sales may have transpired below the list price, no serious disturbance has resulted, and it seems more difficult to find sellers in that position.

New prices on California dried peaches show some advance over last year, due to the big demand for peaches for canning, and the high prices paid, for this purpose. Canned goods are steady with the movement very good. Teas and coffees are strong, and the rice market is unchanged. Domestic fruits and vegetables are arriving freely, and the demand for the same is good with prices showing somewhat easier tendencies.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, July 20.—The grocery market shows a much improved aspect. The wholesale grocers are more optimistic in their reports, and all admit that a good fall season is ahead. The crops in this province and in the west too are mainly responsible for this brightness. The country traders are more willing to buy with the prospect of more money to be spent in the rural districts. Then too stocks are well cleaned up and wholesalers expect heavy buying in the late summer. The sugar market, with its advancing price has stimulated interest and money has been made here. Most lines are firm for spot stocks but in many instances lower prices seem to be the prospect. Figs, raisins, nuts and other dried fruits will be plentiful according to reports. Citron peel however, has advanced five cents a pound this week. Molasses is in a strong position. Canned goods are firm on spot but weak for the new pack. Fresh vegetables and fruits are plentiful with low prices. This to some extent is responsible for a more active spice market. Peppers show weakness in New York. Japan teas have more strength and wholesalers predict still higher prices. Ceylons are steady but quiet. There is no change in coffee. Rangoon rice is quoted a little higher. The cereal market is dull with no change in price.

CANNED GOODS TO BE LOWER

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—For the present time the canned goods market shows a strong tone and during the past few weeks buying has been heavy. This, however, is expected to come to a sudden end this week since there is a plentiful supply of fresh vegetables and fresh fruits on the market at comparatively low prices. Local wholesalers freely express the opinion that the prices on the new pack will be lower than that of last year, except on tomatoes, and in their opinion the price of tomatoes will at least not be any lower than that of last year. There are, however, very few quotations yet known. The price on asparagus has been announced by some packers and this is somewhat lower than that of last year. Canned fruits, particularly show an easier tendency on a number of accounts. In the first place there is a big crop of small fruits this year and comparatively speaking sugar is lower in price.

CITRON PEEL HIGHER

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—The feature of the dried fruit market is another increase in the price of citron peel. Although wholesalers' prices do not yet show the advance some of the manufacturers of citron peel report an advance in their price amounting to 5 cents per lb. Orange and lemon peels are unchanged. Reports from the Mediterranean state that there is a bumper crop of fruits and prices will likely be a little easier. Sultana raisins and figs are particularly promising. Nuts in shell will also be easier. Importers admit that it will be profitable to defer buying at the present time.

SPOT WALNUTS ADVANCE

Montreal.

NUTS.—The feature of the nut market is another advance in the price of Bordeaux shelled walnuts. Wholesale quotations do not yet show this advance but according to cable reports the price abroad shows an advance of 100 francs per 100 kilos. This amounts to about 4 cents per lb. Reports on the new crop indicate a big supply for next year with very likely lower prices. The same report comes from Spain on almonds.

AN ERROR IN QUOTATIONS ON 1 LB. JARS OF JAM

In the issue of June 23 of Canadian Grocer in reference to a change in jam prices there appeared an error. A reduction was quoted in Gordon and Dilworth's jam in 1 lb. glass jars, making the price $6.25 a case. This should have read $625 a dozen. This price is as quoted by the local wholesale grocer representing the firm.

JAPANS SHOW MORE STRENGTH

Montreal.

TEAS.—Japan teas show a tendency towards higher prices. Reports state that buyers in Japan are withdrawing from the market in the hope that by refusing to buy prices will be forced downwards but since supplies on this market and in the United States are very short, buying is imperative and local tea merchants do not think that this means of lowering the prices will be effective. The Ceylon market is quiet but has a strong tone. At this season of the year the tea business is quiet and this is particularly so in view of the fact that just before the quiet season there was an advance in the price. Local retailers are simply unloading their present stocks or buying to meet immediate requirements.

MORE ACTIVITY IN SPICES

Montreal.

SPICES.—Importers of spices state that the market is more active due to the increase in the trade and consumer demand. The scarcity in many grades is accentuated sharply by this increase in demand. The crops of produce requiring the use of spices and seeds in their preparation for food consumption are very large and this naturally increases the demand for spices. This in turn lends a stronger tone to the market. New York, however reports an easier tone on peppers "to arrive" but there is no change in local wholesale prices.

STRONG FEELING IN SUGAR

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The opinion of a number of local wholesale grocers is that the raw sugar market is now experiencing a recess and that between now and the month of August it will show more activity. The opinion is freely expressed that sugar will go as high as 7½ cents a lb. in August. In the meantime the whole grocery trade has been stimulated by the upward movement of sugar and with the good supply of fresh fruits on the market there is a big demand for sugar for preserving.

MOLASSES STANDS FIRM

Montreal.

MOLASSES—There is no change in the molasses market. This market follows sugar closely and while there is a steady but exceedingly strong market for raw sugars little can be said about molasses apart from the fact that its position is very firm.

BIG CROP OF APPLES

Montreal.

FRUITS—Like the vegetable market there is a big offering of small fruits on the market. Apples are selling at $3 bushel basket and the farmers report a bumper crop in this province. Plums are down to $2. a crate and cherries are in big demand at $1 a basket of 11 qts. Oranges remain high in price but are out of the limelight on account of the Canadian fruits on the market. Lemons are steady in price and there is no reason to believe that prices will advance as they did last year.

VEGETABLE PRICES LOWER

Montreal.

VEGETABLES—Bonsecour market here had a record offering of fresh vegetables. There is every proof of a big crop of early vegetables and prices run low. Small cauliflower is selling at 6 for 25 cents, green and wax beans at 5 cents a pound and young cabbages at 40 cents a dozen. Beets are now as low as 30 cents a dozen and young carrots 21 cents a bunch. New Montreal potatoes are on the market at $2.75 a bag, which is a low price for local potatoes so early in the season. It is just mid-season for tomatoes and the price is high on the small offering of tomatoes. The price is expected to drop early next week with a good supply.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, July 19.—New prices are announced this week on California dried peaches. These quotations are slightly higher than opening prices last year, due to the heavy inquiry for the fruit for canning purposes. However the easier exchange situation now existing will more than offset any advance in price. Last year exchange was up around 12 and 14 per cent., while this year it is around one per cent. Prices on new Grecian currants to arrive are somewhat lower than last year.

The sugar market is steady, although a tendency to easier prices in the market for raws was noted last week, but the situation has again become firmer. No change is reported on spot. Movement is in good volume, and the two refineries that had withdrawn their prices are again quoting. Canned goods are unchanged. Teas and coffees both show a tendency to go higher, the latter market being particularly strong. Rices are quiet as also are spices. Almonds in the shell, Tarragonas and filberts in the shell, new goods, are quoted to arrive. Bordeaux shelled walnuts are easier. The flour market is unchanged but very strong.

Fruits and vegetables are arriving in good supply and prices are easier, in a number of instances.

CEREALS MOVE IN GOOD VOLUME

Toronto.

CEREALS.—There is a very good inquiry for cereals. Prices show no change as compared with last week, but the situation generally is very firm. Rolled oats are moving in good volume considering the season, and demand for all lines is active.

PRIMARY COFFEES LOOK HIGHER

Toronto

COFFEES.—Coffees in the primary markets tend to higher levels, although dealers selling on spot report no change in values to the trade. Inquiry is moderately active, although it is stated that purchasing at present quotations is good buying.

LITTLE INQUIRY FOR BEANS

Toronto.

BEANS.—There is not a great deal of inquiry for beans at the present time. Prices show no change as compared with last week, Canadian hand picked being quoted at $4.40 per bushel, and No. 1 lb. pickers being from $3.90 to $4 per bus. California limas are unchanged at from 11 to 11½c per lb.

NEW PRICES ON DRIED PEACHES

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—New prices on Grecian currants to arrive are quoted at 51s 6d per box, figuring out, laid down in Toronto, to the retail trade, at 12 cents per lb. This price is lower than last year, the present quotations being 14½c to 15c for Greek Filliatras in cases. Prices on the new crop of dried peaches are quoted for August and September shipments. Standards, yellow, are quoted 11c f.o.b. California and Muirs are 11¼c. Extra fancy are 17¼c and 18¼c for yellows and Muirs respectively. The peeled varieties are one cent per lb. higher. The prices of some varieties are higher than last year, but any advance in prices will be more than offset by the improved situation in exchange this year, as compared with last. The demand by canners for peaches is held responsible for the increase in prices of dried peaches.

The impression seems to be that new prices on prunes will be lower than last year. Opening prices are expected early next month.

Dried fruits on spot are steady with last week.

CANNED GOODS IN FAIR DEMAND

Toronto

CANNED GOODS.—The demand for canned goods is fairly active. Standard peas are quoted at from $1.50 to $1.75. Canned lobsters in halves are quoted very high, up to $5.25 per doz. Quarters are $3.25 per doz. The supply is so small that sales are limited. Other canned lines are unchanged as compared with a week ago.

NEW NUTS QUOTED TO ARRIVE

Toronto.

NUTS.—Importers are quoting new almonds, Tarragonas, to arrive first steamer. They are quoted c. and f. Montreal, in 100 lb. bags at 57s which means around 19 cents per lb. to the trade. New filberts, also for September shipment are quoted c & f., Montreal, in 100 lb. bags at 41s 6d.

Shelled walnuts, Bordeaux, are quoted easier at from 62 to 65c per lb. Other lines are unchanged.

SUGAR PRICES HOLD

Toronto.

SUGAR.—The situation in sugar is unchanged as far as spot prices are concerned, with the two refineries, Atlantic and St. Lawrence that had withdrawn their prices, again quoting in this market. The market for Cuba raws was slightly easier last week, the price having declined from 3½c to 3⅜c and later to 3 5/16c. Buyers are now holding off but sales of 22,000 bags are reported at 3¼c recording a decline of a quarter cent per lb. for the week. On the f.o.b. basis Cubas were offered at 3.15c for July and 3.20c for August, but these were later withdrawn. In the United Kingdom there are buyers at 17s which is equal to about 3.14c per lb. f.o.b. Cuba.

Fourteen Centrals are now operating as against 8 last year, and 6 in 1920. Late on Friday last the market took a sudden turn for the better, with sales of 9,000 bags for the second half of July shipment, at 3 5/16c at which figure there are now buyers. The f.o.b. situation is also improved. August shipments are quoted at 3.22c, and 3.25c, and holders are now asking 3.30c.

Refined sugar is now practically unchanged, with some second hand selling going on, on both sides of the line, including for export at 4.35 net cash in bond. St. Lawrence and Atlantic with all other Canadian refiners are now sellers, quoting $7.25 Montreal basis, jobbers' price Toronto being $7.59. There appears to be a good seasonable movement, and while some second hand sales may have transpired below the list price, no serious disturbance has resulted and it seems more difficult to find sellers in that market.

Japans indicate a steadily advancing market, while Ceylons are now from 5 to 8 cents above the lowest point. All teas with a good cup quality are in active demand. MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, July 21.—Opening prices on new pack California fruits have been announced and are higher than last year. Prices have also been named on dried peaches and are 1½c per lb. higher than last year. Coffee shows no change. Green and yellow peas show an advance. Cereals, beans and flour hold fairly steady with little change shown in quotations. French shelled Bordeaux walnuts are slightly easier and buyers are placing their orders for Fall. Rice continues quiet. The sugar market is showing a firmer tone and a further advance is expected. The tea market continues firm. Local vegetables are plentiful on the market at lower prices. Raspberries are in good demand as well as all lines of California fruits.

COFFEE UNCHANGED

Winnipeg.

COFFEES.—There is very little change to note in the coffee market. Holders are asking a premium on old crop beans. Milds continue firm. There is a good demand locally and stocks are rapidly becoming depleted.

NEW PRICES ON CALIFORNIA FRUITS

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—Opening prices on California fruits have been named and are from 10c. to 35c. per dozen higher than last year. With a larger pear pack than last year and with a big peach crop it is thought that both of these fruits may be in surplus after packing closes. These goods will arrive on a practically bare market. Canned salmon remains unchanged. Sales of canned vegetables, especially for tomatoes, peas and corn are steady and stocks are reported light.

PEACH PRICES ANNOUNCED

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—California dried peach packers have announced their prices on the 1922 pack and are about 1½c. per lb. over last year's prices. Apricots on the primary markets have advanced 1¼c. per lb. and buying is not heavy as prices do not appeal to the trade. New prices on raisins are expected around the first of August. Locally there is a seasonable demand for all lines of dried fruits. The larger size of prunes are cleaned up and evaporated apples are unobtainable. Peaches are in good demand but with little stock to choose from. Stocks of raisins are fairly plentiful with the exception of seeded in packages.

old, or nearly $25,000 on his fifty-fifth birthday, while at 60, he would have over $35,000.

Taking it another way, he found that if he continued saving on this plan for the entire 35 years, until his 65th birthday, he would have put away a total of $14,918.40—but he would then have $50 000! This would show that somebody had worked, planned, sweated and labored to give him $35,081.60, and that this premium of nearly $2.50 for each of his own dollars paid him by another, who then also returned all his own dollars, would come automatically.

What are You Working For?

The man who starts at 25 only puts in $12,235.20 in the 40 years, so he gets a premium of $37,764.80; but any man who starts in anywhere on this plan has the advantage of security, freedom from worry and the knowledge that the biggest, brainiest, business moneymakers in the country are working for him. Moreover, they are working willingly, gladly, eagerly, without supervision or thought on his part. He saves and sleeps nights. They work and worry—and pay him for the privilege. Talk about your plutocrats—think of bloated bondholders—rave about the money-power if you will; the fact remains that the true employer of other men's brains, who lives carefree while taking toll of other men's efforts is the systematic saver. The man who uses his accumulated labor, meaning some of the money he earns and sets aside, in sound investments is top of the heap every time.

So now stop and ask yourself what you are working for. Maybe you have thought you were working for money. If so, probably you have noticed that each year ends with a greater accumulation of stock. fixtures and accounts—but no more money.

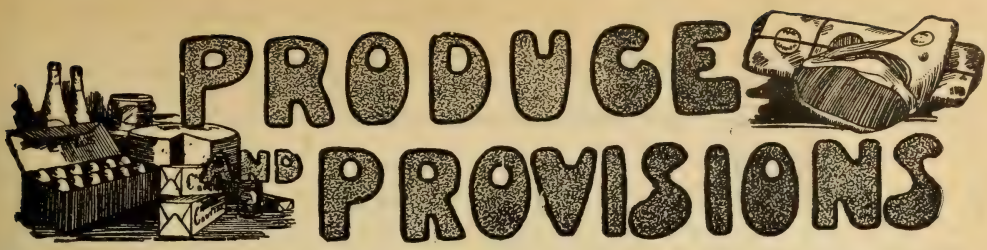
But the true thing to work for is a competence, something on which you can depend when age overtakes you which will keep you independent of others to the end—in peace, comfort and sufficiency. And the way to get this is systematically to withdraw a certain sum of money—MONEY, note, for nothing else will do—from your business and put it away in sound investments.

Ask your banker. Learn to know good bond houses. Select the house with care. Then put the remainder up to that house. The rest is automatic.

Finally: Have patience. Look at the chart. Note how long it takes to accumulate the first thousand: but keep the chart before you so you may never forget how the pace accelerates with the passing of the years. You cannot get rich quick. You can accumulate a competence—

"Not for to hide it in a ditch,
"Not for a train attendant;
"But for the glorious privilege
"Of being independent!"

July is a favorite interest paying month—splendid time to begin. Get in touch with a banker to-day. If in doubt, ask me!



B. C. RETAILERS

"The work of the B. C. Board should be carried on by the provincial executive of five officers, assisted by a larger and advisory committee, consisting of provincial chairmen of trade sections or their alternatives, with these delegates so selected that each locality would be represented. This larger executive should meet five times a year if possible (say every sixty days, not including the annual convention). These meetings to be held at the provincial office. The provincial executive should have complete authority over all R.M.A. activities in this province, subject to the authority of the provincial board. The provincial executive officers should not hold office in trade sections or locals.

"The members of this association should hold themselves in readiness to assist in showing the Honorable Charles Stewart the conditions affecting the Oriental problem of B. C., or to co-operate with the provincial office as required.

"All Dominion board meetings should be held at Ottawa," said the speaker.

Estimated Pack of Salmon on Pacific Coast Is Placed at 860,000 Cases

Stocks of Salmon Are Light and With the Likelihood of a Big Export Demand, Prices on New Pack Are Likely to be Very Strong

VANCOUVER, July 18—(Special)—Figures on the estimated pack of salmon on the Pacific Coast are available. They are as follows: Sockeye, 175,000 cases; Red Spring, 25,000 cases, Cohoes, 60,000 cases, pinks 450,000 cases, and Chums 150,000 cases, making a total of 860,000 cases.

There are fewer canneries operating this year because of various reasons and in addition, there has been a strike on Rivers Inlet, which will materially decrease the pack in this district.

Stocks of salmon throughout Canada are very light, and the consuming months for salmon are mostly yet to come. Export demand is likely to be heavy, and with the old law of supply and demand working, sharp advances in prices must be expected. It is stated that there is well over 50 per cent. of the anticipated pack already sold.

Packers assert that pink and chum salmon will have to advance 50 cents a case more before they show a profit.

This Grocer Says His Slicer Has Paid For Itself Half A Dozen Times

A. V. Brown, Hamilton, Declares That He Could Not Get Along Without It—Saves Time and Enables Him to Give Better Service—Sales of Fruit and Vegetables Heavy in This Store

"I THINK that slicer has pretty well paid for itself half a dozen times," A. V. Brown, grocer at Arthur and King streets, Hamilton, Ont., told a representative of Canadian Grocer, when speaking of his trade in cooked and smoked meats. "It would be absolutely impossible for us to get along without it. We have had it about five years. In the summer particularly when there is such a demand for cooked ham, it saves a great deal of time, and makes it possible to serve customers very much faster than otherwise is possible. We cut about two or three hams here every day in the summer, and our sales of bacon run from twelve to fourteen sides a week.

"Cutting these meats with a slicer has helped the sale of them with us. We find that people like to buy them where they can have them sliced to their liking. A more uniform thickness is possible with a slicer and waste too can be pretty well eliminated."

Sales of green vegetables and fruits are heavy, in this store. Mr. Brown remarked, in the course of his conversation, that a grocer directing his attention to the sale of these lines in the summer months, can find a real source of revenue. In fact he thinks that this is one way of meeting the competition of the chains. The latter as a rule do not carry fruits and vegetables to any extent and the independent grocer catering to a family trade can build a very gratifying turnover by giving them special attention. "We sold twenty crates of strawberries this morning," he remarked on the day of the Canadian Grocer representative's visit. "In selling fruits too particularly in the preserving season, we can sell other lines such as increased quantities of sugar and sealers."

CHEESE FROM CANADA IS MEETING COMPETITION

Ottawa, July 18.—Canada is finding New Zealand a dangerous competitor in the cheese market of the United Kingdom, according to a report received by the Trade and Commerce Department from Harrison Watson, Canadian Trade Commissioner in London.

While for many years Canada virtually monopolized the import trade of great Britain in cheese, Mr. Watson reports that for the five months ended May 31 New Zealand supplied the United Kingdom with 802,021 hundredweight of cheese out of the total cheese imports of 1,089,797 hundredweight. During the same period, according to the Canadian Trade Commissioner, the receipts of Canadian butter in Britain totalled only 170 hundredweight out of 2,076,195, and receipts of Canadian eggs accounted for only 500 great hundreds out of 4,944,098 great hundreds.

Commission Will Now Investigate Fisheries In B. C.

Ottawa, July 17.—In pursuance of the recommendations of the Parliamentary Committee on Marine and Fisheries at the last session of Parliament, the Government has appointed a Royal Commission to investigate fisheries conditions in British Columbia. William Duff, Liberal member for Lunenberg, has been appointed chairman of the commission, the other members being A. W. Chisholm, Liberal member for Inverness; L. H. Martell, Liberal member for Hants; Alfred Stork, Liberal, Skena; W. W. Neil, Independent, Comox, Alberta; Hon. H. H. Stevens, Conservative, Centre Vancouver, and C. H. Dickie, Conservative, Nanaimo. It will be noted that three of the personnel are from the Maritime Provinces and four from British Columbia.

While the investigation by the commission will be of a general nature two points of inquiry are emphasized in the order-in-Council appointing the members. The first is as to whether the export in a fresh condition for purposes other than to supply the fresh fish markets, of other species of salmon than sockeye, should be permitted, and the second is whether or not motorboats should be permitted in salmon drift net fishing operations in British Columbia. The causes of the depletion of the salmon fisheries of the Fraser River district will, of course, be thoroughly investigated. The findings of the commission will be reported to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

"Our dance floor is small, and I'm afraid it will be too crowded. Hadn't we better limit the invitation to, say, a hundred?"

"No, just ask all the fellows to bring thin girls."

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, July 20.—The produce market shows a number of changes, both advancing and declining. The somewhat limited offerings of hogs and the keen demand for cured and cooked meats has resulted in a higher price on hogs and an advance in bacon. Fresh killed hogs are also advanced one and two cents a pound, with a like change in dressed portions. The advance in bacon amounts to one cent a pound. On account of the heavier supplies arriving on the market, eggs are also one cent lower for the reason that the consumption has fallen off. The cheese market shows some improvement although there is no change in wholesale prices. Gaspe salmon is about finished but Spring salmon from B.C. is taking its place although the price is higher. Other fish is unchanged. There is no change in the lard market.

LOWER PRICE ON BUTTER

Montreal.

BUTTER. — The liberal supplies of creamery butter available have caused a weakness in the market which brought a reduction in the price of creamery and dairy butter amounting to 1c a pound. Wholesale produce dealers are inclined to believe that a further reduction will come since the volume of business passing is not sufficient to absorb the current receipts.

CHEESE MARKET IMPROVED

Montreal.

CHEESE.—The cheese market has an improved aspect with more active business being done and prices showing a tendency to advance. The English market shows an increased demand with an upward tendency in prices. Despite this increased activity the volume of business has not been large enough to absorb current receipts and in consequence stocks on spot are accumulating. Local wholesale prices are unchanged.

EGG PRICES ARE LOWER

Montreal.

EGGS.—The improved inquiries from English importers for Canadian storage eggs continues and lends a stronger tone to the market. Dealers state that owing to the abundance of fresh fruit on the market the consumption of eggs has shown a decrease and in sympathy with the weaker tone in Chicago a reduction has come in the price of fresh eggs, despite the influence of the British market. The egg market therefore shows a reduction of 1 cent per dozen this week all around. This is mainly on account of a falling off in demand, for production shows no improvement.

HOG PRICES GO HIGHER

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—Owing to the continued somewhat limited supply of hogs coming forward and the scarcity of selected stock, a stronger feeling has prevailed in the market during the past week and prices have scored a further advance. At the opening of the week's sale, odd lots of selected hogs were sold as high as $16.00 per hundred pounds, weighed off cars, but the general price was from $15.50 up to $15.75 per cwt. Heavies sold at from $13.50 to $14.50 per cwt. Packers state the market shows every evidence of standing firm at the high prices during the summer weather since there is little hope of larger supplies being ready for the market before September.

SMOKED MEATS ADVANCED

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS.—In sympathy with the strength of the hog market and coupled with a steady and increasing demand for all lines of smoked meats there is a decidedly better feeling in this market and prices generally have scored advances with an active trade passing for local and country accounts.

POULTRY MORE ACTIVE

Montreal.

POULTRY.—There has been an active market for poultry during the past week owing to the liberal supplies coming forward for which there has been a good demand. Prices have been fairly well maintained however. The bulk of receipts have consisted of chickens and fowls with a few ducks and the prices ranged from 30 to 32 cents a pound for broilers and for fowl 24 to 25 cents per pound live weight. Poultry dealers state that the market is quiet, comparatively speaking and that the trend of prices at this time depends wholly upon the supply and demand.

GASPE SALMON HIGHER

Montreal.

FRESH FISH.—The season for Gaspe salmon is drawing to a close since the fishermen avoid shipping salmon during August. Prices therefore show an advance and Gaspe salmon is now quoted 18 cents per pound. There is a good supply of Western Fresh Halibut on the market which is in good demand. British Columbia dressed spring salmon is expected to fill the demand that has existed for Gaspe salmon in the past few weeks. Haddock and Cod are in good supply and prices are low. There is a fair supply of lake trout, dore, white fish and pike.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, July 19.—The situation in the live hog market is much the same as last week. Prices are holding at last week's advance, on the basis of $15 fed and watered. Fresh meats are for the most part firm, with the demand moderate, but the hot weather of the past week has stimulated the inquiry for all cooked meats. While quotations on the latter are unchanged, the market is very firm. Eggs are somewhat easier, supplies coming forward being fairly heavy. Butter and cheese show no change as compared with a week ago. The inquiry is good and the market is strong.

Fish and poultry are quiet. There is a fair demand for whitefish, trout and halibut. Receipts of poultry are light, with prices steady.

ACTIVE BUYING OF BUTTER

Toronto.

BUTTER.—No change is reported in the market for butter this week. Prices are steady, and dealers state that they are strong. Buying for export is very active at Montreal and this fact is one of the reasons for the strength of the butter situation at the present time.

CHEESE IS UNCHANGED

Toronto.

CHEESE.—The market in cheese is much the same as a week ago. Wholesalers announce no changes as far as prices are concerned. Large new cheese is quoted at 20c. per lb., large September cheese being 24c. Some dealers are quoting new stiltons a cent lower than last week, at 23c. per lb. There appears to be an active inquiry and buying is in good volume.

EGGS.—The market for eggs is somewhat easier this week as compared with last. Eggs for packing have been pretty well bought, and supplies coming forward are greater than immediate consumption can take care of. Consequently the market has declined a cent per dox. Number 1 eggs are quoted at from 31 to 32 cents per doz. while selects are from 34 to 35c. per doz.

FRESH MEATS ARE FIRM

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—The market for fresh meats is strong, in spite of the fact that the demand is not as heavy during a period of hot weather as at other times. Live hogs are steady this week at last week's advance on the basis of $15 fed and watered. Dressed light hogs are quoted at from $21 to $22 per cwt. and the heavy hogs are from $17 to $18 per cwt. Legs of pork up to 15 lbs. are 32c. and loins are 32c. Fresh hams are 34c. and tenderloins are 45c. WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG, July 21.—The feature of the provision market is the decline in prices on butter and cheese. Eggs are arriving in good quantities but a heavy spoilage is reported. You Pay Rent to Catch Trade—Be Sure You Get it

To be sure of maximum trade, you locate where the trade is. And then you must tell your trade that you want business. The simplest, as well as the most economical, way is to install a Bowser Chief Sentry, now advertised nationally as being the most reliable gasoline pump for the motorist to patronize.

You can ride on this Bowser publicity only by installing Bowser equipment. Motorists are being taught to look for and find Bowser pumps to be sure of most miles per gasoline dollar.

With a Bowser, it is only a step from the curb to larger profits. Install a Chief Sentry at once. Cash in on the Bowser publicity and make your bank account grow.

Ask for booklet C-11 which describes the Chief Sentry's many points of superior mechanical excellence and tells how it insures accurate service—how the sight glass shows the customer the pump is full—how the tally bell announces delivery of each gallon of gasoline—how the dial indicators show the total amount purchased—how the water separator insures gasoline as dry and pure as when fresh from the refinery.

These five points of Bowser superiority will sell more gasoline for you and insure larger profits. Get the Booklet at once!

A Few Centuries Ago

WHEN printing was in its infancy, most people seldom saw what we call a newspaper, and few ever saw a book. Most people could not have read them if they had seen them.

Nowadays, in Canada alone, there are hundreds of newspapers and periodicals, vast organizations employing thousands of skilled investigators and news gatherers, who turn out the many newspapers, technical and other periodicals. It is impossible for any one person to read all the papers published in Canada. If it were possible for a person to read them he would acquire a vast store of information, but he would not have any time left to turn his information to practical use.

If you, for instance, could have someone read these papers for you and clip items concerning your own line of business, your particular private interests, etc., it would be better than reading all the papers.

This is where we come in.

It is OUR BUSINESS to furnish clippings on any subject. We read all the papers and send you only clippings that interest you. Tell us your needs and we will tell you how we can serve you. The charges are moderate, because we will be reading not only for you, but for many other satisfied clients.

What is the Grocer going to do with the Russian Ruble of the Grocery Business ?

ANY banker can tell you that the Russian Ruble business is terribly dull. Why? No demand!

An artist, with a peculiar sense of humor and too many Rubles, decorated his studio with a few thousand of them. He thought they were cheaper than wall paper.

And in many grocery stores throughout the country, one can find another unique, but costly wall decoration—unadvertised and unknown brands of grocery products.

You won't find POST TOASTIES, GRAPE-NUTS, INSTANT POSTUM or POSTUM CEREAL inactive on the shelf of the retail grocer—because the Canadian Postum Cereal Company guarantees the sale as well as the quality of these four popular products.

When a concern like the Canadian Postum Cereal Company, Limited, guarantees, it knows pretty well what it's doing.

A year-round publicity policy—systematic and uninterrupted—together with quality of the highest degree at reasonable prices to the consumer, insures Consumer Demand. That assures the Canadian Postum Cereal Company that their Guarantee Policy is a safe one.

So you see,

How He Got His Man

A merchant in Montreal wanted a man to manage his store. He advertised in the daily papers and secured many replies. He also used an announcement in the Want Ad. page of CANADIAN GROCER and several replies were received. He chose his man from the latter. In fact, the only men who at all suited his purpose, were those who applied through this paper.

CANADIAN GROCER reaches business men in the trade. There are good men scattered all over Canada who read the CANADIAN GROCER and who are interested in such a proposition.

To get the man you want; to secure a position; a partner, to sell some used equipment; to buy second-hand equipment, use the Want Ad page of CANADIAN GROCER. It gets results.

GRENOBLE WALNUTS WILL BE DELAYED

The Grenoble walnut crop will not be fit to be shipped until October-November, according to reports, and unless something happens in the meantime the crop promises to be a very good one. The crop of marbot walnuts will be larger than the average and the crop of cornes will be a good average one and larger than last year. The filbert market has been holding its own. From all indications it would appear that the crop of Brazil nuts this year will approach very closely to 30,000 tons. England will take a large quantity. Brazils are selling in England for 6d per pound, and consumers are taking them freely. The primary market has declined slightly during the past week, due to expected heavy arrivals this month.

Who left the door unlocked last night?
Who unlocked it this morning?
Who unlocked it yesterday after closing time?

These are questions that closely affect your business, Mr. Merchant. If you would like to have absolute control over (1) the identity of every person using a key in your door (2) which side of the door the key was used in (3) the exact day, hour and minute the key was used—we can give it to you with the

INTERNATIONAL
Recording Door Lock
And Autographic Recorder

What it is A system comprising any number of locks from one to eight, each containing a set of electrical contacts. These locks are connected by wire to a Receiving Instrument.

How it is used Each lock is supplied with eight keys, each key being designated by an alphabetical character, A, B, C, etc. When any key is turned in any lock the proper electrical contacts are made, which operate the printing mechanism in the recording instrument. This identifies that particular key user at that particular time. After unlocking the door, the user of the key steps to the Lock Autographic Recorder, where he writes his signature under the printed record made by the key—thus preventing the transfer of a key to improper hands.

Police records show that thousands of doors are left unlocked at night. Your stock is too valuable to be left at the mercy of carelessness—or in the hands of anyone who has or can get a key to your premises. Let us show you how the International system protects you. Write us for particulars.

Let VALUE Be The Basis of Your Business

As long as Macdonald's gives the smoker more tobacco for his money, so long will the smoker prefer Macdonald's Tobaccos. And as long as you can supply him with such tobaccos, just so long can you expect to hold his custom.

There is only one sure foundation for a profitable, permanent business —and that is VALUE. The term Value includes, of course, Quality. The name Macdonald's stands for both. That it stands for Profits, too, a trial will convince you.

Quaker Talks

No. 4.

The Quality in Package Rolled Oats.

Only the best rolled oats that can be made go into the "Quaker" package.

Because the sealed package bears the Quaker Trade Mark—a name which signifies unfailing quality.

Each package is the representative of the Quaker Mills in Canadian homes, so each must contain the best rolled oats that can be milled or we could not hope to have people keep on buying Quaker Oats and also induce them to try other Quaker products.

Naturally, the first cost on rolled oats in bulk both to dealer and consumer is less than that of Quaker Oats, but the consumer does not get the quality and the insurance of quality contained in the worthy, reputable, trade-marked package.

From the dealer's standpoint too little consideration is given to the cost of handling bulk rolled oats —this means weighing out, supplying bags and string, loss of clerk's time, loss of money on down weight and the inevitable waste of the last few pounds in the bottom of the bin.

Bulk is handled at your own risk, but if a customer brings back a package of Quaker Oats, that is our loss, not yours—we are unqualifiedly responsible.

Quaker Rolled Oats mean "quality" oats in perfect condition, free of dust, no waste, no loss, money in the till on every sale, and a quick turn-over all the time.

There is good money for you in rolled oats if you feature pure Quaker Oats in sealed packages. There is more satisfaction for your customer.

My dear Hunter:

Referring to our conversation, I am very pleased to confirm to you my statement that we have obtained exceedingly satisfactory results from our advertisement in the "Canadian Grocer".

I have no hesitation in saying that I firmly believe that any product, no matter how high a class it is, will obtain considerable benefit if it is advertised in the right way in the right kind of a periodical.

Yours very truly,

How He Got His Man

A merchant in Montreal wanted a man to manage his store. He advertised in the daily papers and secured many replies. He also used an announcement in the Want Ad. page of CANADIAN GROCER and several replies were received. He chose his man from the latter. In fact, the only men who at all suited his purpose, were those who applied through this paper.

CANADIAN GROCER reaches business men in the trade. There are good men scattered all over Canada who read the CANADIAN GROCER and who are interested in such a proposition.

To get the man you want; to secure a position; a partner, to sell some used equipment; to buy second-hand equipment, use the Want Ad page of CANADIAN GROCER. It gets results.

Promise of Good Crops Helps Trade

Minister of Agriculture in Quebec Declares That Crops in That Province Are 30 Per Cent. Better Than Last Year—Optimistic Outlook Already Has Had a Stimulating Effect on Trade, Say Wholesale Grocers

MONTREAL, Special—There is little doubt in this province now about the condition of crops. From every quarter come reports of good crops in all lines and it is apparent that the rural districts will have an abundant harvest with improved financial conditions this fall.

"Economic conditions may not return to normal immediately as a result of the bumper crop in sight but the situation will be better than even the most optimistic expectations," said Hon. J. E. Caron, Minister of Agriculture, after an inspection trip through the lower St. Lawrence district. In his opinion the crop in general will be about 30 per cent. bigger than last year. He claims that the farms both in the lowlands and the highlands of Quebec look very prosperous.

Not only is the hay and clover crop which guarantees fodder much over the crop of 1920, which was considered excellent, but wheat, potatoes, and garden products are abundant and are of the best quality. The County of Rimouski, which was one in particular visited by the Minister of Agriculture and has a reputation of being Quebec's centre of production of popatoes, this year has an abundant crop of potatoes already ripening.

Effect on Grocery Trade

Already the prospects of the good crop has had an effect upon the grocery trade. Armand Chaput, general manager of L. Chaput Fils, Ltee., wholesale grocers of Montreal, told Canadian Grocer that there are marked signs of improvement throughout the Province of Quebec. "Our travellers have been off the territory for the last two weeks," he said, "but according to the reports we have, the trade is looking forward to the fall with expectations. One thing is sure, and that is that the people in the rural districts will have more money to spend and the grocers in those districts will be able to clear off back debts and put their business on a sounder basis. In my opinion although I do not expect a miraculous recovery, I feel sure that this year's harvest will do much to put the grocery trade on a better basis."

Improvement in Buying

"It is a little early yet to look for the good effect of the heavy crops in this province," said Constant Gendreau, sales manager of Lacaille Gendreau and treasurer of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild of Montreal, to a Canadian Grocer representative. "Undoubtedly there are signs however. The advancing sugar market has stimulated sales all round. Many retail grocers took advantage of the low price before the advance and now they are pushing its sale with the result that it has improved sales in other lines. Canned goods have been moving freely during the past few weeks. The most pronounced improvement, in my opinion will come in credit. In practically all the retail grocery stores, stocks have been allowed to dwindle down as low as possible. This has been necessitated by the scarcity of ready money and has been the wisest plan but note that prosperity in the rural districts is almost assured, the grocers will feel justified, in fact compelled, to buy more heavily. Then too, the wholesalers will have reason to believe that the money is there to pay for the goods and the risk will be lessened.

Some New Labelling Regulations

Amendments Made in Regard to Use of Coloring Matter—Use of Colour in Pale Salmon—Presence of Additional Fruit to be Put on Label

Ottawa, July 27, (Special)—Further amendments have been put through by Order-in-Council in connection with labelling food products, use of coloring matter, and changes in Food Standards.

The new regulations amend those put through in December of 1920. The labelling and coloring matter changes are as follows:

Labelling

Paragraph 3 is hereby cancelled and following is substituted:

"3. When the article is a compound, a mixture, a substitute, an imitation or is artificial, these words shall appear on the main panel of the main label in type of the same size and visibility as the common name used, and as part of the same."

The following new paragraphs are hereby added to Part I:

"7. In Food-Compounds or Mixtures, containing less than 51 per cent. of the chief ingredient, or where a distinctive name is used, the percentage of the ingredients must be stated, under the name of the articles in letters ¼ the size of and of the same visibility as the letters used to designate the article.

"8. (a) A 'distinctive name' is a trade, arbitrary or fancy name which clearly distinguishes a food product, compound or mixture from any other food product, compound or mixture.

"(b) A distinctive name shall give no false indication of origin, character, or place of manufacture, nor lead the purchaser to suppose that it is any other food product.

"9. When a statement of weight is given on the label or package, it shall be the weight of contents.

"10. When color or preservative which requires declaration; or an artificial flavor is added, these shall be declared on the main panel of the main label in easily legible type.

"11. If Saccharine or any other substitute for sugar is used, the presence of such substitute shall be declared on the main panel of the main label."

Part II—General Instructions to Inspectors

Paragraph 14 is hereby cancelled and the following is substituted therefor:

"14. An amendment to the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act provides that registered articles can only be sold legally by manufacturers when the license fee for the year is paid. A list of registered articles, upon which the license fee has been paid, will be furnished to every inspector and it will be the duty of the inspector to take action as instructed."

P. C. 81—1921

Part V.—Coloring Matter in Food

Paragraph 1 is hereby amended by adding the words "Smoked Fish" after "Extract of Lemon," and also by adding the following notes:

Note 1.—The term "Confectionery" is understood to include the class of fancy biscuits, generally used with ice cream and as desserts, which are essentially sugar products, and usually, or very frequently coated with sugar. These articles are not essentially food products, in the sense of being eaten for their nutritive value, although they possess such value in the same sense that candy has nutritive value. They are properly regarded as intermediate between nutritive foods proper and candy proper, and more nearly akin to the latter than to the former class.

"In the event of doubt to the classification of specific articles, samples must be submitted for analysis, when the decision of the chief analyst shall be accepted as final."

Note 2. "When reddish coloring matter is used on pale or white-fleshed smoked salmon, it shall be declared on the package or label as provided for in sub-section 3."

The last note at the end of Part V is hereby cancelled and the following is substituted therefor:

"The dyes listed above, when certificated by acceptable authorities are believed to be sufficient in number and character to meet all necessary requirements so far as food is concerned and are recognized as harmless to health in the permitted amounts."

Part IX.—Fruit and Fruit Products

The following note is hereby added after paragraph 1:

Note.—"Citrus fruit in which 15 per cent. or more gives evidence of having been injured by frost, shall be regarded as unsound and inedible."

Use of Pectin

Paragraph 10 is hereby cancelled and the following is substituted therefor:

"10. When jam, marmalade, fruit, butter or jelly contains other fruit or fruit juice than that which gives its special name to the article, the fact of the presence of such other fruit shall be stated upon the label, in lettering as large and as distinct as that used in naming the fruit principally present. The requirement does not apply to the use of 10 per cent. of other fruit juice, such fruit juice having a pectin content of not more than 75 per cent. (or the equivalent in pectin preparation or fruit juice of pectin content other than above) as may be determined by analysis."

Remainder of the changes in the Food Standards will be published in next issue.

JAMES S. WALLACE IS KILLED BY FALL

On Friday last Mr. Wallace left Toronto for his usual stay at his Summer home on Fancy Free Island, Rideau Lake. Saturday morning he climbed to the top of a poplar tree to cut off some dead limbs. He must have slipped or caught hold of a dead branch, for when found by two neighbors who were attracted by groans, he was lying unconscious on the ground. A doctor was summoned from a nearby Island who discovered that Mr. Wallace suffered a fracture of the fifth vertebrae. After consultation he was taken to the hospital at Smith's Falls Sunday night and operated upon, but death came on Monday morning.

Born in Bruce County in 1868, James Wallace came to Toronto while still a boy. Following attendance at city schools, he entered the services of Taylor, Scott and Company, a firm which at that time was handling brooms and brushes from its office on Scott Street. Some thirty years ago he became a member of the staff of the Surprise Soap Company, with which he remained until his death. For some years he occupied the position of sales manager.

NEW SALADA OFFICES IN LONDON ENGLAND

The Salada Tea Company has removed its London, England, offices from 1 Mincing Lane, to the new "Port of London" Building. This building was recently erected because of the increasing world trade which made larger quarters necessary for the port officials. Reliable information indicates that the flow of shipping to and from London, the greatest port in the world is again established. For some time much was diverted to Liverpool and Southampton, but the facilities now offered by the port of London to the merchant ships of the world are such that the miles of docks and warehouses are again quite active.

Calgary—L. L. Stephens has been appointed manager of the wholesale and retail grocery departments of the Hudson Bay Co. at Calgary. Mr. Stephens has had a number of years' experience in the grocery business both in Western Canada and in England before coming to this country.

Easier Selling During Rush Hours

E. Guillet, Cobourg, Ont., Claims Pivoted Bin Equipment Permits a Larger Assortment to be Carried in a Small Space—Allows More Time for Selling When Business is at the Peak

THE RETAIL GROCER is probably about the busiest of all merchants. That is during the hours when business is at the peak, he has less time to devote to individual customers than is the case with his fellow business associates in other lines of trade. The reason for this, no doubt, is brought about by the fact that the majority of citizens, leave the purchasing of table supplies until the last moment, or in the event of having purchased the bulk of their supplies, there is generally some little thing which they need at the last moment. Then there is either a rush for the telephone or a last minute trip to the grocer.

It is at the peak of the business day, that the retail grocer feels the need of equipment that will lessen the number of steps, and assist him to get speedy service without in any way interfering with the policy of the house of making satisfied customers, serving them intelligently and supplying quality merchandise.

This then, is one of the reasons why E. Guillet, Cobourg, Ont., has such a high opinion of the wall cases with pivoted bins counters and other equipment with which this store is fitted. On both sides of the store are to be seen glass front bins forming a wall case and upon the top of which are shelves. These bins work on a pivot, are easily opened and with a touch of the finger will close. Thus making them when not open for the purpose of selling, an air tight compartment. And having a glass front, they have the appearance of a show case.

The rear part of the counters are likewise fitted with pivoted bins.

Big Assortment in Small Space

"This arrangement allows us to carry a greater assortment of goods, in a smaller space," stated Mr. Guillet to a representative of Canadian Grocer. "Everything is kept handy which makes it easier and quicker to serve customers. People seem to be so much in a hurry, that a merchant must have his store equipped in such a way, that customers are not kept waiting. A good fast service coupled with good merchandise will bring people back to the store.

"Another thing about these bins, is that they are dust proof," continued Mr. Guillet. "You will notice that each bin is fitted into a separate compartment, making it practically impossible for anything to get in. Then they work on a pivot which makes them easy to open. They do not stick in any weather, such as often happens with ordinary drawers. The glass fronts are another feature which we like. The contents of the bins can be seen by the customer, which undoubtedly helps sales. And then on account of having everything so handy we are able to devote more time to the actual selling during the rush hours."

Merchants Selling Ice Cream Of Their Own Make Must Procure License

Ruling Imposed by Federal Budget Make it Imperative That Manufacturers of Ice Cream Selling Over the Counter, Take Out a License—Soda Fountain Owners Also to Pay a Fee

SEVERAL new rulings concerning the sales tax imposed by the Federal budget, are now in force.

Manufacturers of ice cream who dispose of their product over their own counters must take out a license costing $2 and pay a 4 per cent. sales tax.

Soda water fountain owners and stores who dispose of drinks over their counters not made by bottling works establishments must pay a license fee of $2 also, and turn over 5 per cent. sales tax to the excise authorities. This order came into effect July 1st. Under this latter regulation, purveyors of soft drinks of their own make who sell at summer resorts are held liable.

Retailers Openly Oppose Receipt Tax

Convention of Eastern Ontario and Ottawa District Branch R.M.A. Passes Resolution Authorizing Dominion Board to Fight Tax on Receipts—Many Merchants Unaware of Nature of Receipts To Be So Taxed

BROCKVILLE, Ont.—Two hundred retail merchants, representative of various lines of trade in Ottawa and many parts of Eastern Ontario, assembled in convention in Brockville, Ont., on Wednesday afternoon unanimously endorsed the receipt tax resolution shown on this page. It was moved by A. D. Carscallen of Tamworth, and seconded by L. N. Poulin of Ottawa.

Thanks to the organizing ability of J. C. Campbell, secretary of the Eastern Ontario district, and to the valuable assistance rendered by the Brockville committee, the convention arrangements were carried out without a hitch. The attendance was good and the delegates entered enthusiastically and earnestly into the discussions. The chair was occupied by Henry Watters, president of the Eastern Ontario district association and managing director of the Standard Drug Co., Ottawa, and a lengthy but enlightening exposition of the Sales Tax was given by E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Board, Retail Merchants' Association of Canada.

In the evening a banquet was held in the town hall, and the business part of the programme was concluded Thursday morning.

The Brockville committee in charge of arrangements consisted of: A. M. Patterson, chairman; H. W. Gilhooley, vice-chairman; H. J. Muldoon, secretary, and William Rhoades, treasurer.

Let Businessmen Run the Country

The spirit manifested throughout the meeting was that the government should step aside and let businessmen run the business of the country. There was altogether too much interference with trade.

The delegates were welcomed by Mr. Patterson, who expressed the hope that the day was close at hand when every retail merchant in Canada would be identified with some branch of the R. M. A. He said it was in their interests to do so.

Mr. Trowern confined his remarks entirely to taxation matters. It was one of the most important and perplexing problems with which the association had to contend. The difficulty was that legislation was being introduced from time to time by men who knew absolutely nothing about business. In his opinion taxation should be simply to raise revenue, and for no other purpose. He said there were at present ten systems of taxation, all of which were tumbling over each other and costing the country thousands of dollars. There was not even a vestige of system about it. He compared the government plan with that of the Retail Merchants' Association, where one assessment was made for all purposes.

Mr. Trowern thought Canada was too sparsely populated to have any cumbersome system of taxation. The time had come when it was up to the retail merchants to stand up to the government and demand their rights. There was no use waiting for another change of government, for one party was as bad as the other. "I would tell the politicians to step aside," he said, "and leave the business of this country to businessmen."

"Whereas in the opinion of this convention the placing of stamps on all receipts of ten dollars and over for the purpose of raising revenue is an unnecessary and annoying arrangement and one that will fail to accomplish the object in view, we recommend that the tax be abolished, and request the Dominion Board to take the matter up with the Government."

Judges Cannot Understand It

The speaker then proceeded to show the density of the act. Even the judges could not understand it. He was prepared to give one hundred dollars to some charitable institution, if anybody could explain to him what the Sales Tax Act meant.

Reference was next made to the classification of certain retail merchants as manufacturers, and Mr. Trowern pointed out that it was only after a great struggle that the government was induced to exclude certain retailers from this classification. These included blacksmiths and tinsmiths, but there were still a number who were being unjustly placed under that classification, and therefore there was still a big fight ahead.

"I tell you," said Mr. Trowern, "that we have got to be consulted before the government puts over any more such freak legislation."

"It is not the people who are running this country, but the officials of the various government departments."

Receipt Tax

Following Mr. Trowern's address, there was a discussion of the receipts tax with the subsequent adoption of the resolution quoted above. From the discussion, it was seen that the delegates were very much at sea as to the government's intention in this regard. Some were under the impression that all retail merchants were obliged to give receipts whether they wanted to or not, and some could not make out, from the wording of the Act what a receipt constituted. Mr. Trowern said his impression was that a receipt was any slip of paper upon which an acknowledgment of purchase was made, whether it was only an ordinary scrap of paper or a regularly printed receipt.

Canadian Grocer's representative pointed out that the department had not yet made any hard and fast rules. He had been informed by a high official that it was the intention in the near future to draft regulations governing this section, and until these were forthcoming it was only guess work to say what would and would not happen.

However, it was the general opinion that it was a clumsy piece of legislation and should be struck off the statute books before it had any opportunity of doing the harm it was bound to do.

Last Minute Doings at Brockville

As we go to press the following wire is received from Canadian Grocer's representative at the convention of Eastern Ontario retailers at Brockville.

Resolutions adopted on Thursday are as follows:—1. Request to the government to redraft the Sales Tax so its meaning will be better understood.

2. Convey to the government our regret that the legislation so carelessly drafted has been allowed to pass the House and Senate.

3. Request Dominion Board to have all advertisements referring to co-operative societies, farmers' clubs and chain stores carefully scrutinized and to prosecute firms using false and misleading advertisements.

4. Request Dominion Board to strongly oppose proposed bill which would prevent manufacturers fixing prices on their product. Most members favored price fixing by manufacturers as long as sufficient spread was allowed.

It was the unanimous opinion that the provincial legislature was attempting to obstruct retail merchants from carrying on their business in a legitimate, honest and straightforward manner.

Claims Chain Store Ads Misleading

Eastern Ontario Retailers in Convention Discusses Chain Store Advertising—Charges a Number of Firms With False Representation—Members Favor Price Fixing—Oppose Minimum Wage Scale

BROCKVILLE, Ont.—The first annual summer conference of the Ottawa district and Eastern Ontario retail merchants, was concluded on Thursday. Considering the time of the year, and the numerous other counter attractions, the attendance was encouraging. The most noticeable feature was the intense interest displayed by the delegates throughout the proceedings.

The conference opened the eyes of the officials to the lack of understanding which exists in regard to the present net-work of taxation. The address given on the Sales Tax, at the opening session, by E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Board, and the discussion which followed, was invaluable to the delegates.

The hospitality shown by the Brockville merchants, and the general spirit of good fellowship which was in evidence at all times, together with the beneficial discussions during the business sessions went to make the conference a complete success.

Chain Store Advertisements

The Thursday morning session opened with the introduction of a resolution calling upon the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association, to have all advertisements referring to co-operative societies, farmers' clubs and chain stores carefully scrutinized and to prosecute those firms whose advertisements were false and misleading. The resolution charged that a number of these concerns were endeavoring to secure custom by false representation of the manner in which they were conducting their business.

Mr. Trowern stated that certain of the chain stores, were professing to do what they well knew they were not doing. Chain store advertisements contained the information that a certain product they sold, in some cases was imported directly from the producers in far away places. "This is not true and I am going to make it my business to give the public the real facts," he said.

"Such advertising leaves the impression that the wholesale house is not necessary," said Mr. Trowern, "and moreover it aims a blow at we retailers who are endeavoring to do business in an honest manner. If there is a place in the communuity worth preserving, then it is up to us to preserve it."

Anti Price-Cutting

The provincial government's anti-price fixing bill came in for some discussion and a resolution was adopted requesting the Dominion Board to use every effort to see that the retail merchants were properly protected and safeguarded and to strongly oppose any legislation that tended to interfere and obstruct retail merchants from carrying on their business in a legitimate, honest and straightforward manner.

It was pointed out by the chairman that the proposed legislation to prevent manufacturers fixing prices on their products was a dangerous and unwarranted interference with the trade and commerce of Canada. The delegates were informed that the government had appointed a special committee to report on the bill and to hear the views of those interested.

"This proposed legislation restricts all arrangements that might be made between manufacturers and wholesalers and wholesalers and retailers," said chairman Watters.

"Are we all in favor of price fixing?" asked a delegate.

"I think we are, providing that in each case a proper spread is provided for," replied the chairman.

Favor Price Fixing

Mr. Trowern said he thought the manufacturers could be relied upon to strongly oppose the bill.

There was considerable discussion regarding the operations of transient traders, hawkers and peddlers, which culminated in the adoption of a resolution requesting the legislature to give a clearer definition of these classes in order that prosecution might be facilitated. Mr. Trowern pointed out that many years ago he had expressed dissatisfaction with it and had attempted on many occasions to have it changed, but had not been successful.

"The principal fault with the act," said Mr. Trowern, 'is that it will never be made to work satisfactorily in all sections of the province. Certain regulations will have to be made for certain districts, because we find that whereas there are some districts where the transient traders are welcomed with open arms, there are others where they are not wanted at all."

Minimum Wage Act

A resolution protesting against the proposed extension of the Minimum Wage Act for clerks was passed with little discussion, the association stating that while no objection was taken to a minimum wage board, it was felt that its functions should be confined to the hearing of complaints from those clerks who felt they were not receiving proper attention, and the board should in no manner dictate to the merchants what salaries they should pay. There should be no intereference wtih the principle that all clerks be paid according to their ability to earn, and not by any fixed scale made either by the government or by trade unions.

The delegates were tendered a banquet by the Brockville merchants on Wednesday evening, which proved to be a delightful affair. Short addresses were delivered by chairman Henry Watters, E. M. Trowern, Hugh Macdonald, mayor of Renfrew; L. N. Poulin, Ottawa; provincial secretary Millar, the latter giving a brief but interesting resume of recent provincial legislation.

Those who attended the conference were: Howard Ransom, Wales; S. G. Eamon, Ornsbruck Centre; R. R. Drysdale and A. MacDonald, Lanark; I. S. Church, Arnprior; T. A. Wright, Perth; R. SATISFACTORY MEASURE FOR VINEGAR HARD TO OBTAIN

Canadian Grocer recently had an enquiry from a subscriber for names of manufacturers of vinegar measures, and quotations on same. It seems to be almost impossible to get a satisfactory measure for vinegar. One manufacturer of measures points out that the trouble is that no material has been secured that is immune to the action of the acids in vinegar. "We believe," they added, "if we had measures made of the necessary acid resisting qualities, we could sell two carloads within the next six months."

The business men of Birch Cliff will hold a carnival on Civic Holiday, August 7. A prize will be given for the best decorated float and a large program of sports has been provided.

Study of Weather Aids Advertisers

"THE effectiveness of advertising by retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers can be greatly increased by careful attention to weather and climate," says the Bulletin of the American Meteorological Society.

There is no doubt whatever that consumers generally are influenced largely in their purchases by the season of the year and that they more readily respond to advertisements of merchandise that are particularly suitable to the atmospheric condition existing at the time the advertisement appears. For instance an advertisement on cooling beverages would bring little result when the snow is skirling through the air and there is a frosty crackle under foot. But such an advertisement appearing during the warm days of the summer season would bring a ready response.

A few days ago the writer noticed an advertisement in a newspaper by a merchant, offering "the finest fruits for the Christmas Cake." No doubt this advertisement had been running since last Christmas but that merchant could hardly expect to get any results by offering Christmas lines to consumers in July.

A careful study of weather conditions will reveal to the merchant just the kind of merchandise which will appeal to consumers for that particular season and advertisements written with this point in view are bound to result satisfactorily.

Lemons and Speculation

A YEAR ago lemons were selling at $15 a box in July. This year they dropped from $6.50 to $5.00 a box during the first part of the same month.

Canada imports lemons from Sicily. The weather is the big factor in regard to the consuming market. When the importer places his orders he does not know what the weather is going to be. He takes the speculator's chance. He provides the capital to finance the transaction; if it is a hot season he profits, if it is a cool season he loses. That is the economic part the speculator plays in business.

The daily newspapers like The Toronto Star, says an editorial in THE FINANCIAL POST, which appeal to public prejudice against the high cost of living to spread their insidious socialistic propaganda against business, however, continue to lead the public to think that speculation works one way only—that it is merely a question of gouging the consumer when opportunity offers. The Star declares for instance that "a year ago lemons were not only sold in the regular way but were being speculated in; the result was a wholesale price of $15 per box." No reference is made to the fact that speculators have just as much to do with the declining price this year as with the rising price last year.

As long as Canadians want lemons in summer and they have to be brought from the Mediterranean there will be speculation and the price will depend upon supply and demand as regulated by the weather. If the Star has a better system than that of price to regulate consumption let it make a suggestion and not merely the usual socialistic appeal to public prejudice.

Explains Cheque Tax

A CIRCULAR letter has been issued by the head office of the Bank of Montreal explaining the stamp taxes on cheques which come into force on August 1. The letter points out that on all bank cheques, receipts for money paid by a bank chargeable against deposit, express money orders or travellers' cheques, and postal money orders, if the amount of money involved does not exceed $50, the tax is two cents. If the amount of money involved exceeds $50, but does not exceed $5,000, for every $50 or fraction thereof the tax is 2 cents. If the amount of money involved exceeds $5,000 the tax is $2.

In connection with cheques, regulations may be made by the Minister of Finance governing the issue of embossed cheques, which regulations have already been published in Canadian Grocer of July 14.

On bills of exchange, promissory notes, documents or writings in respect of an advance made or to be made by a bank, and bank over-drafts, if the amount of money involved does not exceed $50, the tax is 2 cents. If the amount exceeds $50, for every $50 or fraction thereof the tax is 2 cents. In the case of bills of exchange involving sums of money in excess of $5,000, and when such bills are payable on demand or at sight or on presentation, or within three days after date or sight. stamps to the value of $2 only are required to be affixed.

On promissory notes payable on demand, and given to a bank for an advance by the bank, a stamp to the value of 2 cents only is required, whatever the amount of money for which the note is made. The banks will prepare quarterly statements showing the maximum amount of advances represented by such notes outstanding at close of business on any day during the period, and will affix thereto stamps to the value of 2 cents for every $50 or fraction thereof by which the maximum amount of advances exceeds $50, which is to be payable by the person to whom the advance was made.

Editorials in Brief

EVEN nuts are not always what they are cracked up to be.

EXPERIENCE is a great school—but it takes a wise man to know when he is ready for his diploma.

IT IS ALL right for the customer to be in a hurry. You have nothing to do with that, but it is not all right for you to hurry a customer and you cannot afford to do it.

IT IS SAID that Prince Eric of Denmark is working in a creamery in Alberta that he may become more familiar with the manufacture of Canadian butter and pick up any wrinkles that may be useful to his own country. Consumers in reaching across the table for the butter these days may unwittingly jab a slice of real princely product.

RESIDENTS in the Parry Sound districts have ceased to send to the store for a measure of potatoes, they simply send for a potato, so it is said. The reason for this is that potatoes in that district this year are incredibly large—in fact one potato, when peeled and ready for cooking, filled a ten pound lard pail, sufficient for fifteen meals.

More on the Subject of Investments

Investment of Savings Must Be Regarded From An Altogether Different Angle From Any Investment For Profit—Further Enlightenment on the Subject of Some Expenses

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

LET ME try to make one point clear on the subject of my last paper. That is, investment of savings must be regarded from an altogether different angle from any investment for profit.

In our daily business we invest for profit. That involves a certain degree of hazard, chance and risk. It is entirely proper to do that in a business way. For there our risk or hazard is offset by the expectation of profit.

But the investment of our savings is different. Here we are conserving our resources. We are husbanding a competence against the time when we shall be past the age of productive work. Therefore, here we must forget profit. We are not after making money except such as may result from the steady accretion of the most conservative investment on the safest basis of earnings.

Incidentally I may say that in such conservative accumulations lies not only the most certain gains, but in most cases the only real gains ever made by any of us aside from our daily business. To seek ever for safety, for security, for such real investments as will earn such interest as is commensurate with the highest form of conservatism, is after all the surest way—and mostly the fastest way, if we can only believe it.

So forget the rate of interest when you make investments for your future comfort in the possession of a secure competence. Let your banker, your lawyer, your bond broker select what he feels is secure first and properly diversified, second. Do not crowd him with demands for a high yield. Remember the old saying:

"When fishing for high interest, be careful you don't swallow the hook!"

How Much to Put Away?

The question always comes up: How much should I put away out of my business? The main thing is to begin somewhere. Once you get into the habit of saving a definite sum monthly, once you see it accumulate into a few hundreds which in your heart you know you would not have had otherwise than through that habit, you will be safe.

But let us say that the smallest man can put away $10 a month. Let him begin with that. Further, it must be a very small business man who cannot put away $25 per month—and the chart published last week illustrates the tremendous potentialities of $25 per month!

Begin. Take the plunge on $25 per month. Take that sum out the first of each month regardless of anything else. Do not look at your bills, never mind your rent, think of nothing until that $25 is taken out and put away. As you follow out that habit monthly, learn to think of that as a sum that is lost—irretrievably lost. You have dropped it down a rat hole and cannot get it back. Handle interest received the same way—never touch a penny of it except to add enough money to make even money for further investments.

Keep it up. Never depart from this. Next rule:

Never increase the monthly amount until you have such knowledge of your affairs that you know you will never backslide; for the essence of this matter of savings and accumulation is undeviating steadiness. Illness or misfortune may come in—but never let such a contingency even shape itself in your mind. Then, when you increase, stay put!

One grocer I know who was making only about $3,500 net began with $150 a month. After two years, he increased $200. He lived carefully—he saved steadily after he got the idea. To-day he is independent. It will be the same with one who begins with $15 and grows to $20.

Canadian Grocer's Figures Confusing

The next question in my Canadian grocer's long letter is:

> What is a fair average wage for clerks in a store such as ours? Because ours is entirely country trade, also because the post office is in our store, we must keep open evenings except Wednesday and Friday, when we close at five. Our staff consists of:
> 1 girl, 18, six months' experience with us, per month .....$50.
> 1 boy, 18, three years with us ... 60.
> 1 truck driver ..... 50.
> Head clerk, over two years with us ..... 90.
> Bookkeeper, stenographer ..... 95.
> Proprietor, manager, buyer, salesman ....125.
> The bookkeeper also has charge of post office with some help from the proprietor. This brings a revenue of $30 per month to be credited to the salaries. What is a fair average salary for experienced and inexperienced clerks in this store? The young men sweep, look after fires, assist in checking and marking goods, and all assist in putting up goods for the branch store.

I have puzzled a lot over that section of this questionnaire, and I have failed to reconcile it to any impression I have derived from this long letter of the size of this business. For the important revelation that seems to come from study of the figures is that the wages and salary expenses are just short of 16.45 per cent. This is quite different from the statement copied in my last instalment—that this expense was only 4.88 per cent. to 9.8 per cent. during the years 1920-21.

Something seems to have escaped me, or to have been omitted from this letter; for, as given in my last, sales—including deliveries to the branch—totalled $21,400 for eight months and that equals $32,100 for the year. The salaries-wages list above shows $5,280 for the year and that figures as I have stated. Such a ratio would be ruinous. I am sure this business is not operating on any such ratio. I must therefore await some explanation or have indicated where I have overlooked something.

I cannot say that is "a fair average salary," because that is a very flexible quantity. It varies with location, times and conditions. It varies mostly by the special character of the employee and the service rendered. Given a total ratio of around 9 to 10 per cent. for wages and salaries as the limit, the merchant must adjust individual salaries as best he may within that ratio.

Shall We Tell Clerks Our Costs?

What is your experience and that of others in allowing clerks to know cost of goods? We notice some of your correspondents advocate this, claiming that clerks respond to such confidence. But what benefit is it to clerks or their work to know gross profit on sales—which is all they would see—as they could not know general running expenses, depreciation, incidental losses, etc? Does not such information tend to make them underrate the value of goods in their charge and exaggerate profits? The average clerk is not sufficiently interested to understand the great difference between the gross on sales and the net which remains in the business—and should they prove worthy of the confidence, they will not long remain "average clerks," but will be in the head clerk class who will use the knowledge for the benefit of their employers, not as news to be retailed to their friends and families. In the meantime, we believe that the interests of employers are better served if the clerks do not know too much about their employers' business.

It is not, to my mind, so much a matter of what you tell clerks as how you tell it; and, just as "a little knowledge

A New Biscuit Brings New Customers

These Merchants Find Biscuits and Candy Splendid Summer Lines—
Getting New Customers by Pushing a New Kind of Biscuit

"In my opinion biscuits are a splendid line to push in the summer months," remarked E. A. Kellaway, Belleville, Ont., to Canadian Grocer. "People want the things which are the easiest to prepare and as they quit baking as much as possible in the summer I find it a simple matter to turn their mind to buying biscuits. Then of course there is always a good demand for picnics. If a customer says they are going on a picnic and asks us to suggest something, biscuits is the first article we suggest."

"In handling biscuits, there is no occasion to have any waste. All that is required is a little care in buying so that stocks are not too heavy and see that the lines are kept moving. A good assortment is essential, because one line may suit one person but not another. If I find a certain line is not moving very fast, we work it off by putting a few in with an assortment when a customer just asks for mixed biscuits. Then we do not order that line again, but put in a new one."

Good Summer Lines

Candy is another line that is kept to the front in the Kellaway store. A large show case is situated near the front entrance wherein is displayed a good variety of chocolates, hard candies, in boxes and in bulk. Numerous kinds of five cent bars are also kept on display. Some of these are kept on the counter and on top of the display case so that they are readily seen by customers and offering a suggestion which has often terminated in a sale.

Mr. Kellaway stated he has often heard it remarked that the sale of candy drops during the summer months, but in this he cannot agree as according to his experience, candy sales are just as heavy in the summer as in the cooler months. "Perhaps the sale of certain lines of candy drops some. But other lines such as chocolate bars, are certainly larger in the summer than in the winter. Taking it altogether the average sales from month to month are about the same.

Pushing a New Biscuit

That it is very easy to develop sales on a new kind of biscuit is the opinion of H. O. Taylor, Cobourg, Ont., and judging from what he has been doing in this way, he has good reason for making the assertion

Not long ago, Mr. Taylor added a new biscuit to his assortment. One of his customers was giving a pink tea or something or other, and among the order for groceries for this occasion, was listed some biscuits of a dainty character. In putting up the order for biscuits, Mr. Taylor put in some of the new line. A couple of days later, he received four inquiries for that biscuit from strangers to his store, who stated that they first tasted them at Mrs. So and So and that she had said the biscuits could be obtained at Taylor's. During that week Taylor sold five tins of that one line.

That is just one method by which sales on biscuits are stimulated in the Taylor store and which is always carried out when a new biscuit is stocked. Another plan adopted by this store, is to suggest biscuits to every customer, both over the phone and when taking orders by personal contact in the store. And if the store has a new biscuit it is mentioned and shown as well.

"I believe it good business to take on new lines of biscuits from time to time," said Mr. Taylor. "It gives us something to talk about and most people are usually willing to try a new biscuit. Another thing a store that does this, soon gets a reputation for selling good biscuits and always having something new. Sometimes we get biscuits that do not always make a hit. In that case we simply work them off in mixed lots so that we have no loss with biscuits becoming stale."

Canadian Tea and Coffee Imports From U.S. Show Increase

Tea Imports for the Month of May Were 3,689,-279 Pounds—The U.S. Supplied Canada With 43,-510 Pounds of Coffee During May of This Year—An Increase Over April—Smaller Than May, 1921

A COMPARISON of the Canadian tea and coffee import figures for May, this year, with the previous month and also with the corresponding period in 1921 brings out some interesting points. Not the least is the fact that coffee imports from the United States during May were almost double those of April, and that tea imports also increased; although the total imports of both were considerably lower than in May, 1921.

In May, 1921, the total coffee imports were 1,293,351 pounds. These dropped to 250,595 pounds in April this year, but increased to 349,745 pounds in May. Tea imports for May, 1921, were 3,032,771 pounds, compared with 2,520,447 pounds in April, and 2,689,279 pounds in May this year.

During May this year the United States sent 43,510 pounds of coffee to Canada, as compared with 23,680 pounds in April and 105,376 pounds in May last year. A rather interesting point is the situation with respect to Jamaica. Imports from that country in May, 1921, were remarkably low as compared with those of recent months; whereas Jamaica accounted for only 13,360 pounds in May, 1921, she supplied 59,830 pounds in April and 105,391 pounds in May this year.

Despite what has been said about the impossibility of the United States increasing her tea trade with Canada, the figures throw a different light on the situation. That is the only country whose tea exports to Canada were greater in May this year than last. The figures show: May, 1921, 11,913 pounds; April, 1922, 57,016 pounds; May, 1922, 69,802 pounds.

Trading with the British Empire has been fairly evenly maintained over the year, while a slight falling off is noticed in connection with tea purchases from China. Japan is holding her own well and gradually getting back to her pre-war standing. Japan and the United States were the only foreign countries to make gains in May this year.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

In connection with the report that the United States was putting into effect an anti-dumping ruling on Canadian raspberries, the following letter has been received:

Editor, Canadian Grocer: As far as we can ascertain there were probably forty or fifty cases of raspberries shipped to United States last season from Canada. It is becoming more evident each day that the United States people do not propose to permit any goods to be shipped into their country if it can be avoided, and it seems to us that this is an opportunity for you to emphasize to the retail grocers the importance of buying their goods from Canadian manufacturers instead of importing large quantities of goods from the United States simply because they are approached by travellers with all kinds of inducements which appeal to them at the time.

Hamilton Grocers' Picnic Draws Crowd That Breaks All Previous Records

Big Program of Sports Provides Keen Excitement —Grocers Win Baseball Match From Travellers in Lively Contest

HAMILTON, July 24.—The annual picnic of the Hamilton grocers was held last Wednesday at Wabasso Park, when all attendance records were broken, the event proving more popular each succeeding year. The sports' program was an ambitious one, consisting of over thirty events. The baby show was again a feature this year, and the large number of entries made it difficult for the judges to make awards. In the baseball match between the grocers and the travellers, the former won by a score of 9 to 7. The teams were: Grocers—Willey (captain,) p; Arnold, c.f.; Frank Dunsmore, c.; D. Chown, r.f. A. Chowan, l.f.; Oswald, 3b.; Vansickle, 2b.; Grassie, s.s.; Gordon, 1b.

Travellers—Knox, (captain), c.f; McLaren, 3b.; Geo. Dunsmore, 1b.; Blowey, c; Sullivan, r.f; Cooper, 2b; Kirk, l.f; Hottrum, s.s; Long, p.

Umpires—Adams and Springstead.

Under the direction of Lieut. Harry Stares, the 91st Highlanders band, augmented by Toronto players for the day, maintained a festive atmosphere throughout the afternoon and evening. Their finished program of classical pieces, popular numbers, and last minute ragtime, was much appreciated. The dancing floor at the bayside casino was thronged with merrymakers from shortly after lunch time until late in the evening.

Indirectly responsible for the success of the jolly frolic are the officers of the Retail Grocers' association, who are: John Young, president; Robt. Gardiner, first vice-president; Fred White, second vice-president; James Main, treasurer; M. R. Hill, secretary; James Lawrie, W. Smye, George Dawson, J. L. Brown, James Kenney, executive committee.

The following members of the picnic committee proper had a busy time in keeping things running smoothly: Frank Smith, James Main, M. R. Hill, Gus Ante, James Lawrie, John Young, J. L. Brown.

New Mileage Bill In U.S.A. Will Benefit Travelling Salesmen

Washington, July 24.—That the Interchangeable Mileage Bill recently passed by Congress, will effect substantial savings in railroad travel for more than 600,000 people is stated by the National Council of Traveling Salesmen's Association. Not only will traveling salesmen benefit by this measure, but so will buyers in their trips to market, base-ball clubs, government officials and others who travel to any extent.

"The bill directs the Interstate Commerce Commission to require the issuance of an Interchangeable Mileage Book, good on all roads," said A. M. Loeb, president of the National Council, commenting on the successful conclusion of the council's fight for the bill.

"Heretofore the Interstate Commerce Commission indicated, when appeals were made for a moderation of rates, that it was not vested with the power, constitutionally, to authorize a general lowering of rates. Now the constitutional authority has been given, and it is expected and hoped that immediately following the signing of the bill by President Harding, the Interstate Commerce Commission will act without delay. One of the outstanding features of the new book, when issued, is that the traveler will not be required to carry a number of different books, inasmuch as the one form of book will be universally used and accepted.

London Retail Grocers' Association Make Merry At Annual Picnic

Seventeenth Annual Picnic Goes Down in History —The Committee Provided Excellent Program— The Baby Show a Real Feature

LONDON, Ont.—The 17th annual picnic of the London Retail Grocers' Association held at Port Stanley will go down in the history of the organization as perhaps the most enjoyable and successful of the many splendid outings put on by the grocers. In addition to the large crowd of local grocers and travellers there were many from the district in attendance and all had the best kind of time.

The committees were all working overtime, and having fixed things with the Weatherman so that one of the very choicest days of the whole summer was handed out, everyone proceeded to have the best kind of a time. The games and sports were entered into with an enthusiasm that only a crowd of grocers, who get chances to disport themselves only once a year, can show. A whole year's zest was packed into the few hours spent at the lakeside and not a moment of enjoyment was lost. The grocers not only had a good time themselves, but they made sure that everybody else had a good time too.

More than 100 babies were entered in the baby show and the judges, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Rowe had an exceedingly difficult task in making the awards.

The sports and other events went through with clock work regularity, and the committees were warmly commended on the excellence of their arrangements. Those responsible for the success of the outing were president, Ald. Gordon Drake, vice-presidents, A. Thrower and F. J. Lapthorne; secretary, F. C. Pierce; treasurer, P. H. Ranahan; executive committee, T. Shaw, J. A. McFarlane, J. McLeod, John Diprose and D. Patterson.

Assess Themselves to Fight Orientals

B.C. Retail Merchants to Collect Tax of $2 Per Member—Want All Wholesalers to Have Licenses—Harvey Murphy of Nanaimo the New President

Reported especially for this paper by WALTER F. ING

VICTORIA, B. C.—Reference was made in last week's issue to the annual convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of British Columbia and particularly to the president's and secretary's reports.

Between fifty and sixty delegates were in attendance, together with their wives, as well as a number of other retailers from different parts of the province. Delegates were registered from the following places and districts:

Vancouver, Victoria, New Westminster, Nanaimo, Chilliwack, Duncan, Hope, Spuzzum, Princeton, Kamloops, Ladner, North Vancouver, Enderby, Vernon, Kelowna, Cranbrook, Esquimault, Trail, Revelstoke.

Provincial President Jos. T. Crowder, of Vancouver, occupied the chair, and with him were Harvey Murphy, Nanaimo, 1st vice-pres.; G. H. Jacobson, New Westminster, 2nd vice-pres; D. Kent, Vancouver, treasurer.

Liquor Resolution Turned Down

Many important resolutions were before this convention for consideration, including a strongly worded resolution calling for the prohibition of the sale and importation of intoxicating liquors in British Columbia, this resolution being presented by the Grocers' Section of The Greater Vancouver District, on the ground that it was diverting an enormous amount of money from the regular business channels to be used for the purchasing of whiskey, etc. This resolution was turned down on the ground that the question was a moral one and one which the Retail Merchants' Association had nothing to do with.

Other resolutions placed before the convention from the different branches of the province were as follows:

Transient traders, peddlers and agents.

Cartage charges by wholesalers and manufacturers.

The Sales Tax and its collection.

Oriental exclusion—to assess all members in B C. the sum of $2.00 to carry on the fight. (Approved.)

To amend the Weekly Half Holiday Act, preventing auction sales on any holiday or half-holiday—referred to executive.

The Lord's Day Act—to have jurisdiction of same placed entirely in the hands of Provincial Legislature. (Lost.)

Peddlers' Licenses—to compel municipalities to collect before peddlers start business.—Referred to executive.

Wholesalers selling to consumers—against any wholesale firm selling to any person, firm or corporation other than persons, firms or corporations buying for the purpose of re-sale. (Approved.)

A resolution to the effect that no wholesaler shall sell to any person, firm or corporation without a license, such license to be issued by Federal Government. (Referred to incoming executive.)

Resolution to permit jewellers to sell articles left for repairs and not called for within a limited time. (Approved.) This resolution to be made the subject of a Bill to be presented at the next session of the B.C. Legislature.

A resolution covering removal of goods by householders, compelling moving and express men to keep record and report. (Referred back).

A resolution to the effect that only those persons entitled to vote at municipal elections be permitted to sign petitions for presentation to city or municipal councils, particularly in reference to the closing of stores. (Approved).

A resolution to make it impossible for druggists to do business in lines of goods handled by other stores who are compelled to close on a half-holiday. (Referred to incoming executive for action if found advisable.)

Premier Oliver One of Speakers

The speakers at the convention lunches and dinners, which were held in the Dominion Hotel, included Premier Oliver, who spoke on the freight rate fight being put up by British Columbia; Dean Miller of the University of Washington, on the "Economics of Distribution," and Dr. W. J. Hindley, of Spokane, who spoke at the official convention banquet, and who is the educational director for the State of Washington, for the State Retailers' Association. He took for his topic, "Who is responsible for the present merchandising problems?"

The New Officers

The election of executive officers for the ensuing year was as follows:

Harvey Murphy, Nanaimo, president; D. H. Kent, Vancouver, 1st vice-pres.; Harold Kent, Victoria, 2nd vice-pres.; A. P. G. McDonald, New Westminster, 3rd vice-pres.; T. F. McDowell, Vancouver, treasurer; Jos. T. Crowder, past president, was elected as representative for B. C. on the Dominion Executive Council.

Kamloops presented an invitation for the next convention to be held in that city, which was referred to the incoming executive and which will in all probability be chosen for the next meeting place.

Winnipeg Travellers Enjoy Lake Breezes

Winnipeg, (Special).—Travelling salesmen of Winnipeg with their wives, families and friends visited Grand Beach Saturday on the occasion of their annual picnic, and, as usual, experienced a perfectly pleasurable day, a day that was filled from start to finish with delights of all kinds. From the moment the first train pulled out of the Union depot in the morning, to the time the last passenger detrained at the same place at night, there was something doing all the time.

Eleven trains were scheduled for the accommodation of the crowds of visitors and it was estimated that, with the addition of the moonlight contingent, there must have been fully 10,000 persons present.

There was a lengthy programme of races and other events, which were most creditably conducted by an energetic committee.

The mysterious travelling salesman who usually patronizes this particular picnic managed to escape capture until late afternoon, when he was discovered by a young lad, who was awarded a purse of gold pieces valued at $25. Other events included draws for purse of gold open to the purchasers of railway tickets, another confined to members of the Northwest Commercial Travellers' Association, United Order of Commercial Travellers of America, wholesale city salesmen and their wives and families, and there were also some special events for prizes of cases of soft drinks. In the evening dancing took place in the pavilion, which was crowded to capacity, but in spite of this the devotees of the dance had a delightful time. During the day the Princess Pats band played selections and added greatly to the enjoyment of all. Three big trunks of give-away presents were distributed to all children taking part in the children's events. Officials in charge of the arrangements were as follows: Hon. chairman, D. F. Reid; chairman, W. Harry Lewis; hon. secretary, Fred J. C. Cox; secretary, J. H. Roe; transportation, W. O. Randolphs, R. S. Malcolm; field, A. Webber, M. B. Clint, D. F. Reid; starter, W. Harry Lewis; referees, Peter Hay, E. Howard, W. G. Wigmore; comics, R. Malcolm, J. Devois; handicappers, E. C. Binkley, E. Smith; recorders, G. C. Maecker, W. Turner; toys, Frank Teskey; tables, F. H. Agnew.

MORE ON SUBJECT OF INVESTMENTS

is a dangerous thing" on general principles, so no information should be given clerks unless all is given. And that means that the education must be full and complete. Then when you get to that point, you must go further, and realize that only some clerks are capable of assimilating information in full. It will not do to overload the ordinary digestion.

Properly done, information cannot be too copious. I have found that if a bright clerk is told what things cost while he is simultaneously impressed with the confidential character of the information and also impressed with the large proportion of goods which are handled on a margin far less than the average expense ratio, the information is properly used and appreciated. I remember my education of a high-grade man and of a very bright girl along these lines.

Given the Right Slant to Margins

That was the time when a certain advertised brand of olive oil was popular. We bought it in a jobbing way with wonderful discounts. Marked to retail at $4 the gallon, it was listed at, say, $2.80 and we, as jobbers, got 20 per cent. of that list. It cost us, therefore, $2.24. I frankly told those two clerks exactly how we bought it, indicating that the margin, on the regular marked price, was 44 per cent., and that, if people would respond to the offer, we could mark it 20 per cent. off, sell it for $3.20 and still make 30 per cent. on the sale.

But at the same time, I told them how expensive it was to run the service of credit, phone orders, deliveries and all the incidentals required to cater to a high-class trade. I indicated that sugar, flour, butter, eggs and many other similar items were sold by us for no more than by non-service, or limited service stores. Therefore, that we needed such margins, and that the good clerk was the one who worked for sales of such specialties as olive oil, tuna, caviar; who sold casaba melons and celery cabbage—then a great novelty—and other "unusual" things.

I found it profitable thus to post clerks of that character, and I believe in it, provided the posting is complete, exhaustive, covering all factors and not merely a few. But judgment must be exercised, of course.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE outstanding feature in the market for general grocery commodities is the strength in raw sugar and the further advance of 25c on refined. The price for standard granulated sugar now stands at $7.50 Montreal basis.

As we went to press a week ago the raw market was experiencing some declines. These declines, however, were checked on Friday of last week and since then the market has been steadily gaining strength. Prices moved from 3¼c c. & f. to 3 5-16c and later to 3½c c. & f. New York, which figures duty paid 5.11c. This strength was influenced to some extent by a low estimate of the U.S. beet crop, indicating a crop of 586,000 tons against last season's crop of 911,190 tons. The advance continued through the week and sales were made of Cubas for August shipment at 3 9-16c c. & f. with further sales at 3 23-32c and prices still further jumped to 3¾c c. & f. which figures to 5.36c duty paid.

A good movement in canned goods prevails for immediate wants but so far future bookings by retails have not been heavy, apparently the trade is willing to wait until opening prices on fruits and vegetables are announced before placing orders. These prices are expected to be forthcoming during the next week or two. Jams, especially strawberry and raspberry, have a firmer tone and some manufacturers have made slight advances.

Cereals show little change but continue to hold fairly firm. The same can be said of package cereals while rices are quiet but steady in price.

Teas continue to indicate strength under some recent advances in primary markets. Coffees are firm in primary markets but maintain a fairly steady tone on spot.

Dried fruits on spot have the usual summer quietness, awaiting something more definite in the way of crop returns and opening of prices on new season's goods.

The hog market has developed a weaker tone with prices dropping. Butter and cheese have an easier undertone while eggs also look weak. Domestic fruits and vegetables are in abundance and prices generally tend lower.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, July 26.—The grocery market in many lines continues to show improvement. Sugar was again advanced and now stands in a strong position at $7.50 a cwt. with all refiners quoting. Molasses takes a strong position in sympathy with sugar. The whole trade is looking forward to the new prices on canned goods. Prices on French and Belgian canned peas show an advance. Reports of a big crop of sultana raisins and a drop in the price come from the importers. There is a like condition in futures on currants. Citron peel is scarce but there is a good supply of lemon and orange peel. Shelled almonds will be lower since the crop is good and importers advise delaying purchases. Walnuts are however advancing and a high price is expected in October. There is no change in the rice market but conditions are improving. Cereals are firm with a good seasonable demand. Spices show more activity.

CEREAL PRICES STEADY

FRENCH PEAS HIGHER

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—As yet there are practically no prices quoted on the new pack. The wholesale groceries are unanimous in the opinion that for domestis fruits and vegetables the prices will be lower and buying will be heavy in the fall. Both wholesalers' and retailers' stocks are low and must be replenished at an early date. Quotations from France and Belgium show an advance in canned peas since the crop has been a poor one. Amieux Freres quote a new price on French peas which shows an advance of $2 a case over that of last year. This advance is the same for the three grades . Report on pineapple show that the pack will be smaller than that of last year and that deliveries will be cut down since rain has damaged the crop to some extent. Local wholesale grocers state that their stocks of canned pineapple are very low at the present time and that if deliveries are now made in full a shortage of canned pineapple will almost be sure before the year is through.

CURRANTS AND RAISINS LOWER

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—The prices on the new crop of currants show an easier trend and importers are looking for lower prices in the near future. Sultana raisins, three weeks ago, showed a reduction in their opening price for the new crop but since then there has been further reductions and the market price here will be much lower than that of last year. The reports of a large crop and the good quality of the raisins this year are promising and importers are buying freely. Citron peel is almost exhausted and many of the shippers cannot accept any more business at any price. Lemon and orange peel are in good supply and the quality is said to be of the very best this year. This price is a little lower but in mixed peels the higher price on citron balances up the difference and the price is about that of last year. The new price on California evaporated apricots shows a slight reduction and local wholesalers are quoting 25 lb. boxes at 38c. per lb.

COFFEE MARKET UNCERTAIN

Montreal.

COFFEE.—There is quite a difference of opinion among local coffee dealers as to the position of this market. Some are strong in the belief that the market is due for higher levels while others are equally as convinced that there is an easy tone. All admit that according to figures the visible supply of coffee this year is less than last year but buyers are holding off and with the market quiet there is an uneasiness that does not substantiate the bullish reports. The market is in the balance and it appears that influences bearing in one direction or the other determine the trend of the market in the future.

MACARONI REDUCED

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—The only change in package goods comes in macaroni and alimentary pastes. Catelli's Milk Alimentary paste is reduced from $360 a case of thirty 16 oz. packages to $3.40 a case. Bulk macaroni boxes of 30 lbs. are reduced to $2.75. Pastene's Splendor brand is reduced to $1.60 a box of 20 lb. The wholesalers are quoting another reduction in Macdonald cigarettes and the price for 500 is now $5.97, or $11.65 for 1,000.

IMPROVEMENT IN SPICES

Montreal.

SPICES.—There are undeniable signs of improvement in the demand for spices but there is no change in price and no indication in primary markets of a movement in either direction. Local dealers report more activity but complain that prices are not what primary markets warrant. They expect, however, that the bigger demand will strengthen up the local market. Tariff changes in the United States, which are in suspense and which have an important bearing on the spice market, are responsible for the uncertain condition of the market across the border.

MOLASSES STRONG

Montreal.

MOLASSES.—There is no change in the molasses market but it holds a strong position, particularly since the advance in the price of sugar. Both markets run closely together. Corn syrups are steady with a fair seasonable demand.

SUGAR AGAIN ADVANCED

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The predicted advance in sugar has come. All the local refiners are now quoting $7.50 a hundred for granulated, an advance of 25c. The sugar market is still in a strong position with raw sugar quoted at 3¾c. c. & f. New York. There is no positive proof that sugar will go higher but the feeling in the trade is that the peak has not yet been reached. Many retailers are holding the sugar they bought at the lower prices and buying now for immediate needs. This is evidence of the confidence in this market.

FIRMNESS IN RICE

Montreal.

RICE.—The rice market shows a slight stiffening in its position but as far as the local market is concerned, ther is no change. The demand is fair and millers state that for the season of the year it shows an improvement. Crop conditions are normal and there is no new feature of note which would play any part in determining prices for the fall.

SHELLED ALMONDS LOWER

Montreal.

NUTS.—Local importers of nuts strongly advocate that buying be delayed in the hope of lower prices on the new crop. Shelled almonds are lower in price and the crop is excellent in quantity. Shelled walnuts continue to firm up and some importers are of the opinion that the price will show an advance of 10c. per lb. between now and October. The market is quiet just now, but dealers are looking for a marked improvement in September and October.

PLUMS AND PEACHES LOW

Montreal.

FRUIT.—There is now definite proof that there is to be a large crop of domestic fruit on the market. Both farmers and fruit dealers claim an "enormous" crop of apples. Peaches and plums are heavy and prices are already low. Plums are selling here at 50c. and 60c. a 6 qt. basket and fruit dealers predict a price of 40c. for the 11 qt. basket before the season is over. Peaches are selling at the same price as plums. This is the last week for cherries. Raspberries are a little lower and are quoted at 22c. and 25c. a basket.

TOMATOES LOWER IN PRICE

Montreal.

VEGETABLES.—The feature of the vegetable market is the sudden reduction in the price of tomatoes. Local tomatoes are now on the market in good supply and the quality is also good. Western tomatoes are selling $1.25 for an 11 qt. basket. Potatoes are down again to $2.00 a bag. Cucumbers advanced slightly to 60c. a doz. The prospect for a good crop all around this year is fine. Already the offerings on the market are large.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, July 26.—The sugar market continues to occupy a strong position. The raw market is active with prices moving upward, while refined sugar has advanced 25c per cwt., making the Toronto basis $7.84 for standard granulated. Cereals, generally are steady, but in some quarters a shade higher price is quoted on rolled oats. Coffees are firm, but little change is noted in spot quotations. Jams are firm and canned goods continue to show a good movement for immediate wants. Nothing of interest has developed in dried fruits during the week, the movement being rather quiet. Recent reports from primary markets indicate that there is a probability for arrivals of new crop shelled nuts being much later than previous years. Teas continue with a strong situation. Fruits and vegetables are plentiful and prices, generally, tend easier.

CEREALS HOLD STEADY

Toronto

CEREALS.—There continues to be an active demand for cereals. For several weeks, and in fact almost throughout the summer months, rolled oats have had an exceptional demand this season of the year, which is one of the reasons attributed to the strength displayed in this commodity. Another factor has been the rising cost of oats and the cost of milling which millers claim is practically on a par with present wholesale prices. In some quarters, rolled oats are quoted at an advance of 10c per bag, but the general price to the retail trade remains at $3.30 per bag.

COFFEES HOLD FIRM

Toronto

COFFEES.—For some time past primary conditions in the coffee market seemed to warrant a higher range of values to the retail trade. In some quarters this stiffening in prices is still anticipated and already a shade higher price is quoted on certain blends. Others, however, have not made any change but are firmly maintaining quotations.

STRONG JAM SITUATION

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Although canned goods in general continue to show a good movement, there is little of interest to report this week. Wholesalers are apparently awaiting the announcement of opening prices on this season's pack of canned vegetables and fruits, which is expected within the next week or two. Indications continue to point to a fairly high price on canned raspberries and jam. This season's raspberry crop is only about half of normal which coupled with the higher cost of sugar, tend to make a higher range of prices than was expected a few months ago. One manufacturer is quoting raspberry jam, fours at 80c each: 12 oz. jars at $2.75 per doz.; and 16 oz. jars at $3.60 per doz.

DRIED FRUITS.—In some quarters, a shade lower price is quoted on raisins, but other than that, nothing of interest has developed during the past week in the spot situation on dried fruits. NUT CROPS LOOK LATE

Toronto.

NUTS.—Recent reports from primary markets for shelled walnuts and almonds, says that the crop this season is very backward and that arrivals on this market will no doubt be much later than other years. In fact one importer made the statement that according to his information, it was very doubtful whether new goods would arrive in time for the Christmas trade. Nothing definite however, has yet come to hand and there is no doubt that this market will be watched with much interest for the next couple of months.

POOR TEAS OFFERED

Toronto.

TEAS.—Recent advices from primary markets quote an advance of one cent per pound on all grades of Ceylon and Indian teas, and there does not appear to be any indication at the moment for this strength to be lessened. Another factor is that samples coming to hand recently have been of very poor quality, which no doubt has something to do with the strength displayed on grades which show good cup quality. No changes have occured in spot quotations to the retail trade.

Oranges are a shade higher while in some sections of the fruit market, a 50c advance is quoted on lemons, making Verdillis 300s, $5 to $5.50 per case. The raspberry season is rapidly closing and it is thought that another week will see the end of them. Toronto.

VEGETABLES.—Local vegetables are in abundance on the market and prices generally are lower. Cabbage and butter beans are inclined to be over supplied; larger crates of the former being quoted at $1.50, while the latter is a slow seller at around 50c per basket. Cucumbers are considerably lower at 50c per 11 qt. basket. Imported new potatoes are a shade down at $5.50 per barrel, while the local variety is bringing $2 to $2.25 per bag. Cauliflower is quoted at $2 to $2.50 per doz.; celery at 75c per doz.; and green corn, packed 8 doz. to the bag, at $2.75 to $3.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, July 26.—Markets generally speaking apart from sugar and cane syrup are without any change of note. Business on the whole is good, although buying is not heavy. Cereals are in good volume with quotations steady. Canned goods are in fair demand and stocks are becoming low. New prices are expected on raisins and prunes around the first week in August. Local fruits and vegetables are arriving in abundance and prices are easier.

COFFEE SITUATION STRONG

Greater Production Of China Tea Expected This Year

The tea trade has considerably declined since the World War, owing to the little demand in foreign countries, says a report from Foochow, China. During 1921 only 16,500 half-chests came to the Foochow market, each weighing 53 pounds. All stock, including the 1920, was cleared off during December-February, as there was a demand in England, Holland, and France. Prices were good at the latter part of the season; 4,175,233 pounds were exported from Foochow during 1921.

At present writing 933,000 pounds of green tea of the first crop of 1922 are reported to have arrived here. The market opened on April 15, 1922, and prices quoted were better than in 1921. Black tea of the 1922 crop has not yet appeared on the local market. It is expected that more tea will be produced in 1922, and it is reported that 40,000 half-chests will soon arrive from producing districts.

Meat Department at Front of Store Increases Volume of Sales

Chas. P. Macklaier, Montreal, Moves Refrigerator From the Rear to the Front—More Readily Seen by the Man on the Street—Increase in Sales is the Result

MONTREAL. (Special). — Two weeks ago Chas. P. Macklaier, proprietor of the grocery store, known as the Italian Warehouse, 211 St. James St., moved the provision department from the rear of the store to the front, directly in front of the window. The object was to put this department to the fore during the summer months and so increase the sales of cooked and cured meats.

At the same time Mr. Macklaier put a new man in charge of the department, one who would devote all his time to developing this line. John B. Bowden, an Englishman who has had 19 years' experience in the provision business in England is now in charge. Mr. Bowden is a man who from his boyhood has turned all his attention to the grocery trade and made it a study. Not only that, but he has specialized in the provision department of the business.

Has Meant Bigger Sales

The moving of the provision department up to the front of the store has meant a marked increase in sales, according to Mr. Bowden. It has a great suggestive power during the hot days when the people passing can see the attractive arrangement of cold meats in a large glass front refrigerator.

The fact that one man in particular is in charge of the department also helps the sales. That man can study the line, make it attractive, know what he is talking about and know how to handle the goods. Customers appreciate such service and have confidence in the products and in the store itself. Mr. Bowden illustrated this point to Canadian Grocer representative by showing how cooked hams, for instance, could be prepared so that they look particularly attractive and clean.

A good open front refrigerator at any time in an advertisement for the lines it contains but particularly is that so when that refrigerator is placed so near the front window that it may exhibit its contents to the passers-by.

Ontario Beekeepers' Association Name Prices on This Year's Honey

Last Season's Crop Which Totalled 2,355,286 Pounds Now Cleaned Up—This Season's Crop is Reported Good—Good Average Crop in All Parts of Ontario

The Ontario crop of light honey for the season of 1922, totalled 2,355,286 pounds, according to a recent report of the Crop Committee of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association which recently met in Toronto. The crop is practically cleaned up and this season's crop will come on nearly a bare market.

Reports received from 423 members of the association, together with special reports from prominent apiarists in different counties, indicate that this year's yield of honey will be an average one and that the quality will be first class.

The following schedule of prices for this season's crop, f. o. b. shipping point was recommended by the committee:

Best Quality Light Extracted, wholesale, per lb. .....15c-18c.
Best Quality Light Extracted, retail (to consumer), per lb. .....20c-25c.
No. 1 Comb, wholesale, per doz. ..... $2.50-$3.50.
No. 2 Comb, wholesale, per doz. $1.75-2.50

EFFECTIVE FROM MAY 24

An enquirer writes to ask when the new taxes on cigars and cigarettes as outlined in the last budget announcement became effective. These taxes are effective from May 24 and not from July 1.

TUNA FISH BACK

The pack of white meat tuna on the southern California coast is expected to be as large as that of 1921, which amounted to around 400,000 cases. There is a carryover this year of only 15,000 cases, against around 100,000 cases last year. A good export demand this year is expected and with 50 per cent. of the pack already booked, it is believed there will be a clean-up on white meat tuna this season.

Trade Depression Is Passing the Old Country

Speaking of conditions in the Old Land at the present time, W. E. Courian, of Courian & Co., London, England, who is in Toronto this week, told Canadian Grocer that business depression is lifting, and indications point to better things ahead. The political situation is improving, and with the solution of questions of Empire importance gradually being accomplished, a general trade improvement is bound to ensue.

In passing comment, Mr. Courian remarked on a thing that has struck him very forcibly in England, and that is the almost total absence of Canadian canned goods, as contrasted with the more or less significant predominance of Australian and South African products. He believed there was a great market for Canadian canned stuff abroad, as recently large consignments of these lines from Australia and South Africa, immediately upon their arrival, were cleared by English, Scandinavian and German buyers.

While immense quantities of canned milk products were thrown on this market, assimilation has been rapid, and Mr. Courian expressed the opinion that a good market can now be anticipated. The French market too appears promising, but Canadian exporters are advised to do business through English houses who can judiciously advise as to credits, etc.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, July 26.—There are distinct signs of weakness in many lines of produce. At this season of the year the market is inactive and this has much to do with the trend of prices. The price on hogs and fresh pork dropped suddenly and early this week showed signs of a further drop. This is attributed to the falling off in consumption and a smaller demand for export. Smoked meats are weak in sympathy but prices hold in view of the good demand during the summer. For the same reason cooked meats are firm. There is no change in butter or cheese but there is a feeling that lower prices will come in the near future. The export market is quiet and stocks are accumulating although there is a fairly good domestic demand. The egg market is not as active as it has been and as stocks here are accumulating there is a weak feeling. Prices are in the meantime unchanged. Halibut, haddock, cod and salmon are higher in price. Gaspe salmon is finished.

EASIER TONE TO BUTTER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—Reports on the butter market conflict. Farnham showed a slight decline in price early in the week and some wholesale produce dealers were inclined to shade the price. The export market is dull at present and while there is a fair demand for small quantities in the local trade stocks are accumulating and there is an easier tone to the market. On the other hand some produce dealers report a steady market with a sufficient local demand to hold their prices firm.

CHEESE MARKET WEAK

Montreal.

CHEESE.—The export market for cheese is more quiet than it has been and it is apparent that English buyers are waiting a lower price. Local cheese dealers predict a drop in price in the near future since the make of cheese has been heavy this year and stocks are accumulating.

EGG MARKET LOOKS WEAK

Montreal.

EGGS.—There has been no important change in the condition of the egg market. Supplies coming forward have been more than ample to meet the daily requirements and in consequence stocks on spot continue to increase, but, notwithstanding this factor a steady feeling has prevailed and prices show no change. The demand for domestic consumption has been only fair. Produce dealers claim that the presence of the wide variety of fresh fruits and vegetables on the market has tended to cut down the consumption of eggs. There is a distinct weakness in the egg market which may break at any time into a decline.

PORK PRICES DROP

Montreal.

HOGS.—A sudden break in the hog market came the latter part of last week. The decline amounted to from 50c. to $1 on select light weight, with prices ranging from $14 to $15, weighed off cars. Fresh killed hogs are also reduced and are quoted at from 20c. to 21c. per lb. Fresh cuts of pork are also reduced from 1c. to 2c. per lb. This comes as the result of a falling off in the demand for fresh meats and as some of the packers said: "Prices have been too high and were due for a drop just as soon as the market showed inactivity." It had been expected that the demand for export of smoked and cured meats would hold up the price on hogs but since this has fallen off the whole market suffered a decline.

WEAKNESS IN BACON

Montreal.

SMOKED MEATS.—In sympathy with the weakness in the hog market there is also an easier feeling in smoked and cured meats and some prices have been reduced. The trade is active owing to the increased demand for the domestic trade on account of the warmer weather and in consequence supplies are well cleaned up. Nevertheless the break in the price of hogs has had a weakening tendency on smoked meats. The prices on breakfast bacon and the best class of smoked bacon show no change as yet but there is every indication of a break in the price.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, July 26.—The outstanding feature in the produce and provision markets is the weakness displayed in live hogs. The demand fell off considerably during the week, consequently a lower price prevailed with packers offering a further cut for the balance of this week. Bacon and cooked meats are steady under an active demand. Butter is firm while in some quarters a lower price is quoted on cheese. Eggs are weak with dealers quoting a lower price at country points. Spring chickens are easier while heavy fowl are slightly higher. Fresh caught halibut and whitefish are quoted at a higher range of prices.

EGGS.—The market has a weak tone with dealers quoting a lower price at country points. The quantity of eggs offered during the past week was quite large as compared with the previous few weeks and in consequence a weaker feeling prevailed. Most of the arrivals are showing considerable waste and grade mostly No. 1. Selects, therefore show little change in quotations to the retail trade, while case run and No. 1s are down one cent.

STRONG LARD MARKET

Toronto.

LARD.—The market has a stronger tone at the present time. This condition is the result of the higher prices for live hogs and although the hog market has been somewhat weaker during the past week, it is only just now that lard made from the higher priced hogs, is coming on the market. Consequently quotations are up ½c. per lb. One pound prints are quoted at 19c. and on the tierce basis 16c. per lb.

HOG PRICES DECLINE

Toronto.

FRESH MEATS.—The feature in fresh meats is the reduction in live hog prices. The demand has fallen off considerably and in consequence packers were able to put lower prices into effect and are offering another cut for the balance of this week Prices declined 50c. per cwt., making the fed and watered basis $14.50. A weakness also prevails in the cattle market owing to the arrival of considerable rough Western cattle. In dressed meats there are few changes. Some cuts of pork declining ½ to 1c. per lb.

WINNIPEG CATERERS PICNIC AT GRAND BEACH

Winnipeg, (Special).—The Winnipeg Caterers' Association held their 39th annual picnic at Grand Beach, Wednesday July 19th, and over 10,000 persons were in attendance. Nine trains were required to convey the crowds to the beach.

A lengthy programme of sports was put on and were run off according to schedule. An orchestra provided music while the sports were being run off, and in the evening provided music for the dance and dance competitions.

An attractive souvenir programme containing pictures of the first annual picnic of the Association held in 1887 was provided. Other pictures of later years were also included. Candies and other good things provided by the wholesale houses were distributed on the trains.

"That chicken you sent me Saturday was a very old bird," said the bride of two weeks.

"You are mistaken, madam. It was a very young chicken," replied the butcher.

"Don't tell me that. Haven't I got eyes? Why, it hadn't a single tooth in its mouth."

"Mailing Lists Obsolete"

A large Canadian manufacturer enquiring about a mailing list of retail grocers in a certain Canadian city has been unable to secure an authentic one. He writes us that he has used certain alleged lists, but finds that they were practically obsolete.

In other words, there are so many changes in the grocery business from month to month that it is almost impossible to keep up a list that will approach accurateness.

Canadian Grocer is read by the largest number of retail grocers in Canada. It comes to their stores by paid invitation every week.

Moreover, it is subscribed for by grocery departments of large general and department stores and other big buyers whose names would not appear on a grocery mailing list.

From a recent investigation into our records we found that quite a number had been taking the paper continuously from its inception in 1886. Many more had been continuous subscribers for more than 20 years, a great many more than 10 years, and the big majority more than 5 years.

The readers of Canadian Grocer are the permanent business men in the Canadian grocery trade.

This is the type of merchant manufacturers want to reach. The most economical and effective method of reaching them is through the advertising pages of Canadian Grocer.

There is no other satisfactory way of reaching the clerks in these stores.

EXPECT A FAIRLY GOOD APPLE CROP

According to the July fruit report of the fruit branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, the crop of apples on the whole, promises exceedingly well in Ontario, although Spies, Baldwins and Greenings are estimated to be light. In other apple growing provinces a crop 25 per cent. lighter than last year is indicated. Peaches and plums promise well in Ontario, while grapes are likely to prove a fairly good crop, but pears appear to be below the average.

Brunswick Brand Sea Foods

(Ready to Serve)

WHY ARE THEY IN EVERY GROCERY STORE IN CANADA ?

— Because these incomparable SEA FOODS, through their high standard quality, have won the confidence of Canadian women.

— Because their cost is low — they are cooked to perfection and their wholesome flavor and purity can be depended upon.

These are a few big reasons why the majority of aggressive grocers throughout Canada have found these fine profitable sea foods such worthwhile sellers—why they feature them so often in their windows and on their counters.

If you've never experienced the extra profits and 100% satisfaction they bring it will pay you to ask your wholesaler for just a small trial order.

A Few Centuries Ago

WHEN printing was in its infancy, most people seldom saw what we call a newspaper, and few ever saw a book. Most people could not have read them if they had seen them.

Nowadays, in Canada alone, there are hundreds of newspapers and periodicals, vast organizations employing thousands of skilled investigators and news gatherers, who turn out the many newspapers, technical and other periodicals. It is impossible for any one person to read all the papers published in Canada. If it were possible for a person to read them he would acquire a vast store of information, but he would not have any time left to turn his information to practical use.

If you, for instance, could have someone read these papers for you and clip items concerning your own line of business, your particular private interests, etc., it would be better than reading all the papers. This is where we come in.

It is OUR BUSINESS to furnish clippings on any subject. We read all the papers and send you only clippings that interest you. Tell us your needs and we will tell you how we can serve you. The charges are moderate, because we will be reading not only for you, but for many other satisfied clients.

Bumper Crops Bring More Confidence

Maritime Merchants Express a Brighter Feeling in Trade for the Fall and Winter Seasons—Retailers Stocks Are Light—With a Record Crop of Hay, Apples and Other Produce, Merchants Will Buy Heavy—Credits Look Better

By Staff Correspondent Canadian Grocer.

CUMBERLAND, N.S., August 2.—The Maritime Provinces and particularly Nova Scotia are looking forward to a marked improvement in the grocery trade this fall and winter. Already the hay crop is larger than that of last year and to the retail grocer this means much. Apples are to be in abundant supply and a good crop of strawberries has been harvested.

According to E. R. Moore, proprietor of a general store in Cumberland Bay, N.S., last year many of the farmers had to buy imported hay to feed their stock. This year they have hay to sell and that means that the farmers will have two-fold the extra money to spend on other requirements. Furthermore, the sale of hay and other products will bring money into the province whereas last year that money was going elsewhere.

Good Crop of Apples

Farmers and fruit growers in these provinces report a record crop of apples. Their only fear is that the market both in Canada and England will be glutted and they will have trouble disposing of the crop. Some suggest that the government should supervise the marketing so that the most economical distribution may be effected. The good crop of strawberries brought the price down however, and most of the crop was sold at from eight to ten cents a box. But still it showed a good increase over last year.

Effect on Grocery Trade

"Already the improved outlook has had a good effect on the grocery trade," said Mr. Moore to Canadian Grocer representative. "We had a bad year last year. We could not afford to carry the stock we had been used to. Credit was poor and in the case of some old customers we found it necessary to carry over accounts for many months. If the harvest had been poor this year the prospect would have been very bad but nearly everyone is optimistic and we feel safe to carry on and buy more freely.

"I can safely say that throughout the province the grocers' stocks are all as low as possible, save in a few lines. There has been some speculation in sugar and tea. This has also helped conditions, and the grocers are taking more interest. In canned goods we have little or nothing. All the merchants have unloaded in prospect of lower prices on the new pack. If they do not come, we will be very much surprised for we have seen the fruit and vegetables developing into a good harvest.

Buying Will Be Heavy

"As a result of the low stocks and the improved outlook there will be comparatively heavy buying this fall," continued Mr. Moore. "It will be imperative. I for one have confidence that back accounts will be paid up and there will be a good surplus of money to tide over the winter. With the evidence of prosperity, credit, I expect, will be freer and the grocery trade will be disposed to take advantage of it."

Fishermen Delighted

Mr. Moore could not speak intimately of the fishing industry but from what he had heard he claimed that the fishing season had been as good as the farming promised to be. The fishermen themselves are delighted with the year so far. One of the officials of the Maritime Fish Corporation, speaking to Canadian Grocer, said: "We are delighted with the catch this year. The quality has never been better in our history and the markets are open. In Lunenburg, where the export catch comes, things are prosperous. The demand is as good as the catch and 'that's saying something'." It is when money is tightest that the fishermen find their best market. Fish is generally comparatively low in price and a good catch brings lower prices and low prices in stringent times makes a good market.

One Million Barrels of Apples Exported

Maritime Provinces Steadily Growing a Big Apple Center—Heavy Exports During the Past Season—Sixty Per Cent. Shipped to United States—Plums, Strawberries and Other Small Fruits Rapidly Becoming Favorites

Special Correspondent of Canadian Grocer

ST. JOHN, N. B.—Ten years ago, there were four thousand growers of apples in the Maritime Provinces. Today there are eight thousand. The greater portion of apples produced by these growers were shipped across Canada as well as to Great Britain, France and the United States.

During the period from the first of September until the first of January, no less than one million barrels of apples were exported from the three Maritime Provinces. Of this number sixty per cent. was exported to the United States. Baldwins and Northern Spy predominated. Gravensteins and Bishop Pippins were closely following in popularity, these being the more expensive brands. Alexanders seemed to be the least popular. New Brunswicks had their clientele as a cheaper apple. Russets were also quite popular. Greenings were not as favored in 1921-22 as they were in previous years, particularly in the United States.

Russia Likes Canadian Apples

John A. Edwards, an apple grower of New Brunswick, recently received a letter from Riga, Russia, asking for a shipment of one thousand barrels of apples. The writer of the letter is a merchant of Riga and he wrote of happening to come across a barrel of Gravensteins shipped to London by Edwards last fall. The barrel was sent from London as part of a relief shipment and the Riga merchant was a member of the Riga relief committee. It was the first time he had eaten a Canadian apple, wrote the Russian, and he was much impressed with the flavor and quality. The question of exchange is now worrying Edwards and he is busy computing just how many million roubles it will require to pay for one thousand barrels of Canadian Gravensteins.

Apples Congest Freight

During the busy season it is no singular happening to see ten or fifteen thousand barrels of apples awaiting shipment from Yarmouth to Boston by steamer. In fact the sailings of the steamers are often delayed for hours by the congestion in apple shipping. Most shippers find it more convenient and cheaper as well to ship by coastwise schooner to Boston and other U. S. points, on the Atlantic seaboard. During the fall of 1921 no less than four hundred schooners were engaged in the transportation of apples from eastern Canada to New England and New York ports simultaneously. And of the huge number of shipments only four were lost. The chief liability of the schooner as a mode for transportation of apples is the slowness. One would think that a line of fast steamers would fill the bill nicely and this could be arranged for the fall season through a concerted effort on the part of the apple growers of the maritime provinces.

Increase in Plum Production

More plums have been grown in the Maritime Provinces in the past few years than was the case in previous years. Meaning the preserving plums of course. It is out of the question to expect the growing of table plums in the maritime provinces on a large scale.

Large increases in the volume of berry shipments from the Maritime Provinces in the course of the past few years have been commented on. Strawberries held the leadership in popularity. Boston was the chief shipping point in the United States for cultivated and wild strawberries of Eastern Canada. There is an agitation among growers of cultivated strawberries for more care in the handling of this fruit in transit and more speed in transportation. The value of much of the strawberries shipped out of the Maritime Provinces to Canadian points and the U. S. was depreciated last summer by slowness in handling the shipments and carelessness.

Opening Prices On New Pack Peas Show Little Change From Last Year

Standard Peas a Shade Lower Than a Year Ago—Other Grades About the Same—Strawberry and Raspberry Packs Small—Indications Point to Good Crops of Later Fruits—Corn Not So Promising

THE Dominion Canners Limited, announce opening prices on new packs of early vegetables and fruits. The opening price on No. 4 Sieve or standard peas is 15 cents per dozen less than that of a year ago. But other than that prices are about on a par with the opening prices of last year. The quality this year, is said to be exceptionally good, much better than that of a year ago.

The pack of strawberries and raspberries this year is a small one, about twenty-five per cent. of what they were in pre-war days. The raspberry pack is not yet quite completed but the strawberry pack, being finished, it is announced that the delivery will be only seventy per cent.

In regards to later fruits and vegetables, the indications at the present time point to large crops of fruits, but the situation in vegetables is somewhat mixed. Some sections show the crops in splendid shape while other sections are very backward. Corn especially is not coming along as fast as it should on account of the cool nights. What corn needs to thrive and mature properly is hot weather and unless that materializes the outlook is not very promising. Canners predict that the packing season for corn will be much later this year.

The following are the opening prices on early vegetables and fruits of the choice quality. Prices are f.o.b. factory.

CODFISH CATCH

The total quantity of codfish landed at Newfoundland points up to June 26 was 98,875 quintals. More than half of this—70,925 quintals—was Bank fish, of which 27,000 quintals were landed in the district of Fortune, and 3,925 in the district of Burin. The fishermen of Burgeo district secured 18,000 quintals; of Ferryland district, 735 quintals; of St. George, 1,140 quintals, and of Placentia, 7,130 quintals. Trinity, Bonavista, and Carboncar districts report a total of less than 1,000 quintals.

"Make Display Suggest Something the Customer is Not Thinking of"

Idea Should Not be Merely to Sell People What They Ask for, Says This Merchant, But Suggest Additions to the Order, Either Yourself, or Through the Medium of Display

FREDERICTON, N. B.—"We make a feature of service and top quality goods, aiming to get the better class of trade," R. Lindsay, Beattie & Co., grocers here, told a representative of Canadian Grocer recently. Mr. Lindsay is connected with a business that is sixty years old. Previous to coming to Fredericton he served in the Canadian army during the war, and prior to his enlistment he was in business in Victoria, B. C. Returning to his wife's home here after the war, he was induced to join the firm of Beatty & Co., successors to G. T. Whelpley.

Still a Place for the Service Store

This firm believes that there is still a very big place for the service store, and believes that giving credit is not a hardship to the merchant, where there is a close watch kept on the individual accounts. "To obtain goods in this store," Mr. Lindsay remarked, "a man must show he has some interest in the town, such as owning property, or in some other manner, besides merely the fact that he is earning a weekly wage. There is nothing to prevent this latter man from slipping away, but the property owner is not likely to do so. We watch our credits very closely, and a good many people have been turned down because we did not think they were reliable enough. Thus our losses on credit accounts are practically nil. When you consider that our annual turnover totals around ninety thousand dollars it is remarkable that our losses are such an inconsiderable amount. This is due to our practice of careful watching. We also deliver, employing a motor delivery, as well as two wagons. There is a small village across the river from here, called Devon. The motor delivery makes two calls there each week and takes orders. The motor makes this extra business possible, as the distance is covered much quicker than it could be with a horse and wagon.

Fruit Sales are Heavy

"We sell a lot of fruit in this store in the summer months. We use our window and store front for displaying fruits throughout the summer. Getting the goods out where people can see them means practically double sales. At least that is our experience. Display always means increased sales, and with the idea of displaying our goods better we are contemplating buying a refrigerator counter and three new display cases. We believe that equipment of this kind will materially help our business to such an extent that the investment will be worth while. Our idea is not to sell people only what they ask for, but to make displays suggest something to them that they were not thinking of."

3,000 Pounds of Coffee in Year

Coffee sales in this store are given special attention, and last year there were three thousand pounds of coffee sold as compared with six hundred the year before. Some customers have been buying the same blend of coffee in this store for a period of fifty years. "We have built up a reputation for our coffee," Mr. Lindsay stated, "that has meant a great deal to our continued sale of the same. We have people coming from all parts of the town for our coffee, and this fact has meant an increase in the sale of other goods."

Showing a section of the attractive interior of the store of R. Lindsay, Beattie & Co., Fredericton, N. B. Fruits, biscuits and confectionery are featured in this store.

The Abuse of Credit is Dangerous

Wholesalers' Helpfulness to Retailers Not Always Appreciated—Credit Is All Right If Used But Dangerous If Abused—Merchants Obtaining Credit and Giving Credit Must Keep in Touch With Details

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

SOMETIMES when we seek to remedy one trouble, we achieve the cure, or partial cure, of another in addition to the one we go after. Maybe you will see what I am getting at if you will read further.

In 1917, the Food Administration urged wholesale grocers to "squeeze out all unnecessary credit" as an important step in stabilizing trade. R. H. Bennett, who for over twenty-nine years has been secretary of the California Wholesale Grocers' Association, tells how the job was set about.

The jobbers submitted to headquarters a monthly statement of the sum of their outstanding accounts, based on percentages of monthly sales. Thus, if a merchant's sales were $100,000 and the sum on his books was $125,000, his outstandings were 125 per cent. How bad conditions had been allowed to become was illustrated by the first month's returns, for it was found that in January, 1917, outstandings stood at 147 per cent!

Now, credit experts rule that when an account gets to be 50 per cent. overdue, it touches the danger point, yet the figures showed that the whole retail trade of California was 47 per cent. overdue on the average.

Immediately, the jobbers got busy. So effective was their work that in February the outstandings had been reduced to 136 per cent. They jumped back to 140 per cent. in March, but dropped to 112½ per cent. in May. There were severe fluctuations during that first year, but the average result attained was a reduction to 128 per cent. for the year. In 1918 the fluctuations were much less violent and the average was reduced to 117 per cent. In 1919, with a range greatly narrowed, the average got down to 103 per cent., and in 1920, to 101 per cent.

Sauce for the Retail Gander

Of course, naturally, retail grocers could not "see" this pressure—certainly not! They could not understand why jobbers were putting forth such vigorous efforts for quick returns of money. Salesmen translated the universal French explanation—"it's the war;" but grocers were prone to think wholesale selfishness was the real cause. But perhaps examination will show that sauce which was wholesome for the jobbing goose was mighty good medicine likewise for the retail gander.

The effect of cutting down outstandings from 147 per cent. to 101 per cent.—and, by the way, the jobbers hope for an ultimate reduction to 75 per cent.—was to cut capital used in credit extension about one third. That meant the release of just that much money from stagnation to useful activity again. It enabled jobbers to survive the storms of 1920-21 who otherwise would have gone under; for it must be remembered that Harvard's reports show that wholesale grocers lost an average of one half per cent. on sales in 1920 and nearly two per cent. in 1921.

I expect to review Harvard's reports at length soon; but I may say right now that these were no trifling or imaginary losses. They were not a dream of the jobbing business, nor were they a joke. They were a storm of hard reality that only business well organized could have weathered.

But if your account at the jobber's is in dangerous condition when 50 per cent. of it is past due, how about the account of your customer when it gets into similar condition? If you, a business man, whose resources are visible, tangible, subject to attachment and seizure, cannot safely be trusted with an account half over due, where do you stand when your customer, whose possessions are exempt, intangible, concealed or unknown quantities, owes you a bill that is not half a month's trading overdue, but two, three, six or more months?

Most Valuable Lesson for Retailers

That question, brought out by jobbers' pressure, and the answer that you simply must make to it, furnish a most valuable lesson for all retailers in all lines. The answer is simply inescapable: no retailer has any business right or title to carry any customer beyond the due date of any bill.

Now, let us get that straight, so there may be no misunderstanding. It means that you cannot afford to take chances when the terms of a credit deal are not lived up to. But it means those terms—not some terms or any other terms. If, for example, you have agreed with a farmer to carry him through his growing season—say four months—he violates no terms so long as he settles as agreed at the end of the four months.

But with the city or town dweller, you must think of several things. Here is a factory worker who is paid twice each month. His bill should run not to exceed fifteen days—and then it must be paid in full. No balances ever should be tolerated on any retail account. The ordinary city dweller who works for monthly salary, can have an account of 30 days duration, settlement to be first of each month, and no balance tolerated.

People with ample property, throughly responsible, are always handled specially. Logically, they should pay each month. Mostly, they do just that by habit. But they can be made to pay any old time; and usually they care little for prices. They are the folks who demand and pay for both time and service. Their accounts, properly managed, are profitable even if long-winded.

The idea is that every account is an individual matter—individual for the customer and also for your circumstances and plan of business. For instance, I never cared for weekly or bi-weekly payments. They were a trouble to me in a business which ran largely to excellent credit with payments monthly. I was mighty choice, exceedingly strict, about my credits; so I turned down any that I did not feel were perfectly good for 30 days. But other merchants, situated differently, must work according to their business, environment and conditions.

Have Rules and Make Them Operative!

The points I make are that: the jobbers who put pressure on you in the last three years did you a wonderful favor. They forced you to pay. That reduced your indebtedness. In itself that was a great benefit. But because you could no longer play fast and loose with your credit, you learned to buy more conservatively. You turned your stock more frequently. You kept your capital more active.

Next, beeause you had to have money with which to pay your jobber, you became a better collector. You cut out much dead wood. You learned to say no and mean no. As a class, you reduced your outstandings even as the jobbers reduced theirs. Maybe you also said "it's the war."

Thus the discipline has been very salutary; but few grocers realize what a really great service the jobbers did them incidental to their work of cutting out needless and harmful credit. It will be well to learn as a permanent lesson from this incident that one must have certain inflexible rules. One rule must be that each grocer can have only a certain amount of credit outstanding. The man whose sales are $6,000 a month and whose circumstances indicate that his credit should be turned monthly, can sense danger when he finds that he has $9,000, or indeed any figure over $6,000, outstanding.

Credit is all right if used. It is dangerous if abused. The merchant who gives credit must keep in touch with the details thereof himself. I know of nothing in business with which the boss himself must keep so intimately acquainted, down to the smallest detail, as credit. This, because credit can easily get out of hand and be beyond the bounds of prudent management before you know it—if you are even the least bit careless or neglectful of it.

To keep it in order and thus to make it profitable, a man must be ready to face those who disagree with him. He must be prepared to stand pat against those who think he is "stingy," "tight," "mean" and, as one disgruntled customer put it to me years ago, "a business fool." You can afford to take abuse to keep your credit in good shape. For if you let it get into bad shape, you will go broke. Then you will have all the abuse you care for— and more—and you will be without the satisfaction of knowing you are right, and of having the solid backing to show that you are right.

My banker once refused to extend my paper at a time when I thought I needed money badly. There seemed to be no good reason for his refusal and I felt I must have the money with which to take on the needful quantity of futures. I had to forego a lot of such buying, for most fortunately I had established the one unvarying principle in my affairs that I would buy nothing I could not discount. But the banker's action compelled me to trim my sails a lot, to operate more conservatively. It taught me that I was better off doing so. Looking within my business as I was then compelled to with extra care, I learned a lot that was worth many times what the extension would have been worth. My banker had done me a great and lasting favor.

The wise merchant will make the curtailment of credit a means to better his condition—and he will thank the jobbers for their action.

"The Children are Your Best Friends"

This Merchant Goes After the Trade of the Children Because He Recognizes That the Child of To-day is the Grown-up of To-Morrow.

John Gilbert, Kingston, Ont., by Treating His Little Friends in a Business-Like Manner, Turns an Otherwise Dull Week Into a Profitable One.

CATERING to the children is a feature in the store of John Gilbert, Kingston, Ont. Here the child is recognized as the "purchasing agent" of the family and everything is done to make the youngster feel that he or she is the most important person in the world. They are never kept waiting. In fact very often they are served before some of the "grown ups," especially when the child shows an inclination to be in a hurry. No doubt in this respect, Mr. Gilbert remembers his own childhood days, when upon being sent to the store he was told to hurry and perhaps with the alternative of "getting something when he got back," if he did not do so.

However, be what it may, children in the Gilbert store are treated with due respect simply because they are recognized as the future householders of tomorrow.

Swells Rainy Day Sales

Not long ago, Mr. Gilbert arranged with the manufacturers of a certain kind of grape juice to put on a demonstration in his store. A table was reserved in the centre of the store for that purpose with a nice display of the grape juice on it. A window display was also arranged, and much thought and pains taken to give the grape juice a good send off. Plans were made by the selling staff to give the demonstrator every possible assistance. A good supply of grape juice was on hand and on the morning of the first day of the demonstration the store gave every indication for a bumper week in grape juice.

But there is one thing which cannot always be provided for, nor of which the merchant has any control and that is the weather. And as all merchants know, a demonstration in the store to be successful must have the co-operation of fine weather. If the weather turns out disagreeable naturally the number of customers coming into the store decreases while phone orders increase and likewise a larger number of children come to the store.

And that is just what occurred during the week of the grape juice demonstration in the Gilbert store. The weather turned rainy. But Mr. Gilbert being a true psychologist, instructed the demonstrator to give each child a drink of grape juice.

Then what happened? Presumably the child went home and talked about the kindness of "the lady" and the goodness of the grape juice, because in many instances the child soon returned to the store and purchased a bottle of grape juice.

"The sales for the week totalled ten cases," said Mr. Gilbert. "Most of the sales were made to the children and were the direct result of the way they were handled. It certainly pays to look after the children. Many times they are sent to the store with the cash and if one store does not treat them right, they will soon find the one which does."

ACADIA SUGAR CO. REORGANIZE

Halifax.—A re-organization of the Acadia Sugar Refining Company, Limited, involving a reduction in capital of $1,000,000 and provision of $1,000,000 working fund, was decided on at an extraordinary meeting of shareholders following the annual general meeting. The plan involves surrender and cancellation by shareholders of present buildings and subscription by them of mortgage debentures to the extent of 20 per cent. of their present holdings, mortgage debentures not to exceed $1,060,000. Shareholders have until December 31 to decide whether or not they will subscribe. Should they not subscribe they would retain holdings in present company but have no holdings in the new one.

Hon. George H. Murray, Prime Minister of Nova Scotia, and George W. Hensley, Halifax, were appointed to the board of directors.

It was stated that the refinery at Halifax was operating almost at capacity with an output of a million pounds per day.

Consider the Child

IN ANOTHER section of this issue is a story about a merchant who makes the child customer a special study. This merchant, considering the child of to-day is, practically speaking, the grown-up of to-morrow, makes every effort to make each and every child entering the store feel that they are persons of importance and are treated with the same courtesy and get the same attention as the older customers. The story goes on to relate how this merchant developed sales on a certain article which was on demonstration during a week of rainy weather, simply by treating the child buyer as a customer.

In many stores, especially in residential districts, the best cash customers are the children. Many of these children do practically all of the shopping for the family and it behooves the merchant to treat him as he would a grown up person. The child is usually given the cash and if he does not get a square deal in one store he will go elsewhere and in consequence the trade of that family is lost. The child is just as important as any man or woman who enters the store and should never be allowed to wait until all older persons are served before his wants are attended to. His purchase is just as essential to the store as the others and many a retail store has built up a big business on that point because the cash trade of the family usually goes where the child chooses to take it.

The Official Organ Mistake

WITH A lack of foresight which indicates an old-fashioned ignorance of the successful relations between a trade paper and the members of the trade it represents, the Timber Industries Council of British Columbia has decided to establish a journal of its own and arrangements have been completed under which the Pacific Coast Lumberman becomes the Official Organ of the Council.

Apart altogether from the fact that the Pacific Coast Lumberman and the Western Lumberman have, in active competition, been giving the lumber trade of the Pacific a splendid service by maintaining healthy relations with the lumber consuming markets and that the manufacturers have now taken a questionable step in taking over one paper to be continued on competitive terms which can hardly be regarded as fair or equitable, is the conclusion born of experience that official organs defeat the very purposes for which they are conducted.

The well conducted trade paper represents various branches of the trade itself as well as the consuming public upon which that trade is dependent. Unless the relations between manufacturer, wholesaler, retailer and consumer are healthy, business stagnates. To maintain such relations problems must be continually faced and solved. Many of them are unpleasant but their solution is the function of the trade paper which is properly serving its field.

The official organ must obviously serve selfishly the interests of the particular branch of the trade which controls it. If owned by manufacturers then wholesalers or retailers will not believe that it serves their interests; if owned by wholesalers or retailers, likewise it is regarded as their man Friday. In no case is the public interest likely to be properly respected. The result is that the official organ is conducted to please the people who are paying for its publication—and they usually pay heavily in the long run—and it is ignored by other sections of the trade with whom there should be co-operation and understanding in the interests of all concerned. Printers' Ink has effectively shown "Why Trade Associations Should Stay Out of the Publishing Business," and the following extracts are from articles which recently appeared in that publication:

When an association starts a periodical and goes out in the trade to solicit advertising, it is asking them to support a paper which is not founded on sound publishing principles.

A few associations decide that the independent papers do not "write them up" often enough and start their own publications so as to insure an unlimited flow of puffery.

The circulation is artificial; this circulation is generally maintained by virtue of the subscriber's membership in the association and is kept up regardless of the editorial merit of the paper.

Advertising in such publications is seldom sold on its merits. Seldom will the clever salesman remove the velvet glove from the mailed fist, but the hard iron of the implied threat is nearly always visible to the discerning buyer.

Such publications are of doubtful advertising value because of the difficulty inherent in the proposition of keeping the editorial contents on a par in reader interest with that maintained by a well-edited, independent paper.

When the lumber manufacturers of the Pacific Coast own their own paper they may expect to have their "fur rubbed the right way," but how can they expect that this is going to improve those relations with the dealers which make for good business and mutual advantage? And when they advertise they should appreciate that they are paying to reach other manufacturers rather than the dealers who sell their goods and maintain the all-important connection with the consumer.—The Financial Post.

Editorials in Brief

A REFORMER is a man who thinks every other man is going the wrong way.

THE MERCHANT who always practises square dealings will never have to square himself with the public.

A SOFT ANSWER turns away wrath, says the Bible, and nowhere is that truer than across your own counters.

IN ONE of the small New England towns in the United States the local grocers have joined together in their advertising in order to keep the trade within the borders of their town and so compete with the mail order business carried on by some of the larger grocers and departmental stores in the cities. One of their latest advertisements is a sign board on which is printed in large bold type "Be Neighborly—It Pays." Underneath this it continues "Keep Your Community Prosperous—Have Better Schools—Better Roads—And Pay Less Taxes—By Keeping Your Money At Home. Patronize Your Neighborhood Grocer." Not a bad plan. Might be followed by merchants in Canada.

"2. The principal sub-classes of Bottled Waters are: (a) Mineral Waters. (b) Table Waters.

(a) Mineral Waters are bottled waters characterized by having in solution notable amounts of mineral matter or other ingredients on account of whose presence they are claimed to possess hygienic or therapeutic character.

Note: Mineral waters are classified in various ways, and very commonly as Alkaline, Chalybeate, Saline, Sulphuretted, Carbonated, Purgative, Aperient, etc.

In some cases a well known source has come to give its name to a type of mineral water, just as in the case of Wines where the terms, Port, Sherry, etc., imply types of wines, rather than wines of definite geographical origin.

Thus, the name Vichy, Carlsbad, Harrowgate, etc., may be used as types of mineral water. When so employed the label must show the word type after the descriptive name, thus: Vichy type, Harrowgate type, etc., and must be so written as to make perfectly clear that the water does not actually come from Vichy or from Harrowgate.

When a water is described as of a certain type. i.e., Vichy type, etc., it is required that the composition of such water as determined by analysis, shall approximate within reasonable limits to the known character of the waters quoted as its type.

3. In the case of all bottled waters offered for sale in Canada, the label must distinctly state whether the water is of Domestic (Canadian) or Foreign origin; and the name of the actual place of production must be clearly printed on the label.

Teas Tested by Appearance, Taste and Aroma

Best Teas Show Light Copper Coloured Leaves When Steeped —Indian Teas Classified—Tea Tasters Tell of Classifications in Blending—Taster's Sense Is Blunted by Use

THERE are two distinct methods of testing teas. In England it is the inevitable thing for the tea blender to taste the product but in this country many experts claim that they have so accustomed their sense of smell to the variations in teas that they can without any trouble determine the flavor and strength by means of smell alone. On the other hand the English tea men maintain that the smell in no wise equalizes the taste and they cannot understand how a man could get as good results from smelling as from tasting.

Information From Taste

It is surprising how much an expert tea taster can tell from his sense of taste. The head of the testing department of a tea company in Boston claims he can tell the place from where the tea came by its aroma and flavor, also the altitude at which it was grown and in some instances its pedigree, telling its country of origin and the season of the year in which it was grown.

Almost a Lost Art

It seems that tea tasting is becoming a lost art. Years ago the public used to taste their own teas when buying. When they went into a store they would have the merchant spread out his sample on the counter and then by taste pick out what they wanted or choose their own blend. Richard Twining, a tea merchant, did this very thing back in 1785 and in telling about it said: "One pound of tea for a customer might be mixed from some 20 chests."

Comparatively few retail grocers test their own teas when buying. In the first place it requires a delicate sense of taste to do it and some men have devoted their business career to the art and so all have the benefit of their experience. Even an amateur, however, can detect some differences through appearance, taste and smell of tea samples.

Different Grades of Teas

According to an expert tea taster a grocer should know by the appearance of the tea its classification. Orange pekoes, he says, have the wiry appearance, peculiar to them. The leaf is closely rolled and in a blend an orange pekoe stands out boldly. Then there is the pekoe, slightly less wiry in appearance, less tightly rolled and more coarse in texture. On a shoot of six leaves the two smallest are naturally the youngest. These make the orange pekoe grade while the next two will make pekoe teas and the last two pekoe souchong or souchong. It is, however, impractical at the time of picking to keep them all separate so they are sorted after they are rolled. In the drying process much depends on the weather and therefore a wet season will endanger the crop.

Indian Tea Grades

The following are the principal grades of Indian tea:—

Flowery Pekoe; Orange Pekoe; Pekoe; Pekoe Souchong; Souchong; Congou.

The various broken kinds are:—

Broken Pekoe; Pekoe Dust; Broken Mixed Tea; Broken Souchong; Fannings; Dust.

The flower pekoe is picked from the shrub entirely different from the other descriptions of tea, only the buds and young leaves being taken. In preparation it is not subjected to nearly the severe heat that other teas undergo and it generally preserves a uniform silvery grey tint.

For The Amateur Taster

The professional tasters admit that even the amateur taster can tell much by studying the appearance, smell and taste of tea. In the first place equal amounts of the different samples should be placed in cups. The sample taken is equal to weight of a Canadian 5c piece. A variation in the amount will cause one tea to taste unnaturally strong in comparison with another. Then boiling water should be poured on each and allowed to stand six minutes. Tasters in some plants have stop watches that register the six minutes time by ringing an alarm.

Color of Steeped Leaves

In the first place the color of the steeped leaves is an indication of the quality. When the set time has elapsed the leaves should have spread out and good grades will show a light copper color. According to experts, poor teas, in fact bad teas, alone look black after being steeped. The fluid should be a medium reddish brown. Some inferior teas give the highest color. The odor too tells much. The best teas have a mild fragrant odor while lower grades in proportion have a pungent odor. As for the taste, that must be left with the palate. It can hardly be explained and is a cultivated art. as well as a natural gift.

Sense Blunted by Use

According to the head taster for one firm, the sense of taste is blunted to some extent by long use and the condition of one's health has much to do with the sensitiveness of the taste. A bad cold absolutely destroys a sense of taste, since taste and smell are closely related. Smoking does not hamper the functions of the senses but one cannot taste tea accurately and smoke at the same time. One taster claims that men in his profession are divided into two classes—those who can enjoy a cup of good tea as a beverage and those who have lost their appreciation of it. In his opinion only the first class can get the best results in their work.

Demonstration of Tea and Coffee Brings Splendid Results

HALIFAX, N. S. (Special.) — A novel idea has been introduced into the tea and coffee business of Halifax by Wentzells, Limited, at "The Big Store," in the form of a Japanese tea room where one may taste the various blends of teas and coffee that are sold in the store.

Wentzells is known as one of the most progressive grocery establishments in the city, and many bright and novel ideas originate and are carried out effectively in this store.

On being interviewed by Canadian Grocer, a member of the firm said that comparatively little coffee is being sold in Nova Scotia, and it is their intention to push the sale of this beverage. To do this they have installed in the south east corner of their store, where the tea and coffee department has been housed, a Japanese tea room. Here, the customers may taste for themselves tea, and especially coffee, which has been made by an expert, and distinguish the difference between the different blends.

In the morning coffee is dispensed in the tea room, and in the afternoon, tea. A customer may come into the store and obtain a cup of either beverage with toast.

Your correspondent asked if this "free drink" system paid, and if any increase had been noticed in the sales. The manager replied that during the first twenty-five days they had sold as much coffee as they had sold in the first three months of 1921. Wentzells import their tea and coffee direct from the plantations. The coffee beans are roasted by an outside firm, and ground on their own premises. It is branded Three Star. Not only do Wentzells sell their own blends but also other well known blends.

The tea room attracts customers not only to the tea and coffee department, but also to other departments. "Mike" the traffic cop on Wentzell's busy corner is a familiar figure in the tea room during his off minutes.

The above cut illustrates the soda fountain in the store of Hull & Sedwick, Sarnia, Ont. Almost every afternoon this fountain is lined with thirst citizens. Sales of ice cream over the fountain average 240 gallons a week.

Good Management Depends on the Equipment

Without a Modern Fountain and Up-to-Date Accessories Service Cannot Be What Public Looks for and Expects—Adequate Storage Room and Shelves Help to Maintain Air of Cleanliness

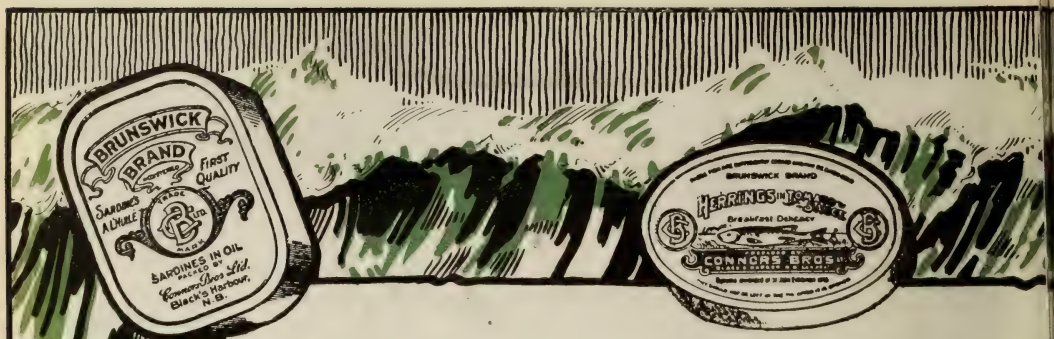
WHEN the men behind the soda fountain are busy they are BUSY—in capital letters. Every district has its "rush hours" and it is on these occasions that the grocery store proprietor sees the real need of modern equipment.

In a word, good equipment is essential to good management, for without the former the latter is practically impossible.

The soda fountain proper is divided into three main parts—the back bar, the counter and the interior. A counter and back bar involve large expenditures of money, and since the materials contained in them are so durable, they are purchased with the idea of lasting for many years. Styles in fountains change like everything else, but the steady demand is for material that presents a clean, sanitary appearance.

In selecting the back bar the purchaser should not overlook a good mirror. If waiting for an order to be served, a patron invariably studies his physiognomy in the mirror; if the reflection which greets him is flattering, his attitude of mind will be cheery, and this will certainly be reflected back to the grocer by "repeat" sales.

For trimming for the back bar plain materials are preferred to gaudy, elaborate designs upon the lamps or brackets. Since this back bar is an item which is going to last for a long time it is better to select simpler designs of which the public will not tire. Make certain that there is adequate storage room and shelves to accommodate your needs, so that the appearance of the fountain will not be marred by having boxes, food or dishes packed upon it. The shelves beneath for storage purposes should have sliding doors; they are easily closed, keeping the food fresh, and do not obstruct the movements of the busy dispenser.



And now for the most important part of the equipment,—the interior. Since white is emblematic of purity, and is almost universally used in equipment brought in contact with food, many grocers consider it advisable from this sanitary standpoint, to use white fixtures, wherever possible at the fountain.

These interiors do not require tedious polishing, but only a quick bath of soapsuds each morning, to put it in good condition. This quick cleansing is a labor saver, and the dispenser can now use his one hour formerly spent in polishing in more profitable ways.

Clean, Cold and Speedy

The keynote of the fountain should be clean, cold, and quick service. By selecting a good fountain the grocer is assured of clean service, but there are several essentials for cold service.

To keep his fountain in excellent working order ought to be the aim of every grocer who carries this sideline, for, unless the equipment is equal to the demands made upon it, is scrupulously clean, efficient and up-to-date, the patrons will soon dwindle away and go to another place where everything is as they expect it to be.

Grocers Will Find Increased Trade In Revival Of Home Preserving This Season

Lower Prices on Fruits and Sugar With Particularly Heavy Crops of Most Varieties of the Former Should Mean Heavy Sales Not Only of These Lines but of All Requisites for Preserving

MONTREAL, (Special).—According to a number of retail grocers there is a revival of home preserving this year that promises an increased trade for the grocers for August and September. Lower prices on fruit and sugar are mainly responsible for this, but on the other hand some credit must go to the individual retail grocers who are pushing the sale of fruit and all the requisites of preserving.

Sugar Prices Lower

Although the sugar market has advanced recently it is not as high as last year when the wholesale price was $8.25 a bag, even after a sudden drop in the price. A high price on sugar always discourages preserving and this year a low price on sugar, prior to the fruit season, fixed in the housewife's mind a determination to do some preserving, a determination which, according to the demand for cherries this week, has not altogether been shaken by the advance in the price.

Fruit Prices Lower

Then too prices on fruit have been much lower than in recent years. Strawberries, although there was some disappointment in them, were in big demand. One wholesale fruit dealer in Montreal told a Canadian Grocer representative that his firm had handled twice as many strawberries this year as they did last. He also added that the same can be said of cherries. Another fruit dealer reports that in his estimation there is twice as much preserving this year as in the last four years.

The Best to Come

Yet, according to these fruit dealers, the best is yet to come. The reports are that there is a heavy crop of peaches to be harvested and prices will be low. The same report is given on grapes. Raspberries are only fair but there is a prolific crop of black currants ripening. To the retail grocer this may mean much if he takes advantage of the season. The summer months are generally dull, since so many people are out of the city and those who are at home do not buy heavily.

More Business for the Grocer

But the preserving season brings a stimulant to business. People will not know that fruit, sugar and accessories are lower in price unless the grocer points the fact out to his customers. Nor will they know that there has been this year a net reduction of 18 per cent. in the price of glass preserving jars. Anything that goes to stimulate preserving should mean more business for the grocer.

Good Window Displays

One of the most effective means of telling the public that it is economical this year to preserve fruits, is to dress a window illustrating this point. W. Finlay & Co., retail grocers at the corner of Green and St. Catherine Sts., Montreal, had, a week ago, an attractive window featuring these lines. Glass preserving jars were built up to form a background for a display of strawberries and cherries, with bags of sugar forming pillars at the corners. Artistically lettered signs told of the fleeting opportunity to preserve these fruits.

Display of Brazil Nuts Brings Increased Sales

Montreal.—A basket full of Brazil nuts attracted much attention this week in the window of Gravel Freres, 382 St. Catherine St. west, Montreal. It also sold a goodly quantity of the nuts, according to one of the clerks. This window appealed to the passer-by on account of the educational value of it and its novelty.

Brazil Nuts in Pods

In the basket were six big dark brown scaly balls, somewhat resembling cocoanuts but without the hairy covering and a darker shade of brown. The top one was cut in two, exposing four Brazil nuts nestled in the bowl shaped shell, called the pod. It was a revelation to many. Comparatively few people knew that the hard Brazil nuts grew in pods and to be displayed in that fashion, excited the curiosity. Over the basket was a sign which read, "Brazil Nuts in the Pod, as Imported by the Montreal Nut and Brokerage. 75c a Pod."

Figuring the New Stamp Tax

ALL CHEQUES issued after August 1 must bear stamps at the rate of 2 cents for each $50 or fraction thereof. Cheques for $5,000 must bear stamps to the value of $2 which is the maximum cheque tax. A cheque up to $50 requires 2 cents in stamps but a cheque for $50.01 requires 4 cents in stamps. The following schedule shows the tax required on cheques. Clip it out and paste it in a handy place in the office.

New Food Building Almost Completed

Toronto (Special).—The Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition has been practically completed, and the booths are being erected by the various manufacturers. Many of these will be more or less elaborate in character so that when the building opens on the first day of the exhibition, it will be one of the main attractions on the grounds this season. The partitions between the booths are being made uniform and the fronts of the counters are all being painted in white enamel. The aisle posts are also in white enamel.

The exhibitors are being urged to complete their booths just as soon as possible so as to make sure that everything will be in readiness for the opening of the exhibition on Saturday, August 26.

Prices of Dried Fruits In East Not Likely To Be Lower

Montreal (Special).—Richard Bray, representing Thornton & Co., of Malaga, Spain, who was in Montreal recently, gave a report on the dried fruit situation in the East. He stated that the crop promises to be excellent and will be ready early in the season. He claimed that the quality of the fruit would be particularly good this year. At the same time he did not give any hope that prices would be much lower since, as he claims, many of the growers and exporters lost much money on last year's crop and the good crop this year will average up and put business on a better basis.

Mr. Bray is an Englishman who has spent 16 years in Spain in the dried fruit business. Not only are the reports on raisins and figs good but Mr. Bray states that the crop of almonds this year will be much above that of last year and in this line he would predict slightly easier prices for export.

H. L. Perry Company, Winnipeg, held their summer picnic at Selkirk last Saturday. All the members of the staff and many of their friends attended. Mrs. M. E. Perry, president of the company, M. Feeley, secretary, H. W. McConnel, vice-president and P. B. Cork, were present. Prizes for the various events were handed out at the conclusion of each event. The Rooster race and the Sutherland Derby caused some sport, and much amusement was caused by the often vain attempts to keep the roosters in the right direction. A feature of the picnic was the baseball game between No. 2 warehouse and No. 1. The first scored 10 runs to 4 made by the latter.

Cannot Make Use Of Stations To Readdress Express

Ottawa, (Special).—The Railway Commission has refused an application by a fish merchant of Montreal to allow him to readdress boxes of fish at the railway station and have the express company deliver to several addresses, instead of to his place of business. In refusing the application, the Board says that if it were granted, the same principle would have to be applied to all commodities handled by express, and "the railway companies' stations would become simply a clearing house for commission merchants in holding their goods for re-addressing before express companies would complete the contract of delivery."

Ideal Weather Favors Sarnia Grocers For Sixteenth Annual Outing

Retail Grocers, Travellers and Friends Enjoy Day of Recreation—Games and Sports Keep Everyone in Merry Mood—Committee Have Busy Day

SARNIA, Ont. (Special).—The sixteenth annual outing of the Sarnia Retail Grocers' Association was held on Wednesday last, at Lake Huron Park. Ideal weather, a crowd of approximately three thousand five hundred and a diversified program of sports, combined to make this picnic one of the most successful in the history of the organization.

Despite the large number of events and the unavoidable minor delays caused by the large number of competitors, the program was carried out on practically scheduled time. Four of the children's races were disposed of before noon and the remaining forty-seven regular events, and eighteen special attractions were concluded by six o'clock.

Babies and Jazz

The baby shows drew what was perhaps one of the largest fields of entrants.

In the first event for baby girls under one year, fifty-two babies were entered and in the second event, for boys under one year, sixty babies competed and the prize went to a one month old infant.

The jazz specialty contest in which the brevity of the ladies' skirts was determining factor created a great deal of amusement. The judges announced that the shortest nether garment was 32 inches from the ground and the second one 30 inches and on down to 23 inches.

Boxing Bouts Staged

Enthusiasts of the padded glove had a brief glimpse of their favorite sport in the boxing bouts staged towards the close of the afternoon. The first bout, a three two-minute round affair brought together Scotty McDonald of Sarnia, and Wilfred L. Moreaux, of Montreal, and after a lively bout in which a little claret was spilled, referee George Wood of Sarnia awarded the decision to McDonald.

McDonald appeared again in the second bout and was pitted against Ted Rawlings, of Sarnia, in a two minute round fracas. The bill was too brief to allow either of the boxers to cut loose and no decision was given.

Committees Responsible

The success of any outing is largely dependent on the completeness of the preliminary arrangements by the officers and committees in charge and the lion's share of the credit for this enjoyable event goes to the officers and the members of the committee of the association who are: honorary president, W. H. Kenny; honorary vice-president, Peter Clark; president, J. A. Lackie; secretary, R. Kirby; assistant secretary, Ewart McMann; treasurer, T. Gammon; official scorer, Harry Coe; official starters, R. H. McMann and H. Sanders; town committee, J. A. Lackie, John Kennedy, L. S. Parkinson, H. Sanders, W. Campbell, Brock Palmer, W. One Method Of Collecting A Large Account

A Canadian Grocer subscriber writes that he is having trouble collecting a debt from a customer to whom he has given too much credit through sympathy in misfortune and sickness. He says that now he does not seem to be over anxious to pay up and his account amounts to about half his farm. It has run for quite a while. The merchant got him to sign a statement about annually acknowledging the debt. He asks us the following questions:

1. Is it necessary that such an acknowledgement be witnessed to make it good in law?

2. Can a man thus in debt give his property to his wife?

3. If I secure a mortgage can I prevent him removing timber or selling it?

4. In case of litigation for a debt of over $700 where would the case be tried?

Canadian Grocer submitted these questions to a lawyer for his opinions. We are herewith submitting his opinions to our subscriber for what they are worth. It should of course be taken into consideration that a case is never decided until the judge has given his decision and it is sometimes contrary to what one thinks it should be. However, the opinions are as follows:

1. "If you mean an acknowledgement for the purpose of making the account still collectable at law after the expiration of six years no witness is required. Such an acknowledgement, however, to be effective must be so worded as to express or imply a promise to pay."

2. "If when you sued he transferred his property to his wife, you could enter an action to have such transfer set aside."

3. "If after you took a mortgage he removed timber you could take possession of the farm; or if your margin of security was narrow you could have him restrained from removing timber."

4. "For a debt up to $800, the action would be entered in the County Court. If over $800 it would be the Supreme Court."

Ottawa Grocers Discuss Fruit and Vegetable Peddlers

Ottawa, (Special).—In an effort to be right up-to-date, the grocers of Ottawa are considering the advisability of staging a radio programme in connection with the annual Pure Food Show, at the Central Canada Exhibition in September. The matter was discussed at a regular meeting of the grocers' section a few days ago, and most of those who attended were in favor of giving the scheme a trial. An offer has been received from a certain concern to put on radio programmes in a central part of the building in the evenings. The offer will be either accepted or rejected at the next meeting, early in August.

Complaints were voiced by several members against the galaxy of fruit and vegetable peddlers who have been invading Ottawa's streets lately, and it was decided to take steps to find out if they were all properly entitled to the privilege. An instance of irregularity in this respect was cited by one member who had come across a peddler who had not been a resident of the city more than five months. The law requires that he be a resident at least a year before he is entitled to a license. This case will be brought to the attention of the police.

Mention was made of the Eastern Ontario R. M. A. conference which was held recently at Brockville, and all were agreed that it had been most beneficial. The grocers were well represented at the convention.

Those who attended the meeting were: A. E. Kelly, A. S. Moreland, T. H. Kennedy, T. Bowman, John Regan, H. Johnston, D. Bell, A. Phillips and J. C. Allan.

Salmon Pack Not Up To Expectations In Some Places

Prince Rupert, B. C.—Major Motherwell, chief inspector of fisheries, reports seven thousand cases of sock-eye salmon packed at Smith's Inlet up to two weeks ago. This is 50 per cent. of what was expected.

At Rivers Inlet twelve thousand cases were packed, and at Kimsquit 43,000 cases. A fair pack was taken at Bella Bella. At Kimsquit a close season has been applied for owing to the canners having gone beyond the boat ratings. At Lowe Inlet, owing to the very dry weather, creek sockeye have not yet appeared. The Skeena up to Saturday night showed a total of sixteen thousand cases, while the Naas pack exceeds expectations.

Western Crops Look Promising

Winnipeg.—"As nearly as can be judged at this date I should say that between the lakes and the Pacific coast the crop, cereal, fruits and vegetables, will be one of the best we have ever had," declared Grant Hall, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Mr. Hall has spent three weeks in the West.

"On the prairies I think we have every reason to be hopeful. Along the main line of the C. P. R., south to the international boundary, and for 175 miles north of the main line, the grain crop is better than it has been for several years," Mr. Hall said. "Of course there are districts where it is short; but even in those districts the heads are of good length and well filled, showing that the early moisture was sufficient to carry it through. The sawfly is making some progress, and just what it may do yet is somewhat problematical."

British Columbia is suffering from drought, he said, but apparently it has not shortened the crop to any considerable degree, except possibly the apples in some districts.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR TURKISH FIGS AND RAISIN CROPS

A report on the condition and prospects for Turkish figs and raisins from N. Balladur & Co., Smyrna, says: "It is stated that at present the estimate for the Sultana crop is 38,000 tons, but, that under continued favorable weather conditions, it may reach 40,000 tons, as compared with 32,000 tons last year. Barring unforeseen accidents the crop is expected to be of superior quality and condition. In view of the close clean-up of the 1921 crop in the primary as well as consuming markets, it is expected that opening prices will be about the same as last year. Of Elemes 8,000 tons are estimated for this crop, or 2,000 tons more than last season."

Some Hints On Selling Biscuits

In many stores biscuits form a considerable portion of the annual turnover and according to some merchants have been the means of bringing new customers to the store.

Biscuit salesmanship is no great trick. A suggestion to a customer about a new biscuit just arrived or how nice a certain biscuit is, served with fresh berries or some other article that the customer is purchasing, will often terminate in a sale for a pound of biscuits.

Henry Lohman, secretary of the United Retail Grocers' Association, Brooklyn, N. Y., recently offered some good hints on increasing sales on biscuits. He says:

"There is not a man, woman, or boy or girl and you can add the household pets, who is not fond of biscuits in some manner or form.

"Can any one suggest any other grocery commodity that can be more universally used to appease the appetite, quiet the crying baby, satisfy the boy or girl who is longing for sweets? Should unexpected company arrive serve a cup of cocoa, tea or coffee, with some kind of a biscuit or with an assortment as a side dish, and your guests will go away satisfied.

"With soups, chowders and many other cooked foods, the use of biscuits seems almost indispensable.

"For those convalescing from sickness, or suffering from indigestion or other stomach disorder, biscuits will assimilate much quicker and with less distress than any other baked food.

"Two biscuits, and a yeast cake or two, will give the body as much nutriment as a dish of a great many other foods.

"One could suggest many more uses for biscuits.

"There are hundreds of ways one could suggest to a grocer, as to how he can sell more biscuits than he does, and also how he can make good profit if he pushes biscuits to every one who comes to his store to buy something else.

"Cultivate the good will of the children by giving them a biscuit on and off. They will coax their parents to buy more.

"A biscuit to the baby will please the mother very much. And there will be a regular biscuit customer after that.

"The top of a butter tub, cleaned and surrounded with clean paper napkins and some biscuits spread on it, with a number of small or large packages banked around it will sell large quantities.

"The cost of sampling will be small compared to the ultimate future sales.

"Space will not permit any more suggestions, but a clean biscuit display, distinct from all other goods, will sell biscuits and increase your profits."

Montreal Board of Trade Making Tour Across Canada

Montreal (Special).—On the first of September a special train is leaving Montreal, carrying one hundred and twenty-five members of the Board of Trade as well as the Parliamentary party from England, who are touring Canada for the purpose of becoming acquainted with conditions here.

A special train on the C. P. R. which will be so scheduled that it will give the tourists the benefit of travelling by daylight when the scenery is most beautiful and by night through the less attractive stretches of the country. The itinerary includes a visit to every place of special interest with boat trips from Port McNichol to Fort William and Port Arthur on the Lake of the Woods, the Arrowhead Lakes, the Okanagan Lakes and up the coast from Vancouver to Prince Rupert. So far no representatives of the grocery trade in this city have signified their intention of going on the trip.

New Goods

A new product used to jelly fruits is being placed on the market. This product is called Jell-a-Fruit. It is a fruit pectin in a powdered form. It is put up in quarters, halves and one pound packages. Manufactured by the National Fruit Products, Limited, 705 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

The T. H. Estabrooks Co. have recently placed on the market a new package for their orange pekoe tea. The label is in four colors and gold. Orange is the basic color, the others being red, black and green. The front and back are the same design. The top carries a brief description of the tea and the bottom directions for making. One end has the price and the other the Red Rose trade mark. In addition to the new half and pound packages, the company have put out a small package of the same tea, with a number of them packed in a carton for counter display. The package used for this line is the same in design as for the larger ones.

"Every New Line That I Introduce Is Just Found Money"

Jack Burnet, Cobourg, Ont., Does Not Hesitate to Stock New Lines—Means Extra Profit and New Customers—China and Crockery Splendid Lines

"EVERY new line introduced, is like finding money," remarked Jack Burnet, Cobourg, Ont., to a Canadian Grocer representative. "We hear a good deal about the operating expenses being so much which should be taken into account when figuring the selling price of an article. But I maintain that every new line that I introduce, without adding to my expenses, is just found money, if I only sell that article on a five per cent. margin. Of course I don't make as much money as the rest of them, but just the same I claim it can be done. And goodness knows, there are not many stores to-day, which cannot add new articles without in any way increasing their overhead."

One line which the Burnet store has recently introduced with much success, and what they claim is really a side issue, is poultry feed and medicines. But perhaps the most outstanding line that can be considered a side line in a retail grocery store and one which has brought reputation and much business to the Burnet store, is china and crockery.

Although several show cases are set aside for displaying china, it is in a separate room at the back of the store—and which is divided from the grocery section by a glass partition—that the real assortment is on display. Here can be seen, full dinner and tea sets. Odd pieces of china and glass ware, from the finest products from England, France and Belgium, to the commonest kind. In fact an assortment that almost any individual merchant would be proud to display.

"China is something more than just crockery," said Mr. Burnet. "There is something about a nice piece of china that makes you feel you have a real treasure. It is a study in itself and a person to sell it must be enthusiastic and believe what he is saying or otherwise a sale will not materialize."

LARGE BRAZIL NUT CROP

The total crop of Brazil nuts will exceed 30,000 tons, which is the largest ever gathered. It is expected that shipments will be about equally divided between the United States and Europe, and in the neighborhood of 15,000 tons to each. Economic conditions having improved in England, that country is now taking her usual share of about half the crop.

CALIFORNIA APRICOT CROP

Reports from Fresno, Calif., states that the apricot season is drawing to a close, the middle of the month having witnessed the picking of the last of the crop in many sections. The crop has not been large in quantity, due to early frost damage, but those whose orchards weathered the cool weather of the late spring have excellent yields of fine quality. Some of the trees were so loaded that despite props the limbs broke down from the weight of the fruit. Dried apricots have been selling at 24c and 25c per pound, or around $500 per ton. Green or shipping apricots brought $75 to $90. The packing houses have been busy getting the fruit off to market, due to the railroad strike, and a large amount of it has already been sent East.

The above illustrates how Levesque's Provision Store, Montreal, Que., displays cooked meats. Mr. Levesque claims that display is half the power that sells goods quickly, and spares no trouble or expense to get the best results in this way.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

DURING the week under review the raw sugar market developed a shade quieter tone after the spectacular advance of the last two weeks, but remained in a firm position. Cubas were selling at 2¾c c. & f. New York and 3⅞c was asked at which latter figure there were only moderate offerings and occasional lots were obtainable at slight concessions. It was understood that one sale was made to an operator of 10,000 bags at 3 13-16c c. & f. New York for the second half of August shipment. Sales were made of Porto Ricos and Philippines at 5.36c equivalent to 3.75c for Cubas. These two descriptions, however, are from American possessions and pay no duty. Canadian refiners purchased 8,000 to 9,000 bags of San Domingos at 3.65c c. i. f. Halifax.

There appears to be a steady improvement for refined sugar across the line, especially for export and it is this continued demand which keeps refiners in the market. It is impossible to estimate just how long this export demand will continue. Cables from Europe estimate the increased production of beet sugar as considerably over that of the previous year. In Germany alone the beet sowings are 894,149 acres as compared with 802,750 acres in 1921 but much short of the big year of 1914 when 1,359,000 acres were sowed. Germany has purchased 100,000 tons of refined sugar since the embargo was lifted in June, and it is estimated that they must purchase 50,000 tons more to meet the requirements before the new crop comes on the market. The new crop available will be just sufficient for domestic consumption and it is not considered there will be any surplus for export.

Export prices for refined from the Atlantic seaboard are firm. The U.S. asking $5.10 while some second hand was obtainable at $4.85 to $4.90. Canadian refiners freely offering at $4.75 for August shipment.

Canadian refined sugar for domestic consumption holds firm at $7.50 Montreal basis, but it is understood that some sales were made of a second hand character at a price below this figure.

Opening prices are announced on this season's pack of peas. With the exception of standards there is little change in prices as compared with those of a year ago. Standards are slightly lower than last year. The packs of strawberries and raspberries are small.

Wholesalers are in receipt of new prices on this year's canned salmon. Sockeye is quoted $I higher than last year while cohoe is $2.50 per case lower and pinks from 50 cents to 75 cents per case higher.

All varieties of teas continue strong. Advices from primary markets indicate further advances on all grades even to the commonest kinds.

New prices on both old and new crop raisins are expected in the next week or two. Opening prices by the Association are also expected on California prunes. In the spot market, dried fruits show little activity and prices are generally unchanged.

In other grocery commodities, the week shows little features of interest and business in general has the usual summer quietness.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, August 2.—General market conditions for grocery products seem to be holding quite firm. Sugar, which has strengthened lately, continues to hold firm with prospects of an advance in the very near future on account of the price of raw sugar, refiners claiming that with the high price of raws the refined article is likely to rise in sympathy. All lines of spices are about the same as last week. Dried fruits are showing a decline in prices owing to the reports coming in that the crop of dried fruits is expected to be above the average. New prices are being named on French imported peas. The grocery market looks as if towards Fall prices would be reduced on account of the splendid crops. There is no change to report in the rice market nor in the cereal market. Both are now in seasonable demand.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, August 2.—Business in wholesale circles is reported as being rather quiet during the week under review. This perhaps is no exception at this season of the year when holidays are the order of the day and retailers are cleaning up stocks before the delivery of new crop goods. Sugar shows no change as compared with a week ago but there appears to have been some selling of a second hand nature at below the official list price. Prices are out on new pack salmon and with the exception of cohoe, are some higher than last years. Opening prices are also announced on new pack peas and with the exception of standards are about the same as a year ago. Standards are slightly lower than the opening price of last year. Cereals, both bulk and packages, are steady and unchanged. Teas continue to show strength, while coffee, although firm in primary markets, hold fairly steady on spot. Trading in nuts on futures has been a trifle more active. New prices for both old and new crop raisins are expected in a few days. Potatoes and other vegetables, also fruits, are in good supply with values tending easier.

NEW SALMON PRICES OUT

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—Opening prices on this season's pack of salmon are announced by the packers but wholesale prices are not as yet available. Prices on sockeye, ones and halves show an advance of $1 per case over last year, but cohoe is $2.50 per case lower. Pinks, halves, are 75c. higher and ones are 50c. per case higher than a year ago. Nothing as yet has been learned about deliveries, but it is expected that sockeye will only be about a 30 per cent. one. Prices are announced on new pack of Alymer and Quaker brands of peas. Standards are 15c. per doz. lower than last year but other grades are about the same. The prices on peas f. o. b. factory are as follows: Standards, $1.54: Early June, $1.83: Sweet Wrinkle, $2.-28: and Extra Fine Sifted, $2.74 per doz. Delivered Toronto, these prices would be about 9c. per doz. higher.

RAISIN PRICES EXPECTED

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—A quietness continues to prevail in the spot situation on dried fruits. New prices on both old and new crop raisins are expected any day. There is some talk on the street that new goods will open at around 13c. at the coast, but this is purely conjecture and nothing of definiteness has yet been learned. The crop of raisins is fairly good but this is apparently not taken into consideration by the association. It appears that prices are based mostly on what the public will stand, because it will be remembered that last year, in order to get at an opening price, the association placed a car on the New York market for auction. The highest price bid, was then taken as the opening price. Prunes are also quiet, the trade awaiting prices by the California Prune & Apricot Association.

SECOND HAND TRADING IN SUGAR

Toronto.

SUGAR.—Refined sugar is steady at the moment but firm on the basis of $7.50 Montreal, or $7.84 delivered Toronto. Some second hand selling developed during the week, which indicates some traders apparently overbought and in order to take out sugar within contract period were compelled to trim prices below list prices in order to make a quick sale. The raw market during the week was rather quiet but firm after the advances of the last couple of weeks. Cubas sold at 3¾c. c. & f. New York while 3 7-8c. was asked.

Toronto.

NUTS.—Trading in nuts appears to be picking up Importers report considerable business for futures being booked on shelled goods during the week. Market conditions show little change but shelled Bordeaux walnuts are showing signs of scarcity and it has been said that there will not be sufficient old crop to carry over until the new is available. Prices are steady but firm. Spanish shelled peanuts are very strong with quotations advanced to 13c. per lb.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, August 2.—Recent reports state that the Manitoba wheat crop is in splendid shape, while in some parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta rains are needed badly. Business in the country towns and district is showing an improvement and the cities are expected to respond shortly. There are few price changes in grocery commodities. Sales for all lines of canned goods are fully up to normal. Prunes on the primary markets are ruling firm but buying is deferred awaiting the announcement of the association's new prices. Prices on raisins are expected around the first week in August. Jams are maintaining a firm tone with buying limited except on snap offers. The sugar market is ruling firm and a further advance is anticipated. Fruits and vegetables are arriving in good supply with prices slightly easier.

COFFEE MARKET QUIET

Winnipeg.

NO CHANGE IN DRIED FRUITS

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is an improvement in the demand for spot prunes and prices have firmed up slightly. Little interest is shown in future prunes, buying of which is deferred pending the announcement of opening prices by the association. New fancy apricots are reported scarce and buyers are purchasing sparingly and this also holds true of new crop peaches. The raisin situation is dominated by the expectation of the announcement around the first week in August of a new basis of prices by the raisin association. Local stocks of seeded are practically cleaned up. Citron and other peels are in a strong position.

Peach Production In Niagara District Will Make Record

The peach production in the Niagara district will be a record one this season, according to T. J. Mahony, president of the Niagara Peninsula Growers, Limited.

Even the highest total of other bumper crop years will fall far behind the mark of 1922 he prophesied. Last year his company shipped 564 cars of this particular fruit and as an indication of the increase, arrangements are being completed to handle over 1,200 cars this year. Prices are expected to be easier, but Mr. Mahony did not mention any figures.

Cannot Alter By-law Closing Stores at 6 P.M.

Edmonds, B. C.—Protesting that the early-closing by-law in Burnaby would eliminate any benefits derived by storekeepers from cheaper taxes in the municipality, which had evidently attracted several of the small-business men to that district, 76 of the complainants signed a petition asking Burnaby council to re-consider the closing hours, and presented it to the council. Secretary of the G.A.U.V., wrote opposing the early closing by-law, and presented arguments to show that many shopkeepers who had formerly approved, now opposed early closing. The council gave the by-law preliminary first and second readings, and the veterans' association will be asked to furnish the municipality with a counter petition before a decision can be reached.

Catalogue and Booklets

An interesting little booklet entitled "The Story of Salt," is being distributed by Cerebos Limited, Toronto. This booklet traces the history of salt ages back and quotes biblical references to it. There are also many historical references made and it is shown that at one time the Greeks considered it a sacred product.

Fibre Board Boxes Make Satisfactory Shipping Containers

The fibre shipping container has come to stay, according to an article published by the "Spice Mill" of New York. The manufacturers have so standardized their product and perfected their methods of construction that no one doubts the efficiency of containers made of corrugated fibre board or of solid fibre.

To gain the advantages of a package which can be shipped and stored flat at little cost of freight, the user is obliged to provide means for setting up the box and closing it securely after it has been filled. A strong, well designed and well built fibre container cannot give the service for which the shipper pays unless it is sealed securely. The failure of only a few boxes in transit may cause an economical method of packing to be set aside when a little care in sealing would have produced perfect satisfaction.

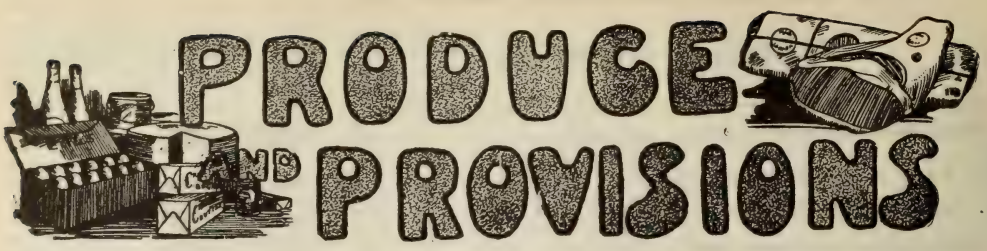
Fibre containers are manufactured with silicate of soda as the adhesive which holds the lips of the corrugated sheets to the flat lining and binds the various plies of the solid fibre into a single strong unit. So, for sealing the finished box the same material is logical and its value has been demonstrated by much experience. This method of sealing produces a strong mechanical reinforcement and prevents the weaving motion which makes piles of boxes unstable and increases the risk of failure. Tight sealing, top and bottom, makes it impossible to pilfer the contents without detection and the danger of loss from this source is almost eliminated.

What is Silicate of Soda?

Silicate of Soda is a mineral product. It is made from soda and sand melted together in a furnace from which it comes with the appearance of glass. It is commonly known as "Water Glass" and is used in preserving eggs. With special equipment this glass like substance is dissolved in water to make a syrup solution which is used for adhesive purposes. It has the advantage of setting quickly and with a strength much greater than that of paper. On wood, silicate will produce a joint with a strength of 500 lbs. to the square inch.

Commercial silicate of soda is odorless, clean and sterile. It contains less water than any other adhesive so that the boxes do not have to be specially dried after sealing. Being a mineral substance it resists the attack of vermin.

What Is Initiative?



It is doing the right thing without being told. But next to doing the right thing without being told is to do it when you are told to do it at once. That is to say, carry the message to Garcia.

Next, there are those who never do a thing until they are told twice; such get no honors and small pay.

Next, there are those who do the right thing only when necessity kicks them from behind, and these get indifference instead of honors and a pittance for pay. This kind spends most of its time polishing a bench with a hard luck story.

Then, still lower down in the scale than this, we find the fellow who will not do the right thing even when some one goes along to show him how and stays to see that he does it; he is always out of a job and receives the contempt he deserves, unless he has a rich Pa, in which case Destiny patiently waits around the corner with a stuffed club.

To which class do you belong?—Elbert Hubbard.

Considers Window Displays His Best Advertisement

H. M. Belyea, Woodstock, N.B., Pays Much Attention to Windows—Passersby Attracted to Them—Price Tickets Help to Boost Sales

WOODSTOCK, N. B. (Special.)—The use of window space as a handy place to dump merchandise without any thought as to selling, is fast going into the discard. Merchants are more and more realizing that the proper use of window space is one of the best advertisements the store can have.

Such is the experience of H. M. Belyea, who recently stated to a representative of Canadian Grocer that he considers the windows his best advertisement. He always makes it a point to have the windows so attractive that they cannot fail to arrest the attention of every passerby.

In the window generally used for displaying meats and vegetables, the floor is covered with white oilcloth. Mr. Belyea is of the opinion that this material is admirable for this purpose, because it is so easily kept clean. In trimming this window, crepe paper is often used to advantage. A border of this paper of a color suitable to the season, forms an attraction to the eye. When eggs are displayed, they are shown in cheese box lids, covered with the same color crepe paper as the decorations. Cooked meats, hams and bacon are displayed on plates which are decorated with lettuce, parsley or other green stuff.

To each article on display is attached a neat price card. Mr. Belyea considers the use of price tickets an excellent plan. He claims that they make many a sale because people can see the price without the bother of asking.

The Belyea store is operated on the cash basis and has been found to be very satisfactory.

British Columbia and Puget Sound Salmon Will Come on Bare Market

Export Demand Cleans Up 1921 Stocks of British Columbia and Puget Sound Salmon—This Season's Pack Smaller Than Usual—Canned Goods Situation in United States Healthy

TORONTO (Special).—E. B. McGovern, president of McGovern & McGovern of Seattle, Wash., was in Toronto last week and gave some interesting information on the salmon situation.

He reports an active market in salmon and says that for the first time since war days spot stocks of canned salmon both in British Columbia and Puget Sound are on the point of a clean-up. As a matter of fact British Columbia is almost entirely cleaned up and dealers there have been drawing on stocks at Seattle for export trade.

At the present moment, he said, it was too early to foretell what the actual pack would be, but on account of the rigid restrictions by the United States Government on Puget Sound and Alaska, the pack would probably be below preparation.

A Hint as to Prices

Already the new pack Alaska Sockeye Talls have reached Seattle and have been eagerly sought after by the trade in the States on the basis of $9.00 for Talls f. o. b. coast. This price is guaranteed against the Alaska Packers' Association opening prices. One prominent packer has already named a price on Fancy Puget Sound Cohoe of $4.60 per case for 4 dozen halves and $5.60 per case of 48-1's tall.

New pack Puget Sound Sockeye have already been sold at $10 per case of 4 dozen halves. This almost extinct species will not be in sufficient supply to take care of the demand, and certain trade demands this grade regardless of price.

Mr. McGovern said that the canned goods situation generally in the States is in a healthy condition. Fruit, vegetable and salmon packers will have the new packs coming on a bare market and while he does not look to see a runaway market, he does look forward to brisk business within the next sixty days.

There has been considerable export demand particularly for Alaska Red talls and this was instrumental in cleaning up the carry over of the 1921 pack.

On leaving for the coast, Mr. McGovern stated he was very favorably impressed with business conditions in Canada.

BLOOD ORANGES MADE TO ORDER

How ordinary oranges are transformed and sold as blood oranges through the use of a hypodermic needle and red aniline dye, was told in a recent German medical journal. This journal reported the injury of a young girl by the point of a hypodermic needle, swallowed while eating a supposed blood orange. The girl had purchased a dozen of the oranges, all of which proved on investigation to have been treated with the dye. Frauds of this sort are no novelty in Germany, it is said, similar cases having often been reported.—Sunkist Courier.

A combination of meats and fresh green vegetables, make an attractive display.

Would you have them stop at your store?

Hundreds of automobilists pass your door every day. Would you have them stop at your store? Would you attract their trade?

Drivers of motor cars represent the best class of customers. They are above average in their buying power. And they spend liberally.

A Wayne Honest Measure Pump on the curb in front of your store will cause many of them to halt for gas.

When they have stopped you or your clerks will be able to sell them merchandise from the shelves inside your store—the special for the day, or something which you think they need.

Many who stop for gas regularly can easily be made into steady customers for all your stock. People will, you know, continue to buy from a place to which they become accustomed.

You will want a Wayne Honest Measure Pump, of course, because you want to be sure that the service outside your store is as good as that inside. Wayne Pumps are favorably known everywhere because of their accurate measures of cool, clean, water-free gasoline.

Two types are shown here. Won't you send for Bulletins 276-CG and 452-CG which describe these pumps?—No obligation for writing.

Ready To-day--MacLean's Mid-Summer

All Fiction Number

BY WAY of an innovation, the August 1st issue of MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE has been produced as a Mid-Summer All-Fiction Number. The cover is by C. H. Taffs, the noted English artist who made such a hit with the cover of our January 1st issue this year.

There will be the usual Review of Reviews section, the Woman's Department, the Scoutmasters' and the Financial Departments; but, for this one issue, there will be no other serious original articles.

The chief feature of this issue will be a 42,000 word novel,

"THE JADE GOD," by Alan Sullivan

Never before has a complete novel been published in one issue of a Canadian periodical. In fact, there are few magazines in United States which have ever done it. There will be ten full pages of this novel at the front, well illustrated, as well as a generous turnover at the back of the magazine. In book form this one novel would sell for $1.75.

$1.75 Novel August 1st For Only 20c

Other big fiction features in the August 1st issue include—

"CHEESE," by Henry Holt, is the story of a business man who has spent his life manufacturing cheese —and made a big success of it. He suddenly gives way to an impulse which his wife cannot curb and which leads him through many ventures, New York, Paris, Monte Carlo—in all of which he learns to "take a chance."

"THE PINK PAGODA" is from the pen of Isabel Ecclestone McKay, that charming Canadian novelist who looks out on the world from her comfortable Vancouver home and who has achieved such a recent success with her book, "The Window Gazer."

"THE GUEST OF TRADITION" is a newspaper yarn by J. L. Rutledge. George Wilcox was a tradition around the old "Examiner" office and whenever cub reporters came on the staff they were urged to write like Wilcox. But Wilcox met a dainty little bit of femininity from the stage and the criss-crossing of their lives, and the wrecking of his ambition, are woven into an extraordinarily gripping tale.

"PER AGREEMENT" is by Archie McKishnie and is a mystery story told in this Canadian writer's best vein.

"HOOKS AND EYES," by Lloyd Roberts. Something is bound to happen when a bunch of New York chorus girls decide to venture into the Canadian wilds during the off-season (speaking theatrically), in order to get into condition for the rigors of their winter performances.

"THE TRYST OF THE WHITE LADY," by L. M. Montgomery. This is a delightful little love story with a very unusual turn to it, a story which measures up to the high standard which you expect from the author of "Anne of Green Gables."

"OVINGTON'S BANK," by Stanley J. Weyman. This is the next to the concluding instalment of this most popular serial.

SMYRNA RAISIN CROP LOOKS PROMISING

Reports from Smyrna indicate a Sultana crop of around 43,000 tons, against 30,000 tons last year. One packer says: "This crop which can now be estimated with a degree of certainty, because the season has advanced so far that further risks are practically excluded, is divided as follows: District of Smyrna, 34,000 tons; District of Vourla, 7,000 tons and District of Carabourna, 2,000 tons. Smyrna raisins are offered in Europe at low and so far steadily decreasing prices."

New home of FORCE at AYR, Ontario

The popularity and consequent increased Canadian demand for FORCE Whole Wheat Flakes has made it necessary for us to obtain larger mill capacity. The cereal mill formerly owned by the Canadian Cereal Company at Ayr, Ont., has been acquired, and we will move into it from Hamilton about the first of November.

The new mill will furnish ample facilities to take care of all the Canadian demand for FORCE. It will also help to supply the English requirements, where over five million packages of FORCE were consumed last year.

Of further interest, are the publicity plans of full page advertisements appearing in "MacLean's Magazine" beginning August 15th, to tell the FORCE story.

Reduced prices for FORCE are also now in effect.

Remember, FORCE is the whole wheat, and when you sell FORCE, you are selling health.

E. Warren, manager, Point du Bois Supply Company, Point du Bois, Man.

Ans.—We do not know of any book published on this exclusively but you will find below some extracts taken from the Grocers' Encyclopaedia, which we hope will be of service to you.

"French chocolates (excepting those made by the Compagnie Francaise) contain but little flavoring, and that generally vanilla.

Chocolate de Sante (health chocolate) is a French term for chocolate free from vanilla or other added flavor.

Menier's Chocolate is reputed to be all made from cocoa grown in the district of Rivas, Nicaragua.

In Belgium it is illegal to label mixtures as "Chocolate" or even to sell as "Pure" cocoa from which any of the fat of butter has been removed.

Chocolates are, of course, always understood to be compounded confections, but there is no excuse for lime, ground lentils, maise, and bean flour, foreign wax and oils, various gums, cinnabar, red earth, and even red lead, and pichurin or sassafras bark. There is really no generally accepted definition of what chocolate should consist of, or to what limited. Cokernut stearine, to the extent of 30 per cent, has been found in some of the cheap makes.

Good chocolate should dissolve readily in the mouth, without grittiness or rancid flavor. Perfumed chocolates may always be suspected as being intended to cover or disguise inferior cocoa or added substances."

CHRISTIE'S BISCUITS brought more trade to my store . . . . . .

Says aggressive Sarnia Grocer

Illustrating the interior of the branch store of A. H. Gammon & Sons, Sarnia, Ontario

"Christie's Biscuits are certainly a good line to get behind," says Mr. James Gammon, Manager of the branch store of A. Gammon and Sons, Sarnia.

"A good assortment of them I have found helps sales, generally better than anything I know of. The best way to display them is in properly constructed Christie cabinets with false display fronts.

"These cabinets enable us to keep our displays looking their best, save steps and enable us to more quickly fill orders, and check up stock as well as increasing sales through excellent display features. We sell Christie's biscuits exclusively."

Note the neat attractive appearance of the Christie Cabinet shown in the illustration above.

The experience of the aggressive Sarnia grocer is identical with thousands of quality dealers from coast to coast who cater to a particular clientele.

Christie Cabinets are furnished dealers absolutely at cost in any size or style. Write us for further particulars.

"Mailing Lists Obsolete"

A large Canadian manufacturer enquiring about a mailing list of retail grocers in a certain Canadian city has been unable to secure an authentic one. He writes us that he has used certain alleged lists, but finds that they were practically obsolete.

In other words, there are so many changes in the grocery business from month to month that it is almost impossible to keep up a list that will approach accurateness.

Canadian Grocer is read by the largest number of retail grocers in Canada. It comes to their stores by paid invitation every week.

Moreover, it is subscribed for by grocery departments of large general and department stores and other big buyers whose names would not appear on a grocery mailing list.

From a recent investigation into our records we found that quite a number had been taking the paper continuously from its inception in 1886. Many more had been continuous subscribers for more than 20 years, a great many more than 10 years, and the big majority more than 5 years.

The readers of Canadian Grocer are the permanent business men in the Canadian grocery trade.

This is the type of merchant manufacturers want to reach. The most economical and effective method of reaching them is through the advertising pages of Canadian Grocer.

There is no other satisfactory way of reaching the clerks in these stores.

R. M. A. is Fighting Present Sales Tax

Dominion Office at Ottawa Sends Out Letter Setting Forth Its Views on Present Working of the Sales Tax Law, Pointing Out Its Deficiencies and Inconsistencies—Act Has Many Contradictory and Confusing Clauses

By Ottawa Correspondent Canadian Grocer

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.—(Special)—The office of the Dominion executive of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada has forwarded to every member of the organization in the Dominion, as well as to many other retailers, a copy of the declaration of the association in regard to the present Dominion Sales Tax and its operation. Strong opposition is expressed against the working of the same, as now carried out, and it is urged, as it has always been by the association, that the proper place to collect the tax is at the source.

The contention is made that the sales tax should be collected at the source of supply, viz., from the manufacturer and the importer, and from as few channels as possible, so as to save annoyance and expense in the collection of the same. When the sales tax was placed on the Statute Books by the late Government in 1921, it is pointed out it was surrounded with a great many annoying difficulties, as far as the retail trade was concerned. The Act itself was poorly drafted and full of confusion and contradictions. In order to ascertain the retailers' position, it was necessary to undertake a number of lawsuits, as will be remembered by a large number of retail merchants, in order to have the Courts determine the meaning of the Act. It never was the intention to endeavor to escape the payment of a fair share of taxation. The endeavor was to keep the payment of the sales tax down to the source of supply, as always advocated, so as to save the expense of the employment of a host of tax collectors." We have always frankly admitted that although manufacturers and importers were asked to collect the tax, in reality all the taxes they pay they pass on to the retail merchants and they in turn have to do the best they can to collect them from their customers," the circular continues.

A Distinct Sales Tax

"What we have always contended for, was a clear, distinct Sales Tax Act, one that could be easily understood and easily followed, and one that would not be applied to every small retail merchant in the country who sells soft drinks or makes a few home-made candies or currant bread or pastry, or other like small articles for sale, and which forced them to take out a manufacturers' license and be called manufacturers, but who were not to be allowed to be taxed in the same manner as manufacturers. Our contention is that when legislators make laws, they should be consistent and clear, and, as far as our Association is concerned, we intend to see that all legislation that is passed which affects the retail trade is made as intelligible as possible, and if it is not we intend to call the attention of our members and the public to it, and hold it up to the public view.

Offered Services

"When the present government came into power, a prominent delegation of retail merchants waited upon the Premier and upon those members of the Cabinet who have to do with the administration of the Act, and we pointed out to them some of the difficulties we had to contend with regarding its operation. We offered our Association's services to the present Government, voluntarily, and agreed to give them any information they might want regarding its operations on the retail trade, and we offered to have our solicitors prepare a draft copy of the necessary amendments to the Act, so as to remove any further doubt or confusion that might exist in the Act, and thus avoid any further litigation. Our offer was accepted, and our solicitor prepared the amendments, and we waited upon the Minister of Customs and Excise and gave him a copy of our amendments and explained the same to him. After the Budget was brought down we again asked permission to have our solicitor consult with the solicitor for the Government who was drafting the Act, to point out to him the clouded and confused manner in which the Act was drawn. This request was also consented to and when the time came for the solicitors to consult together the Department withdrew their consent, and the result is exactly what we expected—the introduction of an unintelligible piece of legislation, and more annoying to the trade than ever.

Every Retail Merchant is Aroused

"Is it any wonder that the retail merchants in all parts of Canada are aroused, and are determined to make public the manner in which they have been treated? The remedy is in our own hands. Let us use it. Our policy must be educational. Neither this Government nor the late Government can offer any excuse for ignoring our requests to assist it. The Sales Tax Act that they are endeavoring to have us comply with is an internal tax, and it required no secrecy such as a tax that would be applied to importers. If the Government was considering a matter that affected the farmers, it would have called in the farmers for consultation; if it was a matter that affected the Labor Union interests, it would have called them in for consultation; or if it was a matter that affected the banks or manufacturers, they would have been eagerly consulted, but when it was a matter that affected the retail class, which has more money sunk in the retail trade than all the other classes combined, and which struck a blow directly at the consuming public as well, it utterly ignored us, and jeopardized the entire retail interests of Canada, by placing in the hands of the Minister of Customs and Excise the sole right to determine whether we are retail merchants or manufacturers, and from whose arbitrary ruling we have no right to appeal.

"The following, in our opinion, are some of the contradictory and confusing clauses in this obscured and muddled piece of legislation.

"The Act has been amended very often since it was first passed and no complete copy of the whole Act has been printed or can be purchased, and before we could understand what the Act meant it was necessary for us to compile a copy ourselves so as to be able to find out its meaning.

"The original intent of the Act, as it was passed by Parliament, although very dense, was to have it apply to manufacturers, producers and importers only, and its application was not intended for retail merchants. Those who administered it, not knowing its intent, and having no knowledge of the operations of the channels of trade, read into it all sorts of contradictory meanings and issued rulings, and each time the Act was amended it was made more confusing.

"A large number of exemptions were made under the Act, most of which were foodstuffs and articles affecting the agricultural interests. Bread and flour, including self-raising flour, is exempt, but yeast is taxable, and yeast is purchased by the large bakers at one rate, and the small baker purchases it at another rate, and as this yeast must be fresh and sold daily by the manufacturers the enormous bookkeeping system that is created by placing the tax on yeast far exceeds the amount of the tax paid, so that if proper consideration had been given to this subject, the manufacturers of yeast, the bakers and the retail merchants would have been saved an immense amount of annoyance, as well as money.

An Invoice With a Glass of Soda Water

"Under subsection (1) of Section 19 B.B.B. of the Act, after referring to the fact that an excise tax of two and one-quarter per cent. shall be imposed, levied and collected on sales and deliveries by Canadian manufacturers or producers, and wholesalers or jobbers, there is nothing whatever mentioned regarding retailers paying the tax, only when they purchase from manufacturers or producers, and when retail merchants import direct, their tax shall be six per cent. on the duty paid value. Following this statement, there is a clause which states that the purchaser shall be furnished with a written invoice of any sale, which invoice shall state separately the amount of such tax. This is another indication that it was never contemplated that the tax should be placed on retail merchants, as not one legislator had in his mind that when he purchased a glass of soda water made at a soda fountain he would be called upon to pay an additional tax, and have an invoice presented to him by the merchant showing separately the amount of such tax.

Difficult for the Courts

"It will be noticed that the sales tax which is paid by manufacturers to the Government is paid only when the goods are sold, not when they are manufactured. In the case of retail merchants who are designated as manufacturers, an attempt is being made to make them pay when the goods are made for stock and not when the goods are sold, and no reference whatever is made in the Act as to what price they shall pay the tax on, and the goods made by the retail merchant may remain on his shelves for years before a sale is made. This is another evidence of the discrimination that is made, and also further evidence that the original intention of the Act, which was that the tax should be applied at the source of supply, viz., the manufacturer, producer, and importer, has been departed from, and in so doing the Act is so complicated that no one, not even the Courts, is able to state what its real meaning is.

Fixing the Cost of Goods

"A recent amendment by the present Government, in order to make the Act still more complicated and annoying, added an additional five per cent. tax to candy manufacturers, and vendors of soft drinks who operate soda fountains. These vendors are called upon to take out licenses, which cost two dollars, and if they fail to take out this license there is a penalty attached of one thousand dollars, and when they take out a license, notwithstanding that there is nothing in the Act which clearly states what they shall pay the tax on they have the cost of their goods fixed for them by the Department and they are asked to pay the tax on an arbitrary price set by the Department and which the Department has no power under the Act to specify, so that retail confectioners who may be designated by the Minister as being manufacturers and who operate soda fountains, are called upon to keep track of their sales, on some of which they are asked to pay a tax of nine and one-half per cent., some five per cent., and some four and one-half per cent., while others are exempt, all of which is costing the confectioner more money to keep track of the tax than he will be called upon to pay to the Government in taxation.

"To add to the above complications, orders have been issued that retail confectioners who sell candy and soda fountain beverages shall take out a license, and if they make ice cream, candy or cakes, they must take out another license, both bearing different dates. Whether a retail merchant manufactures two hundred dollars' worth of goods, or two million dollars' worth of goods, the cost of the license is the same—two dollars—and which must add tremendously to the cost of operating the Department, and all of which, in our opinion, could be dispensed with under proper business management."

June Catch of Sardines is Reported Light and Pack is Two Months Late

Cable Messages to Some Importers Advise Withdrawal of Selling of the Better Grades for the Present, Owing to the Poor Catch in June —Better Grades of Olive Oil Will be High

ACCORDING to cable information received by Stewart Menzies & Co., manufacturers' agents, King St. E., Toronto, the June catch of the first quality Norwegian sardine is practically an absent quantity. Messages have been received advising withdrawal of further selling. The second quality has taken a sharp advance, Robert Boyter, general manager of Stewart Menzies and Co., told a representative of Canadian Grocer, and a still further increase in price is expected within the next few days. "The situation is very acute," Mr. Boyter stated. "While the catch is always uncertain, and while some future months of the current year may show up better, indications point to a very light catch. Every few years the sardine leaves its accustomed areas, and seeks new ones. This time it appears that it has left the Norwegian waters, for according to reports the waters of Norway showed an almost complete absence of brislings during the month of June. It may be that these sardines can now be found off the coast of France, but at any rate they are not in Norwegian waters."

Pack Two Months Late

W. G. Patrick of W. G. Patrick & Co., Toronto, also large importers of Norwegian sardines, would not say that the supply would be light, but stated that the pack is delayed about two months. Whereas the brisling is usually packed in July, it is not likely to be packed before September this year. Further than that Mr. Patrick would not state whether the pack would be up to last year or not. It is very difficult to make any statements with accuracy at the present time.

Old Country Biscuits Declining

Consignments of Old Country biscuits are arriving regularly and are in plentiful supply. In spite of the fact that the present quotation on a certain make of biscuits in the Old Land is double that of the price of 1915, the demand is equally as great, and shipments are easily taken care of. Prices are gradually declining, and present quotations show a reduction of 15 per cent. as compared with a year ago.

Better Grades Olive Oil Scarce

"Better grades of olive oil will be very high in price on new consignments," a large importer told Canadian Grocer this week. Cable despatches from their buyers in Europe state that the better grades of oil are very scarce, and prices so high as to almost make them prohibitive for shipment to this country. The lower grades are more plentiful and should be available in sufficient supply for all demand.

Small Fruits Light Pack

Information from the Old Country indicate that the pack of jams from small fruits is not as large this year as a year ago, and already quotations on the new pack have advanced half a cent per pound.

Says Self-Help Service Is No Service

Public Demands Economical And Convenient Service—Good Merchants Not Becoming Panicky Over Chain Store Competition —Service Grocers Advise Customers As to Proper Time to Buy

Tenth Article in Series on Chain Stores

AN INTERESTING contribution to the series of articles on chain stores is to be found in a letter sent by the Star Egg Carrier and Tray Mfg., Co., of Rochester, N. Y., to Roger W. Babson, the statistician. Bartley T. Brown, who wrote this letter to Mr. Babson, sends Canadian Grocer a copy of it, which is reprinted here:

Mr. Roger W. Babson,
Wellesley Hills, Mass.

Dear Sir:

" We read with much interest an interview with you published in the 'Daily Oklahoman,' July 3.

"Inasmuch as we manufacture Star Egg Carriers and Trays which are used by grocers having delivery service, we keep close watch on the development of service among retail merchants. We agree with you that the small merchant has great opportunities if he will adopt modern methods and advertise more.

"Like you, we also believe that the public does not demand the chain store, but rather demands economical and convenient service.

"We were somewhat surprised, however, to note that while you advise the merchants to give service saying that people buy from the chain stores because that is the only place in their community that they can get economical and convenient service, you say in substance that the merchants should eliminate one of the very most convenient of services and that is delivery. This sounds particularly strange to us coming from you, especially in view of the fact that you recently strongly urged the value of service in business.

"In your barometer letter of June 13 you say, 'Do your prospect a real service and you can depend upon the law of action and reaction for your reward. People just can't help being human and grateful. Do a man a service and you will get his business.'

"And then on July 3 you are quoted as saying, in regard to the chain stores, which do not give that very important service—delivery: 'Personally I feel that the chain store comes nearer to giving the public what it wants and prospers for that reason. If the local merchant will adopt the same up-to-date methods of economical merchandising, he need have nothing to fear from chain store competition. These newer and especially these self-help establishments are doing a splendid business because their plan is practical and because they are being operated by young men with initiative and enthusiasm. I appeal particularly to merchants of the older school and urge them to study very carefully these self-help stores with their self-help service'.

Self-Service—No Service

"Really, Mr. Babson, 'Self-help' service sounds ridiculously paradoxical. 'Self-help' service is no service at all. Do you really mean to say that that kind of service, if you will insist on calling it service, is a modern method? It is no doubt true that the chain store fills a certain want—the want of lower price with little or no service.

"It seems to us, Mr. Babson, that you are really self-contradictory. We believe that you were right when you said, 'Do a man a service and you will get his business.'

"Now, take the retail grocer who deals almost entirely with women. Have you ever noticed that women like service, too, even more than men do? Women love attention, and service is attention. They get darn little service and darn little attention in a self-serve store or 'snatcheteria' as one of our salesmen calls it.

Service a Business Builder

"The writer just recently returned from the annual convention of the National Association of Retail Grocers in Cleveland. Had you been there and heard the reports from various states of the individual grocers who give service, we do not think you would have been quite so emphatic in saying that local merchants are beginning to become panic striken over the tremendous run of the chain stores. Those individual merchants who sell quality merchandise and give service, know that they can beat the chain stores every day of the week.

"It is the slovenly grocer who is crushed to earth by the chain store—the grocer who does not regard the importance of quality and service. But then he would go down anyhow under intelligent competition, whether that competition would come from the chain stores or from other live quality selling and service-giving individual grocers.

"Now, let us consider for a moment what you are pleased to call the economy of the self-help system. Just how economical is it to the housewife? An investigation conducted by the New York State Department of Markets comparing chain stores and regular service groceries, confirms what we have asserted time after time, and that is that the cash-and-carry store sells at about 4c. on the dollar cheaper in the well-to-do neighborhoods and 2c. cheaper in middle class or poor neighborhoods than the independent retail grocer who gives service.

"Now, that really is the average saving to the woman who lugs her food in a basket. And housewives to-day, Mr. Babson, notwithstanding your belief that local merchants are becoming panicky over the run that the 'snatcheterias' are having, are coming to know the very small percentage of saving she effects by bearing the family food burden through the streets.

Confidence in Reliable Grocer

"It is not so much the economy of it that takes a woman in a well-to-do neighborhood to the grocery store with her basket. Until she gets to really know the grocer as a real quality and real service merchant, she entertains distrust of the grocer. She fears that when she telephones for a certain kind of food that something else of an inferior quality will be sent to her. Once she finds out, however, that the grocer is honest, her distrust is overcome.

"A woman who enjoys the service of a reliable grocer, will not even let her servants go shopping unless it is just to 'see what they have at the store.' Saving 2c. to 4c. on the dollar by sending a maid to the grocery is certainly not economical.

"Now, Mr. Babson, your proposition is a service proposition. And don't you know that the reliable, intelligent, well-informed, retail merchant can and does give service to his customers somewhat analogous to yours? The live grocer knows when it is to the advantage and when it will be to the advantage of his customers to make some certain purchases and when it will be better for them to wait, etc. He passes this information on to your clients. And the merchant is of service to them in a hundred other different ways in connection with his merchandise system.

"One of the splendid services given by the live retail grocer is when he calls his customers up on the telephone to get their order. Do the self-help stores do this?"

An English newspaper is printing choice bits of broken English as overheard by its readers. Two examples follow, which are considered most amusing: A coffee-room waiter, who said he was a Swiss, replying to a guest ordering his breakfast:

"Tongue iss no more, chicken never vos. How you like your eggs boilt, tight or loose?"

The other concerns an enraged Portuguese, who turned upon his opponent and spat out:

"If I did know ze English for ze box, I would blow your nose, by damn, I am."—New York Evening Post.

Friday Advertising Not Good Policy

Advertising on Friday to Increase The Saturday Burden, Not Wise—Advertise to Stimulate Business on Other Days—The Fallacy of Advertising Cut Prices—The Advantage of One Day or Hour Specials

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

ROBINSON Crusoe's "handy man," his faithful attendant and all-round good genius was Friday. But Friday is the grocer's "bad man"—as I expect to show.

I read the local paper from "the old home town" every day. For long I have noticed that every Friday's issue carries about two full pages of grocery advertisements. This condition did not formerly obtain because very few grocers advertised except myself—and I never used Friday's paper, for reasons which will appear. Now it is evident that an enterprising advertising manager has capitalized another grocer's weakness and is cashing in on it.

Having noticed this tendency in the old home town, I was on the lookout elsewhere. From personal observation I can tell you that, with very few exceptions—possibly with none—grocers everywhere run advertisements on Friday.

Whether it be Winnipeg or Halifax, Vancouver or London, you will find the local papers with grocery advertising in the Friday issues. And for what? That's the joker and the joke of the whole thing, for any effect these ads may have is to pile heavier burdens on the one day in the week that already and automatically is overloaded—Saturday!

Push Specials—Not Staples

In the Friday issue before me appear twenty advertisements of 41 food stores and five of wholesale distributors of food products. The burden of all the ads is staples, such as flour, butter, potatoes, lard, bread, breakfast food, practically all at cut prices. Here and there appears a lone item like lettuce or cantaloupes—the only class of goods which ever should be advertised for Saturday sales.

Stop to think of what happens in your store week after week throughout the year and you will at least begin to see the absurdity of this. You have Monday, which is washday. People are "fed up" on food from the Sunday feasting. Women are busy at home, so they go or send to the store only for necessaries. Even at that, Monday perks up a bit at times. Tuesday is apt to be quiet or spasmodic. Wednesday there is some business. Folks have eaten last week's foods and must have more. Thursday is sometimes a good day, though not strenuous. Friday is sort of getting ready for Saturday.

On Saturday you arrive early to do as much as you can in advance of the inevitable rush. You have extra help. From the opening hour until closing, be it midnight, you are busy. Almost any Saturday you may look forward with certainty to mishaps, disappointed customers, mistakes. The rush is so continuous, demands are so insistent, that no grocer can hope to get through smoothly, no matter how devoted and careful he is.

That is, I think you will agree, a fairly accurate sketch of Saturday conditions. Those are circumstances in which you go through Saturday regardless. Any grocery store worthy of the name is busy on Saturday.

Folly of Making Bets for Saturday

Does it not therefore seem just plumb foolish to spend money to make Saturday busier? It has always seemed so to me. It seems to me that way now. Moreover, we have many excellent examples and demonstrations that it is foolish, and that it can be remedied.

What all business men need to realize that every day in the week should be busy. There are 310 working days in the year. You pay overhead on every day. You pay many other expenses every day. But you cash-in on only 52 real business days and perhaps 75 or 100 partly busy days.

For what we should do about it, let us look first outside our business and then look back within it.

Long ago, department stores realized that every effort should be made to even the pressure throughout the week, to cash-in as nearly as possible on the 310 working days. They began on Monday—that being normally and automatically the slowest day in their line. That is why you see department store advertising concentrated on Monday sales and offerings as the primary effort.

Department stores have "events" that cover every week in the year. Ever notice that? Let us see: Beginning right after Christmas—butting in strongly, so there may be no "let-down"—putting on the pressure extra heavy to counteract the natural after-holid lethargy and indifference—they have the "Pre-Inventory Sale."

This event is heralded with smashing space, more money being spent and heavier reductions taken than for any other event in the year. Lines which are ragged or becoming unseasonable are shoved forward. Result—the store is busy.

Inventory is taken simultaneously—then comes the big "After-Inventory Sale," and the store is kept busy. Follows the "Mid-Winter White Goods Sale"—and so it goes during all the 52 weeks of the year.

Putting Brains Into Publicity

These sales are all planned with the greatest care and skill. They are laid out weeks in advance. There is nothing haphazard. Records of all previous sales, of the items offered and results obtained are at hand. What articles went well—what results followed certain kinds of pressure and presentation—all these things are studied and the work is done in the light thereof.

Therefore, while every sale opens on Monday and the Monday pressure is strongest, pressure is also carried into other days according to the expert knowledge gained through past experience, so that all days are kept busy. But you will notice that pressure is never put on Saturday selling! Saturday always is left to take care of itself.

The lesson here is that those wonderful merchants, the department store people, put all their brains and energy into selling merchandise. They realize a high percentage on their investment in space, fixtures, expenses and merchandise because they work their brains on logical lines.

Why cannot grocers do the same? Answer: They can! In many places, they do! I did it for years—following along just those lines. My advertising always was a profitable investment. But it never leaned down hard on Saturday—that was always a busy enough day without that! Only certain limited things can be advertised on Saturday—no staples—no regular goods—and surely no cut prices! Gracious! If I am ever going to get full prices on my goods, I shall do it on Saturday! Cannot you see that?

I have told you already how one merchant changed his slowest Wednesday into his busiest day by featuring certain specials for Wednesday only. Now Wednesday is a 24-hour day in his store. He is open from Wednesday morning until Thursday night, working three shifts, to care for the extra trade his brain drew to the slowest day.

The way to do is to advertise weekly and there is no need to spend more money than you now put into that fool Friday ad. But run the ad in the Saturday afternoon papers and the Sunday editions—if you have any—making the big offers apply to Monday. Have subsidiary items good for Tuesday and Wednesday; certain others good for Thursday, and Friday; and have some that run special through the week.

This Grocer Has Real Credit Problems

Merchant in Northern British Columbia Seeks a Solution—Declares That Customers Paying Every Thirty Days Look for the Same Prices as the Clients Who Pay Cash—Retailer is Unable to Take Discounts Because of Too Much Credit

VANCOUVER, B. C.— A merchant in a northern British Columbia town recently came to Vancouver seeking information about the conduct of a credit business.

The facts are these. In his town, as indeed in most other rural points, the biggest problem faced by the retailer is that of credit. On the first of the year a determined effort was made to put his business on a cash basis, but it was found quite impossible to maintain any volume of business, and refuse to give credit accommodations.

The Class of Customer

"Our customers are ranchers, tie- cutters (for the railroad use), fur traders and trappers," he says. "Sometimes they have lots of cash and pay 'on the dot' for the supplies they buy. Other times, thirty days will see them on hand to pay for what has been charged on that basis, but at other times, their accounts mount week by week, and month by month till the strain on the resources of the merchant is very serious indeed. At such times, they say, of course, 'Well, we have to eat. We have been good customers. We will have the money in a month or two. As soon as our ties are ready to ship, or as soon as we have sold our pelts," etc., etc. As a matter of fact, they intend to pay and will pay when they get the funds. But in the meantime those who sell to us quite rightly expect us to pay up. If we lose our discounts, that much of our profit is gone and it is almost impossible to charge an additional percentage on all our goods for the purpose of recovering our losses through missing our discounts.

"Some of our customers pay cash. In small towns the prices are all fairly well known. The good pay customer who takes thirty days feels that he is entitled to the same price as the cash customer. When, for unforeseen reasons, he does not pay up on the thirty days, he would not stand for a revision of prices on what he has bought, and in very few cases have we successfully collected interest on the overdue accounts. By successfully, I mean to get both the interest and the continued patronage of that customer.

Notes are Unsatisfactory

"Some advocate taking notes for overdue accounts. We have done that in some cases. The banks will not accept a note, if the maker has, shown carelessness about meeting any former notes, and every retailer knows that a very large percentage of people are negligent about such matters. It is all right to say that any one who is worthy of credit might get it at the bank. But so many times, the dealer knows that his customer has teams, equipment, buildings, etc. which seem to warrant credit, although the banks are unable to lend money on this class of security.

"Then again, there is a tendency on the part of some people to consider that an account is taken care of, when a note is given, even though the note is not paid on maturity. No matter how untenable such a position is, any retailer knows that, having given a note, a customer feels that attention has been given to his account for the term of the note, at least, and the dealer is unable to ask for any other settlement until the note has come to maturity.

Looks to Canadian Grocer

"We all know that many things should not be—but we all know too, that these conditions exist and I am hoping to see more articles in Canadian Grocer on the subject of 'How other retailers handle the credit problems.' I read with a great deal of interest everything that Henry Johnson Jr., and other investigators write on these subjects in Canadian Grocer, knowing that other retailers are beset with the same problems that I am, I scan very closely the interviews appearing in this paper. On these merchandising problems, I don't know where else we would get the opinions of experts and other merchants if it were not for Canadian Grocer."

Cash for Produce

"There is another side to the question too. In the past year or years when crops were poor many of the farmers could not get cash for their produce. Take hay for instance. The buyers and exporters of hay felt that it would not pay to send their agents into some districts to buy and the farmers took their hay to the grocer to exchange a load for so much credit. This system of exchange gave the grocer his value, but it did not give him the funds to buy more goods. In many cases, before the grocer disposed of the hay, he suffered a loss on it. Now when the hay crop is plentiful, the buyers send their agents out to buy for cash. The farmer therefore, has the money to take to the grocery store or to any other business and trading is facilitated. The same thing holds true in all lines of grain and produce. Yes, I look for a marked improvement in conditions this fall."

FROM COVER TO COVER

"I take a great interest in Canadian Grocer. I look for it every week and read it from cover to cover. Besides the interesting articles I find much to learn in the advertising pages and always make it a point to write advertisers about any new line when I see it advertised. This keeps me posted on new lines. Only recently I put in a new line of canned meats. I first saw them advertised in Canadian Grocer and when the traveller introduced them to me I had no hesitancy in ordering them. There is one thing I have always felt and that is I do not believe Canadian Grocer would advertise anything which was not right." —John Gilbert, Kingston, Ont.

Cut prices are not necessary in advertising. That should be emphasized so I'll say it again: Cut prices are not necessary in advertising! But special prices, showing moderate—and only moderate—reductions, "good for this week" or "for Friday only"—should be used; and these should be on your own goods. You should always feature as specials, goods that you control, or items on which you enjoy some prestige.

Business is Not a Mushroom Growth

Have in mind the thought that you are building a business. That is, the task will take time. You are going to work up confidence in your offerings slowly. You want to interest the same people week after week. You want them to get the habit of looking for your ads and deciding in advance what they will buy next week. You will learn that you cannot work this successfully unless you make your ads mean just what you print: that the offerings are good for just such a time and no other.

As you study and observe, you will note that women will often buy only the specials. They will buy a bar of soap that is on sale—and not another thing. Men will seldom have the "crust" to buy only specials. So it is well to plan sales so that men may have to come for at least some of the goods. Thus, a Monday sale may be planned so certain specials will be on at 11 o'clock for one hour—11 to 12. That will compel the women to entrust the buying to their husbands—and those men will buy other things, too, at least a lot of them will.

Get the idea? It is intelligent selling always.

Still, maybe I should be glad that grocers are beginning to advertise and that any time is certainly better than no time.

An "Avoid" List Helps Cut Overhead

Merchandise Manager Says That Habit of Conserving Developed During the War Seems to be Forgotten Now—Simple Little Habits of Wastefulness Mount Up Into Many Dollars—Prodigal Use of Wrapping Paper, Pins, Cartons, etc., to be Eschewed

DISCUSSING the ever vital subject of how to reduce the cost of selling merchandise in the average store, some pertinent suggestions were offered to Canadian Grocer by a Montreal merchandise manager. The fact which he kept foremost in the discussion of how to bring down overhead was that we are forgetting the meaning of the word "conservation" which used to be heard so frequently during the war years, and we are lapsing back into many uneconomic practices which are indicative of habits of extravagance, of carelessness, and which need to be constantly supervised. Making the most of resources—a fundamental principle of good management at all times—is of supreme importance when reduction of overhead cost becomes imperative. Just as during the early months of the Great War, leading merchants got together to discuss measures for reducing waste in materials and equipment used in retail stores, for curtailing some expensive forms of service such as unnecessary number of daily deliveries and too liberal allowance of time for return of goods, etc., so the same problems are, to a great extent, calling for solution in these post-war days. As a result of a widespread revision of store policies, as a war measure the much indulged shopping public soon learned to be more reasonable in its demands, and public interest became aroused in the endeavor to aid merchants in their efforts to encourage conservation.

Common Forms of Waste

By a similar plan, those stores which find their overhead expense mounting instead of declining might adopt some of the recommendations made by the Montreal merchant. "I have issued the following list of things to be avoided in all the departments of this store," he remarked. "On the whole I find the most waste and carelessness in connection with wrapping and packing merchandise, but there are many other little leaks which have been eating up profits and are now coming under the axe."

The list was given as follows:

"Avoid forcing merchandise into too small an amount of paper, so that tearing results, and a second piece has to be used.

"Avoid a large box when a smaller and a cheaper one would accommodate the merchandise suitably.

"Avoid using tissue paper to pack inexpensive goods which need no such protection, or to fill up corners unnecessarily.

"Avoid wasting pins. Good pins are expensive and as they can be used indefinitely, it is important that they be saved. Pick up the pins which drop on the floor.

"Avoid wasting pin-tickets, tags and rubber bands which may be used again.

"Avoid using more paste than is necessary in applying address tickets to bundles.

"Avoid using tissue paper for dusting instead of cloth dusters, or destroying boxes in which merchandise is returned when they are in good condition to use again.

"Avoid destroying empty merchandise cartons which could be used to advantage in the packing room.

"Avoid figuring and scribbling on printed forms instead of using waste paper or regular scratch pads. Do not tear off a corner of wrapping paper to do figuring on.

"Avoid wasting carbon paper in salesbooks, when it may be reversed and used as long again.

"Avoid wasting advertising leaflets. Cases have come to light where as many as 8 or 10 have been found in parcels, when only one should have been included."

The staff of this store has also been instructed to watch the electric lights burning in show cases, which may often be turned off when the sunshine is particularly bright, with a consequent saving.

Reducing Cost of Delivery

This firm has also effected a saving of money in connection with delivery of parcels. A rule has been recently put into force whereby no C. O. D. sales of less than $1 will be accepted, nor will any article costing under this amount be sent. When the question of delivery comes up in connection with the sale of a small purchase, the sales clerk is instructed to enquire, "Will you take this with you?" instead of the opposite question, "Will you have this sent?" which invariably leads to acquiescence on the part of the customer.

Waste of time on the part of employees is discouraged by this store, which insists upon promptness in the morning and after lunch on the part of its staff. Care of store property is likewise emphasized in another recommendation which is worded as follows:

"Any salesman who finds it necessary to stand upon the counters or other fixtures at any time must use cardboard or other protecting substance under his shoes."

Employees are likewise enjoined to report anything which should be given instant attention such as an odor of gas, a leaking pipe or faucet, or a latch out of order. Prompt attention in small matters frequently means a saving of much money in the end.

Departments of this store have shown improvement over past conditions since an investigation has been made with regard to the manner in which samples are given, or goods protected from dust and strong light, and from waste in over measuring. Every piece of goods handled by four salesmen for a period of seven days was re-measured and reweighed as a test of their accuracy and in each case losses from over measurement were discovered varying from 1½ cents a sale to three cents. Such lack of exactness in measuring and weighing may be responsible for heavy losses.

Sales Check Errors

Errors in writing and handling sales checks are always costly and in this connection, salespeople in this store are told to read over the name and address given to the customer before he or she leaves the department, lest an error may have been made inadvertently. This is usually done when change is being given.

One result already registered in connection with this campaign for conservation of store resources has been a new enthusiasm shown by the employees who have quickly recognized the advantages.

EXPECT BIG POTATO CROP

Hamilton Ont.—"A bumper potato crop in fact the greatest that the country has experienced since I have been connected with the department here," said G. W. Marritt, district representative of the Ontario department of agriculture, in Wentworth County, when discussing the potato crop.

EARLY TOMATO CROP NOT AS LARGE AS LAST YEAR

Leamington, Ont.—Growers of early tomatoes report that the crop will not be as large this year as it was last. The shipments have not been so very large so far this season although many believe that the acreage this season is greater than for the past few years. The plants have not the large number of green tomatoes on them that they usually have and the growers believe that they will be too late in ripening to get on the early market in time to make it worth while for the growers.

The price has also dropped much lower than last year although there has not been any large shipments from this district.

Selling Below Cost an Unfair Method

Price Cutting is Price Making—If Profitable Must Exceed Seller's Cost—Operating More Than One Store, No Excuse For Price Cutting—Should Practise Cost Accounting

By NELSON B. GASKILL, Chairman U.S. Trade Commission

A SELLING price has two points or poles of reference. It bears a variable current of other prices offered contemporaneously which constitute the "market." It may be either above or below the market at the option of the seller. In this phase a selling price is governed solely by the desire of the seller to obtain a sale. The other relation is to the cost accrued against the commodity when offered for sale. This production cost is fixed by operations of the seller and cannot be volitionally varied except as the processes prior to offer for sale may be modified and result in a lessening of charges.

It is axiomatic that a selling price must include a margin over production cost sufficiently large to include a balance after deduction of all charges incurred but not properly included in production cost, if the sale is to result in a profit. A normal, profitable selling price, therefore, may range from the "market" as its maximum to "production cost" as its minimum. If it is above the market, it is not likely to induce a sale, and if it is below production cost, it will not produce a profit.

Competitive selling prices, therefore, which must range between market price and production cost if they are to be profitable, represent the desire of the seller to effect a sale within limits that he cannot transgress and over but one of which he can exercise any lawful control.

The Competitive System

The proper object of business is profit, and its necessary result must be profit. We have chosen to organize and conduct society upon the competitive system. The fundamental principle of the competitive system, the impelling cause of its adoption, and our adherence to it are that, properly applied, it tends always to an adequate return for the productive effort. It is an economic recognition of the truth in the statement that "the laborer is worthy of his hire."

Each member of society is at once a producer and a consumer, operating in both capacities on a competitive basis. It is often assumed that the consumer is a distinct class wholly apart from producers, but such assumption is a fallacy. The producer-consumer character of each member of society is fixed by necessity, and the principles that govern his productive operations in which he is the seller also regulate his actions as a consumer or a buyer. Each individual standing alone, just as society in mass, conducts this double operation.

But when the question is put to the individual in his capacity as consumer-buyer or to the mass of society in that character, "At what price are you entitled to receive that which someone else has produced?" the answer is likely to be, "For nothing if we can get it; for as little as possible if we must pay at all."

The answer is wrong, because it prevents the existence of that equipoise of the producer-consumer relation which the fundamental principle of the competitive system demands. In an isolated instance the seller has received less than an adequate return and the buyer more. Multiply the individual into the sum total of all individuals in society, extend the operation of the theory to universal application, and there is exhibited an organized society of producer-consumer units, asserting and at the same time denying the right of a return for productive effort that equals the cost of production. This is exactly the condition that now obtains.

What Price Cutting Means

Each individual in his capacity as a producer is entitled to a profit, and each in his capacity as a consumer is obligated to pay a price that yields a profit.

If you deny this, it seems to me that your alternative is in its logical conclusion an assertion of the right to reduce some part of mankind to slavery; because, if it is right to take part of an individual productive effort below its cost, it is right to take the whole effort and its result without any compensation whatever.

Price cutting is, of course, price making. It is the expression of the extent or degree of the desire to sell. It may be directed against the market, in which event it is adverse to all competitors, or it may be thrown forward against competitors in a particular locality or against a particular competitor. It may represent the seller's relation to conditions of supply and demand, it may express his individual preference for volume of sales, it may represent his efficiency and advantageous location as shown in his relatively lower cost; but if it is to be profitable it must exceed the seller's individual cost, and if it is to be consistent with the fundamental principle of the competitive system it cannot be less than the seller's own cost.

Habitual selling below cost as a method of doing business is in my judgment an unfair method of competition.

There are circumstances, of course, that justify its emergent use, just as there are conditions that justify the amputation of a limb; but these are outside the rule, not exceptions within it. The necessity of liquidation, for keeping an organization going through temporary stress, possibly during the introduction of a new industry in a competitive field, are emergencies that justify impairment of capital; but selling below cost is no more a part of the ordinary conduct of business under the competitive system than self mutilation is necessary to living.

Competition May Increase Prices

We erroneously assume that all properly directed competitive efforts, as they are more and more efficiently performed, tend to a reduction in price to the consumer. They may quite as well and with equal justification increase the return to the producer and be exhibited in effect as an increased price to the consumer. It is quite apparent that when efficient methods of distribution and marketing adjust supply to demand properly, relieving one glutted market and supplying others previously short, the tendency is to a rise in price in the long market, a fall in the short market, and a settling of the general price level above its previous average. It does not follow then that the denial of the existence of the right to sell or buy below the seller's cost is a limitation upon the freedom of competition.

Cutting selling price below cost is impairment of the seller's capital and nothing else. It means inevitable bankruptcy to the one who practises it unless the deficiency can be offset by more than equal gain elsewhere. It is absolutely certain that the habitual seller below- cost who continues in business for any considerable period is receiving from the consumer by other means more than enough to offset his losses; or he will as soon as his practice has sufficiently suppressed competition and established what is equivalent to monopoly. When the consumer learns the simple fact that business cannot be conducted at a loss, he will awake to the startling realization that nothing he buys below cost represents a saving, and he or she will also learn that a premium article is a most expensive piece of decoration.

Work of the Manufacturer's Agent

THE EXTENT to which the manufacturers' agency business has developed in Canada demonstrates that the work performed by the agent is one of great importance. The business could not have gone forward if a useful and necessary service was not being given.

Many manufacturers believe that someone is needed to keep their goods well sold to the retail trade, to look after the wants and desires of the retailer and to assist him in selling the goods to the ultimate consumer. The specialty man performs this service. He is often called a detail man because he is sent out by the manufacturer's agent for the purpose of concentrating on some particular brand of goods and giving the merchants full particulars about it so that the latter will take more interest in its sale.

The manufacturers' agents who have been in business for a long time usually have built up an organization that is familiar with the retail and wholesale trade. The men in these organizations who are calling on the trade have secured the confidence of the merchant so that when their firm takes on a new line that they know is a good one, they usually have little difficulty in getting the goods in the retail stores.

The manufacturers' agent and grocery broker is undoubtedly here to stay. He acts as the medium between the manufacturer on the one hand and the wholesaler and retailer on the other. Because he makes a specialty of certain lines of goods and on account of his proximity to the retailer and wholesaler, he is in a position to maintain his strong footing in the channel of trading in this country.

Retail Grocery Problems

THE New York State Department of Farms and Markets has published a 30-page booklet reviewing the problems affecting the retail grocery trade in New York City. The report includes the result of investigations carried on by the New York Federal Food Board and the New York State Food Commission. The object of the bulletin is to give primarily to the consumer an insight into problems confronting the retail grocer and the manner in which they have reacted on the prices paid by the consumer for his food. This presentation however gives the grocer himself the result of an investigation into the very problems with which he has had to battle in recent years. Such a report, although dealing with one centre alone, may be of value to the retail grocery trade in Canada as well as in the United States.

In this brochure, entitled, "Retail Grocery Stores" the retailer will learn from a clear analysis of conditions, illustrated with graphs, how he may better reduce costs and increase profits without adding to the selling figures of his stock.

Since 1918, when this investigation of retail grocery stores was made, costs have increased considerably, but they are now lowering again. There are reasons to expect that the more stabilized conditions in the near future will approximate those of 1918, according to the statement made by the New York Federal Food Board. But irrespective of whether this is or is not the case there is presented in this report so much information of a sort never before made public and which can be so easily changed to fit conditions of to-day and tomorrow that the New York State Department of Farms and Markets is broadcasting the report in order to enlighten the public as well as the grocers themselves.

Co-operate in Buying

"WE HEAR a great deal these days about the Chain Stores and the effect they are having upon the individual grocer," said a grocery broker the other day to a representative of Canadian Grocer. "To my mind there is too much of this hysteria altogether and not enough effort being made to remedy the trouble or plans made to meet the competition. That the chain stores are here to stay is without question. But there is no need for the individual grocer becoming panicky or thinking that his world is coming to an end just because of a new method of distribution to the consumer. Chain stores will always be able to sell cheaper than the individual grocer, unless the grocer gets busy and organizes, because their large buying power gives them the advantage in buying at a lower price. But the individual grocers could do this also if they would only get together and organize. Let them co-operate their buying and they would have such a weight to wield that no manufacturer would refuse to sell them."

Talks on Groceries by Radio

GROCERS who have their own radio receiving sets will be able to get the latest market reports in some lines direct from market centres. On July 25th at 7.30 o'clock, C. A. Thayer, of Austin Nichols Company, Inc., New York, delivered a talk on the subject of "Spices And Their Importance," which was broadcasted by radio from the W. J. Z. Westinghouse Station. New York houses plan to give one talk each week on such lines as tea, coffee, spices, etc. On June 17, Edward Aborn, chairman of the National Coffee Roasters' Association, talked by the radiophone from WJZ broadcasting station, Newark, N. J. He told of the history of coffee and the spread of the coffee drinking habit. He also gave several rules of good coffee making.

While a high powered receiving set is required to pick up these waves by radio fans in Canada, the publicity committee in charge of these broadcasts is arranging to have the communications relayed from other stations so that more may hear it.

Editorials in Brief

WHERE DO your window lights shine mainly; into the eyes of passers-by, onto the pavement outside, or upon the goods you are displaying?

SOMEBODY said that the windows are the eyes of the store. They used to be. Nowadays they are the eyes through which the passers-by see what the store offers.

DON'T NEGLECT the proper advertising and display of goods because they are fast sellers. Make hay while the sun shines by making fast sellers sell faster.

Merchants conducting a confectionery and grocery combined, complained of the unfairness in having to close up the confectionery. The police department, however, cleared up this by pointing out that merchants engaged in both confectionery and grocery business, are only compelled to close their grocery departments, and there is no objection to them keeping open for the sale of confectionery.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON WILL CHALLENGE AGAIN FOR AMERICA'S CUP

New York, Aug 9.—Sir Thomas Lipton, who has monopolized the challenging for America's Cup, the blue ribbon trophy of international yacht racing, and who has made four attempts to take it across the seas, is coming to the United States in September to challenge again, it is reported.

After the Shamrock IV. was defeated in 1920 by the American defender, Resolute, Sir Thomas said he would challenge again for a race in 1923, but would wait until this fall to give other yatchsmen an opportunity to challenge. Nobody has challenged, so Sir Thomas is coming over.

It is reported that Sir Thomas may ask for a change in the craft from sloops to schooners. But regardless of what rig he challenges with, his challenger will be called Shamrock V.

Moose Jaw Council Discusses Early Closing

Moose Jaw, Sask.—A long discussion recently took place in the Municipal council on the question of the early closing of stores on Wednesday afternoons and at 6 p. m. on the other evenings. This applied to the stores selling groceries, in addition to confectionery.

One alderman stated that the by-law imposed a hardship on some stores, and was of the opinion that if the stores did not sell groceries on Wednesday afternoons they should be allowed to remain open for the sale of confectionery. Another alderman declared that the purport of the by-law was to protect shop assistants and to give them a holiday, also to prevent them working too late at night, and that the council was powerless to act as the by-law was made on the representation of two-thirds of the members of the trade concerned, and it would require this majority to repeal the by-law.

Edwin Smith Retires From T. B. Escott Co.

London, Aug. 9, (Special).—After a continuous association with the wholesale grocery business for a period extending over 21 years, Edwin Smith, of the T. B. Escott Company, Ltd., this city, has severed his connection with that firm. Mr. Smith began in the offices of the company in this city and later became its representative for Western Ontario. A few years ago he became a member of the firm and took charge of the city business. Mr. Smith purposes engaging in the general insurance business in London, but in a few days will embark on a brief vacation before entering on his new occupation.

Mr. Smith has been a member of the Board of Education for a number of years and is chairman of this year's board.

Registration of the delegates commenced at 9.30 o'clock on the morning of the first day and by the encouraging number of members in attendance, a successful gathering was assured. Delegates from all parts of the province were present, showing that the efforts of the board during the past year have met with good results from a membership standpoint.

His Worship, Mayor Samson, delivered his address of welcome and stated that the City of Quebec was open to the delegates, he realizing, as did the people of the city, that the interests of such a representative organization were also the interests of the people. J. E. Sansregret replied and thanked the Mayor for the welcome extended.

Joseph Savard, president of the Quebec District, whose committee was in charge of entertainment, officially welcomed the provincial board of delegates and offered them the city council chambers in which to hold their convention. He explained that through the courtesy of the Mayor and City Council he was able to secure these comfortable quarters.

Short addresses then followed from J. C. Watson, representing the Quebec Board at the Dominion Executive Council, E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Board, J. R. Lafond, president of the Hull District, A. Larue, president of Three Rivers District, G. A. Lapointe, president of the Montreal District, L. Coderre, representing Sherbrooke District, L. J. Dubois, representing St. Hyacinthe District, Mr. Morency, representing Lewis Branch, J. W. Moreau, A. Sansregret.

of the Montreal branch R. M. A. who was re-elected second vice president of the Quebec Board, R. M. A., at the annual convention.

Outlined Work Done

After the roll call of officers and the minutes of last year were read, J. E. Sansregret, president, delivered his annual address outlining the work done during the past year. He was followed by Joseph Elie, first vice-president, and A. Sauve, second vice-president, who also explained to the members what had been done to protect the merchant since last election.

M. Lapointe then explained how the Province of Quebec had been divided into six districts, each district having a secretary and separate office to look after the affairs of the district. The first district formed was the one of Montreal, followed by Hull, Sherbrooke, Quebec, Three Rivers, and St. Hyacinthe. Each district takes in several counties of their surroundings where branches are opened and local merchants act as secretaries who communicate with the secretary in the district, who in turn communicates with the secretary of the Provincial Board. In this way a close touch is kept with each section of the province and Quebec is the only province in the Dominion having such a system of giving service to its members.

Mr. Lapointe then pointed out the progress that had been made from the standpoint of membership, 1,100 new members had been enrolled during the year, making a total of 2,465 members at the present time.

A letter was read from the Dominion President, J. Banfield, expressing regret at not being able to be present, but he wished the convention every success possible.

Welcomed by the Lieutenant-Governor

After adjournment for mid-day the convention re-opened at 2 p.m. when about 40 automobiles conveyed the delegates and their wives to Spencer Wood, the residence of Lieutenant-Governor Sir Charles Fitzpatrick. Here a welcome awaited the visitors, Sir Charles being assisted by Lady Fitzpatrick and their daughter. Each lady member of the delegation was presented with a bouquet of flowers from Lady Fitzpatrick. The president, on behalf of all members, tended a vote of thanks for the reception given, stating that it was the first time that a Lieutenant-Governor of a province had officially received a delegation of merchants. The delegation then proceeded to the Government boat "Druid" which had been placed at the disposal of the convention by Hon. E. Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and a trip through the harbor down the river and back as far as the Quebec Bridge was enjoyed.

At 7.30 in the evening special cars were detailed to convey the party to Montmorency Falls and Kent House, where the annual banquet was held.

Representative Body

Hon. L. A. Taschereau, Premier of Quebec, who was the principal guest at the banquet, addressed those present in a pleasing manner, when he referred to the Retail Merchants' Association as being one of the most representative bodies in the Dominion. On more than one occasion in the past it had been strong enough to bring pressure to bear on the Government. He hoped that further progress would be made, not only in the province of Quebec but in the Dominion Association as a whole.

E. M. Trowern gave a very interesting

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THIS week finds the sugar situation much the same as last, with no changes in spot quotations, and the market generally strong. In the raw market prices are reported firmer, some sales being reported to the U. S. National refinery on the basis of 3 13-16 c.&f. for August delivery. Willett & Gray in their weekly comment on the situation state that conditions, as far as supplies are concerned, have shown much improvement of late. A month or so ago Cuba was counted on to make only a crop of 3,750,000 tons instead of the 4,000,000 tons now almost certain. Europe was only expected to outturn about 4,000,000 tons, while recent cables point to a crop of 4,400,000 tons and with some months further growing period the outturn can be further increased providing the weather is favorable from now on. These two crops alone have added 650,000 tons of sugar to supplies available for Europe and America. Reports from Cuba indicate favorable growing weather, with 14 Centrals grinding as against four last year and five in 1920.

Markets in general grocery commodities are for the most part quiet. Wholesalers report the usual quietude that marks the holiday season. Dealers are quoting prices on the new crop peas this week. Prices on the new pack of California prunes and apricots should be available in the next week or ten days. Teas are very firm, especially the better grades. Coffees too are showing strength, as is also the rice market. Cereals both in bulk and in packages are a little quiet.

Fruits and vegetables are arriving in abundance and prices are lower as compared with a week ago.

OLD CROP RAISINS LOWER

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—New prices on California prunes were expected this week but word was received that the announcement of the same has been deferred.

Prices on the new crop raisins are not yet available, but dealers this week announce some changes in old crop prices. California sultanas, old crop, are quoted at 14½c. per lb., while the seedless in 15 oz. packets are offered at 17½c. each and the 8 oz. packets at 10½c. each. Thompson's seedless in lots of 25 lbs. are 16c. per lb. There is a very good inquiry for raisins at the present time. Other dried fruits are moving in moderate volume.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG, August 11th, 1922.—The grocery market in many lines continues to show an improvement. Opening prices have been named by Eastern packers on peas about 30c per case lower than last year. Opening prices on new pack canned strawberries and cherries have been named and are about the same as last year. Association prices on new pack salmon have been announced and sockeye, pinks and chums are about the same, with cohoes about $2 per case lower. The raisin association has named their new prices on the old crop and are about 5c per lb. lower than previous quotations. The coffee market while firm is inactive. The jam market is ruling firm and with staple lines in short supply higher prices can be expected. Shelled walnuts have firmed up and higher prices are now prevailing. The sugar market is in a strong position and further advances are expected by the trade. There is a good demand for all lines of fresh fruits and vegetables.

COFFEE MARKET INACTIVE

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—The coffee market is ruling firm with a stronger feeling caused by scarcity of spot stocks and the lack of interest shown by buyers. Buyers are purchasing in small quantities to fill their immediate requirements. Brazilian holders are of the opinion that buyers will be forced into the market owing to small stocks and evidently both buyers and sellers are holding off as far as possible in the hope that the other side will be the first to give in. Mild coffees are slightly easier.

NEW PRICES ON PEAS

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—Opening prices have been named by packers on Eastern packed peas. They are below last year's levels. The new pack will arrive about the middle of August, and quotations will be about 30c per case lower. Opening prices have also been named on new pack canned strawberries and cherries and are practically about the same as last year. Association prices on new pack sockeye salmon have been named and are about the same as last year. Cohoes are about $2 per case lower with pinks and chums at about the same figures. Outside the prices of sockeye other lines are reasonable and the new pack will be coming on a practically bare market.

RAISIN PRICES LOWER

Winnipeg.

DRIED FRUITS.—New prices have been named on old crop raisins and are about 5c per lb. lower than previous quotations. However this will not affect the market for some time as it will be from four to five weeks before new shipments arrive. No prices have yet been named on new crop raisins. The prune market continues firm and spot stocks of the smaller sizes only are available. New prices are expected about the middle of the month. Peaches are higher than opening prices.

Lobster Catch In 1921 Amounted To More Than 18,000 Tons

133,070 Cases of Lobsters Were Canned of Which Great Britain Took a Considerable Portion and the United States Much the Larger Portion

OTTAWA, Aug. 9 (Special)—A statement just issued by the Natural Resources Branch of the Department of Interior at Ottawa, reveals some interesting facts regarding the commercial importance of Canada's coast fisheries:

"Accustomed as he is to see the product of Atlantic fisheries reaching inland cities and being distributed in but minor quantities, it is only when statistics of output are quoted in thousands of tons and values in millions of dollars, that the average resident in the interior provinces, realizes how largely the sea fisheries add not only to our domestic trade but also to the volume of foreign commerce.

"One of the Atlantic coast fisheries, which has to depend very largely upon the canned product for representation upon the inland market is that of the lobster. Only rarely is the live lobster, or in fact, the entire crustacean, seen on interior markets, except in larger centers.

"Each of the three maritime provinces shares in the lobster fishery, but Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia are the more important, especially the latter, which, owing to its proximity to the markets of the New England states, has been able to build up a considerable trade in live lobsters.

"There are upwards of 600 canneries in the maritime provinces licensed to can lobsters. The product is carefully inspected and the work is carried on under the strict supervision and regulations of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, through its fishery branch. In the fishing operations 1,163,000 wooden traps are employed. The traps are valued at over $1,500,000, and cannery property at $2,130,208.

"During 1921, 18,596 tons of lobsters were taken, of which 5,334 tons were shipped in their shells. There were 133,070 cases of lobsters canned, of which Great Britain took a considerable portion and the United States much the larger quantity. By weight, 11,861 tons of canned lobster went to Great Britain and the Empire, and 21,421 tons to the United States and other foreign countries, these figures including, of course, the weights of containers. The value of the lobster fishing output was $2,962,487 in 1921, as against $4,557,149 in 1920, when the quantity secured was 20 000 tons. The total value of Canada's sea fisheries in 1921 was $18,866,062."

ALASKA RED SALMON MUST NOT BE LABELED SOCKEYE

The Department of Marine and Fisheries has ruled, under authority of the Meat and Canned Foods Act, as amended at the last session of Parliament, that canned Alaska red salmon, imported for sale in Canada after the first of September, must be sold under the name of "Alaska red" only. The name "sockeye" must not be shown on the label in addition thereto.

QUEBEC MERCHANTS IN CONVENTION

and instructive talk on what the association really meant to the retail merchant. It was not an association with its name and large membership its biggest asset, but was an incorporated body of men which had the interests of the individual merchant at heart. A complaint or a suggestion received from either a Provincial Board or an individual member received its proper attention in the hands of the Dominion Executive. The gain in membership during recent years had been of a very encouraging nature not only in Quebec but in all other provinces, and it was his opinion that this was wholly obtained by work which they had been able to do in helping the retail trade in general.

Taxes Under Discussion

Topics which received special attention on the morning of the second day were the taxes contained in the last budget announced by the Federal Government. These included the sales tax, income tax, stamp tax, and the tax on receipts. Now that the Government had definitely decided to collect extra revenue through the sales tax, there were some alterations advocated and these would be further discussed at the convention of the Dominion Board in Winnipeg next week. It was pointed out where the merchant would lose in connection with the stamp tax. The retailer would during the year receive a great number of cheques from his customers for payment of bills, and it was considered safe to say that in many of these cases a stamp would not be affixed. Previously it meant two cents on every cheque, but in future the amount lost would be much greater. Although every person presenting a cheque must according to law affix the stamp, there were many instances in the life of the retail merchant where he would not force his customers to do so. The tax on receipts was criticized and it was hoped that further action on this would be taken in Winnipeg next week and some pressure brought to bear on the Government before this was applicable on January 1st, next.

Election of Officers

All officers for the ensuing year were re-elected. Mr. Savard, president of the Quebec District, asked the members present to endorse what he thought was the best plan for the association. He urged that the same board as last year be re-appointed because the work which they had accomplished in the year previous was very praiseworthy and it was his opinion that a new slate of officers could not step in and continue the good work as capably as the former officers. This was unanimously approved of, but in addition J. A. Lapointe was elected third vice-president according to a regulation approved during the last term whereby each Provincial Board is allowed this post.

Following are the re-elected officers for the coming year:

President J. E. Sansregret; 1st vice-president, Joseph Elie; 2nd. vice-president, E. Sauve; 3rd vice-president, J. A. Lapointe; secretary, M. Lapointe; treasurer, Joseph Filiatrault.

Representing the Quebec Board on the Dominion Executive, J. G. Watson.

TORONTO MARKETS

TORONTO, Aug. 9.—Produce markets in Ontario are generally easier. Dealers report lower prices this week on butter, cheese, eggs, and values of live hogs are also lower. The lack of export inquiry is responsible for the lower prices for butter. Production of eggs is fairly heavy for present consumption, as demand for storage has been pretty well supplied. Cooked meats are somewhat lower than a week ago.

CHEESE MARKET QUIET

WINNIPEG.—The feature of the provision market is the weakness displayed in butter and cheese. Creamery butter has dropped about 3c per lb., but dealers indicate that an advance can be expected very shortly. The fish market is quiet with no change in quotations.

neither can habitually sell any line of shoes at less than the seller's cost. One buys out the other and conducts both stores as one establishment. Has he gained thereby any right he did not have when operating but one store? Clearly not. What could be the source or origin of such a right? Buying the other store, he succeeded only to the rights that its previous owner had, and in the operation of both stores the single owner is subject to precisely the same limitations as when he owned but one store. He may not in either store sell any line at less than the cost of that line without violating the principles of free and fair competition. By the same process of reasoning, he may not conduct one store at a loss and counter balance those losses by gains from the other.

Though he has departments in a store rather than branch stores, he may not run one department at a loss and compensate by gains in another. It makes no difference that he may add a line of hats and subsequently a line of hosiery. If the proposition that I have stated is true as to the sale of a single line, it is true as to the sale of as many lines as a seller can compass, and the housing of the business has no effect in this connection.

Here is the crux of the whole price-cutting matter: The single-line seller who sells below cost is quickly and simply removed from business by the laws of mathematics and his creditors; but the field of business is harassed and frenzied by the dealer who has the power to recoup losses sustained by selling one or more lines below cost by compensatory gains on the remainder of his business.

Should Practise Cost Accounting

Each individual business unit should ascertain its own cost and fix its own selling price with due reference thereto. I urge upon trade associations the opportunity and the necessity for education in cost-accounting methods among their members. Unless cost is known, profit is unknown, and whether a selling price is below cost is guesswork. The business man who fixes his selling price without accurate knowledge of his production cost and without keeping above it is on an industrial joy ride. He is not only in peril himself, but is a constant source of danger to others.

The starting point of all operations against selling below cost must be proper cost accounting by each individual. Common cost figures, group averages, normal costs, and all averages or group allowances play no part in this work. What is to be determined is the cost to the seller, not to someone else nor what cost would be to the seller if his conditions were changed. Education in accounting methods, the inspiration to use them and to work by the result shown—these are great opportunities for trade associations; but every suggestion that opens the way to the individual to adopt a standard, a normal average, that does not reflect the individual's cost, is a deterrent to cost accounting and an inducement not to use it.

No movement within an industry for the elimination of sales below cost can be conducted except in conjunction with and as a part of a campaign for the employment of a proper system of cost accounting. Nor can any movement to suppress sales below cost be put into operation except upon a cost-accounting basis. It is easy to condemn selling below cost, it is not difficult to see wherein its evils lie, nor is it particularly troublesome to perceive that it may be unlawful in habitual practice; but the proof of the charge is the relentless analysis of the actual cost of the operation preceding sale.

The elimination of sales below cost by no means implies a stabilization of prices nor a uniformity of prices. It is when properly applied in no sense a restraint upon competition. Costs will vary and prices should vary as costs vary within market limitations; but the application of the principle "no sales below cost" by each to his own business is simply the recognition and adoption of the fundamental principle of the competitive system.

The Golden Rule Retold

Nothing that I have said is really new or strange. If it seems so, it is merely because we have forgotten much or failed to apply what was once well recognized to the changed conditions of to-day. Old almost as English law is the maxim that one must not use that which is his so as to injure another. Applying that rule to present day conditions, one finds in it very clearly a recognition of the principle of the competitive system. One man may not conduct his own business so as to injure another. Selling below cost with compensatory gains in an allied line is the use of the seller's property in a way that clearly injures his competitor.

LARGE CROP IS EXPECTED OF PERSIAN DATES

According to a report the stocks of bulk Persian dates are limited to the Khadrawi and Sayer grades, so that it is very doubtful if there will be a sufficient quantity to supply the early fall demand. In recent reports from Mesopotamia, the coming crop of bulk Persians is expected to be a large one and it is thought that the opening prices this fall will be much lower than those of last year.

With reference to nuts the same report says: "Very little interest is being taken in the general line. This, of course, is just what must be expected at this season of the year. Prices in the primary market seem to be on a little higher level. England has been a constant and steady buyer right through the season, as in that country there is an active consuming demand from the arrival of the first steamer, whereas on this side apart from the demand for cracking purposes, very little interest is taken in the nuts by the retailers and stocks must be carried by the jobbers until the fall before they go into consumption."

An Old Favorite Back Again!

MACKINTOSH'S TOFFEE-DE-LUXE

The Mackintosh plant at Toffee Town, Halifax, England, is the most remarkable candy factory in the world. The output is tremendous—its capacity is over 50,000,000 (fifty million) pieces per week. Every year it makes more than enough toffee to supply a piece to every man, woman and child on earth.

Mackintosh's is the finest Toffee made in England, and consequently is the finest in the world.

See our display in the Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

BEFORE the war, Mackintosh's Toffee-de-Luxe was known and sold in every civilized country in the world. Export difficulties and shortage of sugar supply curtailed and suspended shipment, but now this famous toffee is again being shipped daily to all quarters of the globe.

For the Canadian trade, Mackintosh's Toffee-de-Luxe is being exported from England, packed in hermetically sealed tins, as follows:—

10c package—packed 3 doz. to carton; 2 cartons to a hermetically sealed tin; 10 tins to a case.

25c package—packed 2 doz. to carton; 2 cartons to a tin; 6 tins to a case.

Bulk—4 lbs. to the tin; 28 tins to the case.

Other Mackintosh confections—Egg and Cream-de-Luxe, Almond Toffee-de-Luxe, Cocoanut-de-Luxe, Cafe-de-Luxe Assortment, will be sold in bulk assortments only.

Mackintosh's Toffee-de-Luxe will be extensively advertised to the consumer as soon as distribution is secured, and dealers are invited to send in a trial order and apply for all information to the sales agents, recently appointed by John Mackintosh & Sons, Limited:—

New home of FORCE at AYR, Ontario

The popularity and consequent increased Canadian demand for FORCE Whole Wheat Flakes has made it necessary for us to obtain larger mill capacity. The cereal mill formerly owned by the Canadian Cereal Company at Ayr, Ont., has been acquired, and we will move into it from Hamilton about the first of November.

The new mill will furnish ample facilities to take care of all the Canadian demand for FORCE. It will also help to supply the English requirements, where over five million packages of FORCE were consumed last year.

Of further interest, are the publicity plans of full page advertisements appearing in "MacLean's Magazine" beginning August 15th, to tell the FORCE story.

Reduced prices for FORCE are also now in effect.

Remember, FORCE is the whole wheat, and when you sell FORCE, you are selling health.

To Holders of Five Year 5½ per cent Canada's Victory Bonds

Issued in 1917 and Maturing 1st December, 1922

CONVERSION PROPOSALS

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers to holders of these bonds who desire to continue their investment in Dominion of Canada securities the privilege of exchanging the maturing bonds for new bonds bearing 5½ per cent. interest, payable half yearly, of either of the following classes:—

(a) Five year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1927.

(b) Ten year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1932.

While the maturing bonds will carry interest to 1st December, 1922, the new bonds will commence to earn interest from 1st November, 1922, GIVING A BONUS OF A FULL MONTH'S INTEREST TO THOSE AVAILING THEMSELVES OF THE CONVERSION PRIVILEGE.

This offer is made to holders of the maturing bonds and is not open to other investors. The bonds to be issued under this proposal will be substantially of the same character as those which are maturing, except that the exemption from taxation does not apply to the new issue.

Dated at Ottawa, 8th August, 1922.

Holders of the maturing bonds who wish to avail themselves of this conversion privilege should take their bonds AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE, BUT NOT LATER THAN SEPTEMBER 30th, to a Branch of any Chartered Bank in Canada and receive in exchange an official receipt for the bonds surrendered, containing an undertaking to deliver the corresponding bonds of the new issue.

Holders of maturing fully registered bonds, interest payable by cheque from Ottawa, will receive their December 1 interest cheque as usual. Holders of coupon bonds will detach and retain the last unmatured coupon before surrendering the bond itself for conversion purposes.

The surrendered bonds will be forwarded by banks to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa, where they will be exchanged for bonds of the new issue, in fully registered, or coupon registered or coupon bearer form carrying interest payable 1st May and 1st November of each year of the duration of the loan, the first interest payment accruing and payable 1st May, 1923. Bonds of the new issue will be sent to the banks for delivery immediately after the receipt of the surrendered bonds.

The bonds of the maturing issue which are not converted under this proposal will be paid off in cash on the 1st December, 1922.

The biggest thing of its kind, and unexcelled as an annual Fair, another week will see it under way, for what promises to be the greatest year in its history. It is for you, Mr. Merchant, to come and see, and to profit thereby. Unbounded opportunity, both from the standpoint of recreation and a holiday, and from the more important point of view, that of learning something at this great congress of exhibits, that you can take home with you, helping you to increase your business and improve your manner of conducting it, will be here provided.

This Grandstand has a seating capacity of 16,800 with standing room accommodation for 8,000. It is 725 feet long.

Grocer's First Interest

The grocer will be particularly interested this year in what might be termed his own particular building. The new Pure Food Building will be his centre of interest. Opened for the first time, it will have within its walls a number of exhibits that should be of first interest to the retail grocer. An article dealing with and describing this building, and a photograph of the same appears on another page of this issue. The opportunity for meeting and conversing with friends from widely distant points is offered in the Canadian National Exhibition. People come to this Fair from all over the Dominion, and the institution of a Merchants' Day with a retailers' luncheon by the directors last year brought many retailers to the Exhibition who found ample recompense for their attendance in helpful intercourse with their fellow merchants.

1,242,000 People Last Year

Last year 1,242,000 people passed through the turnstiles of the grounds, a record better than ever recorded by any World's Fair for the same number of consecutive days. In the crowds last year 36 states of the Union, all the Provinces of the Dominion, Australia, New Zealand, the British Isles, and several countries of Europe were represented. This Exhibition is the great Show Case of Canada, and here is mirrored Canadian advancement in every line of effort. Two new buildings are being opened this year. The exhibition Coliseum is the largest and most costly single structure ever erected on a permanent Fair grounds. It cost $1,000,000, and an additional $500,000 will be spent on equipment. The building has 8½ acres under roof and one of its many features is a judging ring 300 feet long with seating capacity for 7,600 people. The other new building is the Pure Food Building which has already been referred to. A new machinery hall to cost $300,000 wil be started this fall.

The situation of the exhibition grounds, along the lake front, is ideal, and constitutes one of the prettiest parks in the city of Toronto. The natural advantages of the grounds and the thousands of semi-tropical flowers and domestic plant life in bloom, their colors blending into harmonious effects, convert the Park into a vast garden. There are shady paths, restful retreats, focal points and open spaces among the majestic buildings.

Provisions for Recreation

From the standpoint of recreation a visit to Toronto and the exhibition can be varied with opportunities to join in many forms of entertainment. Apart from the many amusements provided within the grounds of the exhibition, the

New Pure Food Building is now Ready

Will Be an Attractive Place at the Canadian National Exhibition This Year, and Should Be Visited By Every Grocer Who Comes to the Fair—About Seventy Manufacturers Will Have Exhibits

THE NEW Pure Food Building will be one of the main attractions at this year's Canadian National Exhibition. It will be a centre of interest for every grocer and every merchant interested in buying and selling foodstuffs. Unique in design and just completed, it will undoubtedly attract practically every visitor at the big Fair. There are about 70 manufacturers with exhibits in it. The line is being sharply drawn between food products and other goods sold in grocery stores. For instance, a firm manufacturing soap and shortening will not be able to display their soap. Nor will a firm making cornstarch and laundry starches be able to show the latter in this building.

Among the chief features of it are the open air courtyards. There are six of these, some larger than others. The idea is that the building will always have sufficient fresh air to ventilate it properly so that visitors may spend an hour or two in it without having to go outside for fresh air. These open air courts are attractively designed, some of them with fountains, some with flowers, grass plots, etc. The building is not a high one but on account of its attractiveness and the beautiful appearance of the entrances it will get the attention it deserves.

All Retailers Welcome

Many of the manufacturers are putting in elaborate exhibits, something entirely new and exhibits that are designed to create a lasting impression. They will surely be worth the while of every grocer to pay a visit to them. Retailers will be made welcome at every booth.

The history of the new Pure Food Building dates back but a few years. While it has been talked of occasionally it was not until the middle of 1920 that anything definite was done. A representative of Canadian Grocer happened to point out to one of the exhibitors that there should be a building devoted entirely to food products at the exhibition. This paper had advocated it editorially each year for the previous two or three years. A visit was made to the offices of the Canadian National Exhibition to determine the attitude of the officials. John G. Kent, the managing director, was very enthusiastic about it and promised every co-operation. Canadian Grocer was asked to sound the opinions of exhibitors and find if the majority were in favor of the separate building. Sufficient response was received to call a meeting at the exhibition grounds during the exhibition of 1920. The Food Products Association was formed and it was decided to go ahead with the proposition providing sufficient space could be sold to indicate that it would be a success. A special committee was formed to look into costs and make suggestions to the exhibition board. Early estimates, however, were too high and although it had been anticipated that the building would be ready for the season of 1921, it was found impossible to change the plans quickly enough. This decision was come to in the spring of 1921.

The new Pure Food Building is opened for the first time this year at the Canadian National Exhibition.

About 70 manufacturers will have exhibits in this building this year. The exhibits will be exclusively food oducts.

A Few of Toronto's Leading Grocery Stores

VISITING grocers attending the Canadian National Exhibition are reminded of Toronto's many fine retail stores where progressive merchandising ideas abound, and which might be followed with success in some of the smaller places in the Dominion. In the grocery departments of Toronto's large departmental stores will be found much to help in the way of ideas. Where ideas are daily being put into effect that bring new business. Display is a big feature in the selling plans of these stores and at exhibition time, some splendid window displays are to be seen.

Toronto has many fine grocery stores, and merchants engaged in the trade from outside points will find a hearty welcome in any of these places of business. An interchange of ideas and a discussion with fellow merchants of the many problems that arise from time to time, will be found helpful. Toronto's large department stores have grocery sections that will be found interesting and attractive, and the attention given to displays will indicate to the outside merchant the importance of properly showing his goods. Then there are a goodly number of stores, of course, that are exclusively groceries. A few reproductions are here shown, but space would not permit the showing of any more equally as good.

A section of the grocery department of the T. Eaton Co., Toronto, showing where customers can sit at tables and give their orders—On every hand displays are shown, and people confronted with products temptingly arrayed to induce buying.

Here is an illustration of a Toronto store that is exclusively groceries—It is that of R. H. Stewart at 599 Sherbourne Street. Mr. Stewart makes a specialty of selling only high-grade lines and a great deal of time is devoted to the arrangement of displays, which together with forceful selling talks get results.

A Study of Human Nature Helps This Merchant Solve Chain Store Problem

By G. W. ECHLIN, Hamilton, in Chain Store Series

THERE's no gainsaying the fact that the man who isn't afraid is the best asset of his business. The world at large just naturally snuggles up to that kind of man. If he's in politics he has a good following. If he's in business he has good customers, and lots of them.

That's the sort of man M. K. Hedden is.

But, perhaps you don't know Hedden? Well, to tell you the truth he's not the type of man that reaches out for world supremacy. He's just one of those good, solid, common-sense grocers one likes to deal with, but are sometimes hard to find.

He lives in Hamilton, Ont. His store is at the extreme southern end of Wentworth street. One can see him any day and be warmed by his expansive, sunny smile. The people remember well the day he took over the little grocery business there. They wondered what kind of man he was. And the human curiosity of human nature brought him many visitors.

Studies Human Nature

He met them all with that square-in-the-eye look. He did some appraising of human nature, as well. To the observer it was patent that Hedden had an excellent mental cataloguing and filing system. And he used it well.

It didn't take him long to sort out the bargain hunters and the credit hunters. And it didn't take him long to sort out those who walked blocks to one of the chain stores to save a few cents, and then toil home with the weekly burden. A study of human nature is as naturally a part of Hedden's business as a study of saleable goods is.

Thus the husbands of the many ladies who paid initial visits came under the observant eye of this canny grocer. His smile lost none of its warmth as he greeted the bread winners, basket on arm, parading past his place of business for the bargain marts. In fact his smile grew more expansive. He could see the worried look of those husbands who were destined to walk blocks for the sake of a few cents. And being a sympathetic and understanding man, Hedden readily grasped the situation.

What is the Saving?

"I'll show 'em a thing or two," was Hedden's mental summary. And he did. As has been stated, he wasn't afraid—not even of the competition of the chain stores. Little by little he became acquainted enough with the female portion of his customers who bought immediate wants at his store. Then he questioned carefully and wisely. What prices did they pay for this and that at the chain stores? How much did they buy a week? Was it much trouble to get husband to do the weekly delivery stunt?

Then he "showed them."

They were saving a few cents on this. They were saving a few cents on that. What was the aggregate saving? Would they buy in the same quantities and pay the cash if his prices warranted? Did it pay to worry the husband or son to hasten to the bargain counters with a basket just in the most precious time of the week—Saturday afternoon—when baseball was in full bloom, to be jostled this way and that, elbowed out of the running by fat women and perspiring men, all out of temper?

Guranteed Goods Plus Service

And Hedden showed these bargain shoppers a few other things, as well. One was his new delivery auto. That made a hit after the first trial. Another was "guaranteed goods, plus service." Another was the reunited family, bereft of the weekly bugbear of shopping. And Hedden smiled his way into every home for blocks around. The customers are never wrong, so far as he is concerned, even if they are. He shoulders all mistakes. He makes everything right. He isn't afraid of chain store competition, because he has won a neighborhood of friends. And he has kept them. The title of his life history will be "Hedden for Victory."

These Burglars Were Caught In The Act

Burglars in the act of committing robbery from the premises of the Quebec Preserving Co., in Quebec city, were recently sensationally caught.

Sergeant Girard was making his rounds and met a man carrying a carton box.

"Hello, what have you in that box?" the officer asked.

"Oh, this is some wood," said Delphis Lemay, aged 27, of 35 Smith street, but when he saw the sergeant approach to examine the wood he dropped the box and fled.

At that very moment one of the second story windows of the Quebec Preserving Company was opened hurriedly and a man leaped out. He did not reach the ground as directly as he intended for in his descent he came in contact with a semaphore wire and the recoil sent him hurtling up in the air again and in falling to the ground he landed on his back on the railway tracks and lay there unconscious. The name of the second burglar is Leo Fournel and he is a nephew of Delphis Lemay.

The box was also taken by the police and it was found to contain cigarettes.

The value of the cigarettes is said to be $136.00.

A CORRECTION

In reply to a recent inquiry to Canadian Grocer, it was stated in these columns that The Canadian Toledo Scale Co., Toronto and Windsor, were agents for the Van Berkel Slicing Machine in Toronto. The Hobart Manufacturing Co., King Street, E., Toronto, are the agents for this machine, but recently made certain selling arrangements with the Canadian Toledo Scale Co.

CENTRE OF INTEREST FOR RETAILERS

city itself is rich in parks and amusement resorts. A stay in Toronto would fall short of what it really should be, if a visit is not made to Toronto's new amusement place at Sunnyside, with its great long stretch of board walk, its beautiful bath house, unrivalled in this country, and its many other forms of amusement too numerous to mention here. Then there is Island Park across the Bay, one of the most delightful spots that any city could possess. Riverdale Park, with its zoological gardens. Scarborough Beach Park at the eastern end of the city. High Park, a beautiful natural woodland, and Queen's Park in the centre of the city, with the Parliament buildings and University colleges in close proximity.

NEW PURE FOOD BUILDING NOW READY

Again during the exhibition of 1921 the matter was gone into further at a general meeting in the Administration Building. By that time new plans had been prepared and it was found that the building could be erected for $150,000. Space was offered for sale and in a short time, more than two-thirds had been reserved of the 26,000 square feet of exhibit space. Since that time and since the building was started every foot of exhibit space has been taken up. There is now a considerable overflow which will be placed under the grandstand and an addition to the new building is likely to be erected for next year.

Retail growers will miss a good deal of practical information about the goods they are selling if they do not visit the new Pure Food Building this year. It is the first year that it has been open and will surely create a splendid impression.

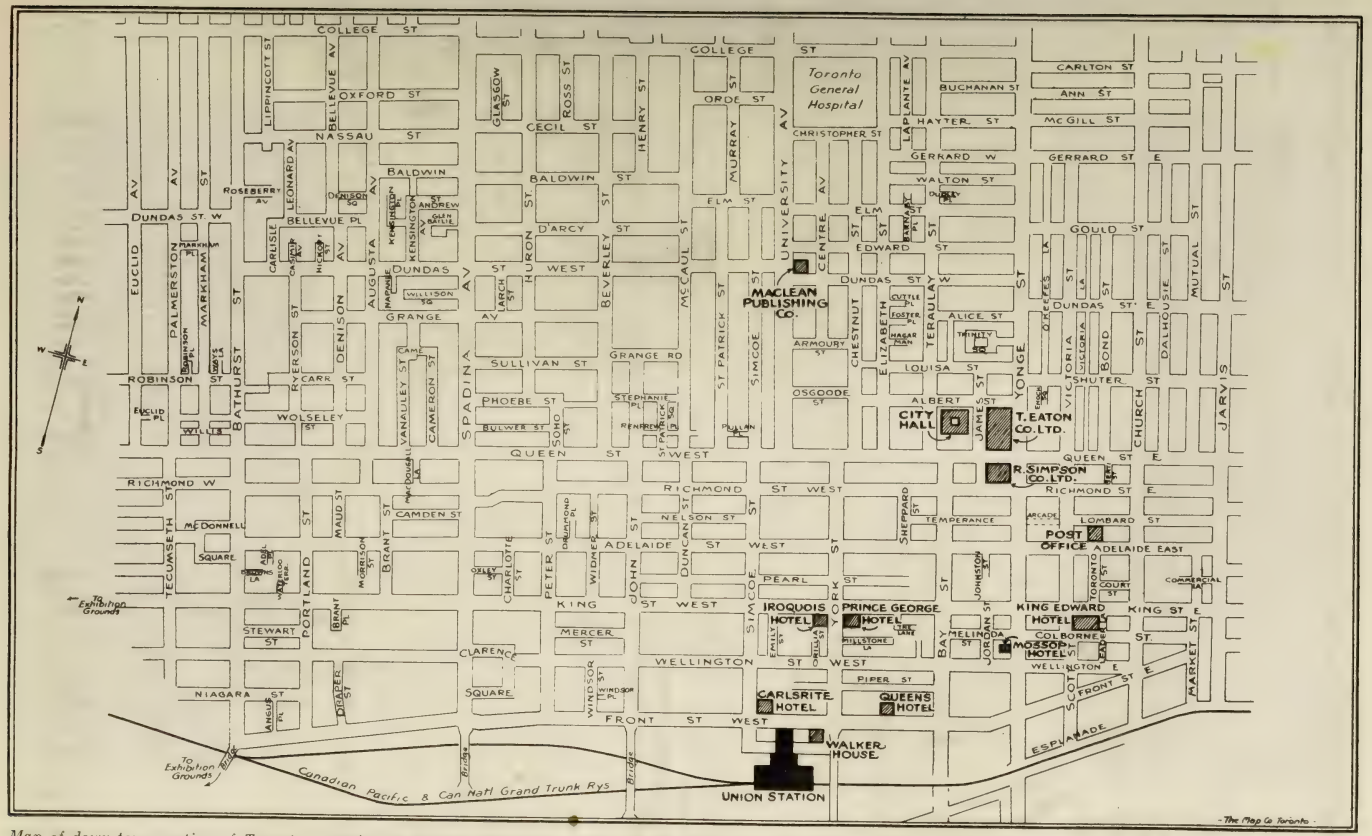
Commission on Fisheries is Now At the Coast

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 15 (Special).—The commission appointed by the Dominion Government to investigate British Columbia fisheries will be on the coast next month, and will hold sittings at practically every point of importance between Victoria and Prince Rupert. The lighthouse tender Estevan has been placed at the disposal of the commission by the Department of Marine, and will be used in getting about. The first session of the commission was held at Prince Rupert on August 7 and 8.

There are to be meetings at other points on the coast where evidence will be gathered by commissioners. The localities have not yet been selected and will not be until after Major J. A. Motherwell, chief inspector of fisheries for British Columbia, has been consulted.



The commission proposes devoting particular attention to the existing embargo on the export of fresh salmon and the rehabilitation of sockeye in the Fraser River.

At Prince Rupert the halibut fisheries will likely be thoroughly investigated, as a feeling has prevailed for some time among fishermen in the North that this valuable species is depleted to the point of extermination.

This is a splendid illustration of the new bath house at the Sunnyside amusement resort.

This building, one of the finest on this continent, is a popular acquisition to Toronto's many attractions.

Dom. R. M. A. Deal With Many Matters

Present Sales Tax Act is Discussed at Some Length, and Much Opposition is Expressed Regarding the Operation of the Same—Seventeenth Annual Convention of the Dominion Board R. M. A. Held Last Week in Halifax

By Special Representative of Canadian Grocer

HALIFAX, Aug. 15. (Special.)—The seventh annual convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada opened auspiciously on Tuesday morning, August 8th, in the Assembly Chambers, Province Building. A large number of delegates were present at the opening, and more arrived as the day progressed.

Delegates in Attendance

Those attending the convention were: J. A. Banfield, Winnipeg; J. G. Watson, Montreal; E. M. Trowern, Ottawa; W. C. Miller, Toronto; W. J. McCully, Stratford; B. W. Zieman, Preston; Wilfred Hodgins, London; D. W. Clark, Toronto; J. E. Sansregret, Montreal; M. LaPointe, Montreal; A. J. Reid, Shubenacadie; J. Cuthbertson Doyle, Halifax; J. H. Curle, Winnipeg; Henry Watters, Ottawa; B. L. Stanley Ross, New Westminster; F. G. Fileau, Montreal; John H. Bentley, Halifax; W. J. Hopgood, Halifax; G. Garfield Wray, Regina; W. G. DeWolfe, St. Stephen, N.B.; F. P. Alward, St. John, New Brunswick; S L. Emerson, St. John; G. W. Silver, Lunenberg; D. S. Archibald, Musquodoboit; F. E. Harris, Aylesford; S. A. MacDonald, Charlottetown; G. E. Hughes, Charlottetown; J. C. Campbell, Ottawa; Mr. Phillips, Ottawa, and W. A. Stewart, Charlottetown.

The Official Welcome

The meeting was opened with the president, J. A. Banfield, of Winnipeg, in the chair. Mayor Murphy welcomed the visitors on behalf of the city, and expressed his hope that their visit would be not only a pleasant and enjoyable one but also a beneficial one. He reminded the guests that Halifax was celebrating with "Carnival Week," and invited them to enjoy themselves to the utmost in their leisure hours.

Mayor Murphy was followed by Gavin Stairs, president of the Halifax Board of Trade, who also warmly welcomed the delegates. He was especially pleased to note that many of those present had come a considerable distance to attend the convention. Mr. Stairs expressed his view that the chief good arising from such a convention was the opportunity to become better acquainted with one's fellowmen.

These two speeches of welcome were heartily and happily responded to by President Banfield,who referred briefly to the name Nova Scotia has made for herself and to the great men she has produced.

After a few more remarks, Mr. Banfield ended his speech of appreciation, and the convention settled down to attend to the business of the day.

The Sales Tax Act

One of the most important matters brought before the convention was the new Sales Tax Act. This matter was considered so important to the retail merchants, that a brochure of eight pages was issued dealing with the Sales Tax Act. This was referred to at length in last week's Canadian Grocer.

This brochure, in brief, points out that the sales tax act should be a clear and concise ruling, one that could be easily understood and applied, and that the tax should be collected from the manufacturer and importer, and should not be collected by him from the retail merchants, who in turn must extract it from the consumer as best they can. The present Sales Tax Act, they contend, is so confusing as to be almost uninterpretable, and the present method of collecting the tax is not only a long and bothersome one, but also an unfair one.

The Association requested that the incoming Dominion Executive Council ask the government to have the Act re-drafted and placed in such language that it could be easily understood by the merchants and their customers.

46 Resolutions Dealt With

The afternoon and evening sessions of the convention were taken up entirely with business and resulted in forty-six resolutions being dealt with before the session closed.

The Association desired that the Stamp Tax on receipts and bank cheques be abolished. Another resolution referred to the eight-hour day as far as it affected the retail trade. The eight-hour day was strongly opposed by the members present. The Workmen's Compensation Act also received its share of discussion. The resolution concerning it was to the effect that if any attempt was made to include retail merchants in any Workmen's Compensation Act, that all the various provincial boards should take active steps to see that the retail trade is not brought under their operations, as they are not considered hazardous risks.

Complaints were made that some of the new co-operative societies and associations were making false representations in their advertising, and hence securing the trade. The Retail Merchants' Association will, in future, have any such advertising brought to their attention and, if necessary, prosecute such firms as persist in this practice.

The association placed itself on record as heartily approving of industrial research and drew up a resolution calling upon the Federal Government to request the Department of Trade and Commerce to support such research and further the interests of industry in Canada.

Other resolutions referred to matter of goods being marked according to their actual value, schools for instruction in retail merchandising, registered parcel post, income tax, manufacturers' price lists, business settlements, legal fund, Dominion Bank Act, association emblem, pattern contracts, code of ethics for retail merchants, trade marked goods, etc.

The second day of the convention was occupied with hearing reports of the various committees and the election of next year's officers. All of last year's officers were re-elected, showing the trust and confidence in which they are held by their fellow members.

The convention was concluded with a banquet at the Green Lantern, tendered the delegates to the convention by the Nova Scotia branch of the organization. Mr. A. J. Reid of Schubenacadie, N. S., president of the provincial board, presided. The program was one of speeches and music. The toasts were to the King, to Canada, to Nova Scotia, and to the City of Halifax. All were heartily responded to. A short address was given by Mr. Reid, who referred to the object of the gathering, and to the success of the convention. He spoke of the days when the retail merchant was spoken of as a "store-keeper," and of the strides that had been made in the trade since then. He referred to all that had been accomplished for the retail merchants by the Dominion executive of the association.

Prof. H. F. Munro Speaks

The speech of the evening was made by Prof. H. F. Munro of Dalhousie University. In his usual masterly style he delivered a splendid address on the present international outlook.

The luncheon was closed at the end of a fine program with the singing of the National Anthem, and all were of the opinion that the convention was one of the most successful in the history of the association.

Improvement in Conditions

THERE are many definite signs of improving conditions throughout Canada and an active Fall trade in grocery commodities should be experienced providing the effect of the coal and railway strikes is not serious. Latest reports from various parts of the West indicate that a better than average crop will be harvested, despite earlier reports of poor conditions. It is realized that many Western farmers have been postponing necessary purchases for the last couple of years awaiting better crops and better prices. With a good crop this year and grocery prices pretty well stabilized there should be active business for Western grocerymen who go after this trade aggressively. An indication that better buying is already being done is the fact that summer grocery lines have been pretty well cleared out.

On the B. C. coast, the fruit crop shows almost record volume and the mining and lumbering industries are more active.

Governmental figures of Customs collections and revenue from Sales Tax show a big increase in recent months thus indicating a bigger volume of trade. These figures are the more notable in view of the decline which has been experienced in prices, thereby indicating an even greater turnover of merchandise than is at first apparent.

In planning on future business it behooves retailers to give consideration to these indications of improvement and changes which are taking place in buying tendencies.

The Sales Tax Act

DELEGATES attending the annual convention of the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association in Halifax last week devoted considerable of the time to a discussion of the Sales Tax Act. Opposition was expressed in regard to its present operation, much along the same lines as outlined in the circular as sent out by the association and which was reproduced in Canadian Grocer last week.

Difficulties which have arisen in connection with the present application of the Sales Tax Act, and the fact that many business men have discovered that the imposition has developed into something of a burden and discriminatory in character, has influenced a thorough study of the question.

The fundamental principle of the Sales Tax Act when it was adopted by the government was simple enough but its application was not clearly outlined and a wide variation is noted in the way it is now applied by various branches of business. It was the government's intention that the tax be passed on to the consumer, but a loophole was left by the provision that manufacturers could absorb up to 50 per cent. of the tax. Then, too, there have been many varying definitions given of the ruling by collectors of customs in various parts of the country which have led to much misunderstanding. The fact that some manufacturers who formerly absorbed part of the Sales Tax have foreseen an increase in this tax in future and have stopped the practice of absorbing any part of the tax has also created a situation which is misunderstood by certain retailers. Wholesalers, who normally operate on the basis of a large turnover and a small margin, have found it a hardship to absorb the Sales Tax such as they are practically forced to do to equalize their prices with those of manufacturers selling direct to the retailer who absorbs part of the tax.

One suggestion offered is a plan providing for the application of the whole tax of 4½ per cent. on sales by either manufacturer or wholesaler to the retailer, and no tax on sales from manufacturer to wholesaler or as between manufacturer and manufacturer or wholesaler and wholesaler except where such goods were to be consumed or used by that manufacturer or wholesaler.

It is claimed that this amendment to the Act would have the effect of relieving wholesalers from a big burden, it would enable the collection of the Sales Tax revenue from one source on each transaction rather than from two sources, it would allow of the entire tax being passed on to the retailer in each instance no matter from where he purchased his goods, and it is estimated that as result the net revenue to the government would be increased ten per cent. By the continuation of the plan now followed, of manufacturers adjusting prices to protect wholesalers, it is estimated that the cost of the goods to the retailer is increased five per cent.

From the retailer's standpoint difficulty has been experienced on some lines in passing on to the consumer the full amount of the Sales Tax. On certain of these lines rather than make odd prices the retailer has absorbed the tax particularly where part of it has already been taken up by the wholesaler or manufacturer. Passing on the whole amount of the tax may be another matter. If legislation is to be enacted making it necessary for manufacturers and wholesalers to pass on the full amount of the tax then some consideration must be given the retailer's ability to in turn pass it on to the consumer as it is intended to be.

Editorials in Brief

The way to make new goods look the part and to make old goods look new, is to display them to the best possible advantage.

The merchant who thinks in terms of small business, whose ambition is for small gains in trade, will make a small success. We do not accomplish more than we aim to accomplish.

The goods that make you the most money are the goods that sell fastest, even though they pay less profit than some others. There is no advantage in the big profit marked up on goods that don't sell.

Two classes of merchants fail in bad times, those who overbuy thinking that caution is unnecessary; and those who underbuy, thinking they might as well quit trying until the panic is over.

Are you coming to the Canadian National Exhibition this year? The grocer will find much to interest him at this annual World's Fair. The Pure Food Building, to be open for the first time, will contain approximately seventy exhibits of food products exclusively.

Pure Food Show At Ottawa Fair Will Have 136 Exhibits

Ottawa, Aug. 14 (Special)—Arrangements for Ottawa's Pure Food Show, in connection with the Central Canada Exhibition, are shaping up excellently, according to a report presented by A. S. Moreland, at the regular semi-monthly meeting of the grocers' section of the Ottawa branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, held last Thursday evening.

Mr. Moreland, who is chairman of the food show committee, reported that there would be 136 exhibitors this year, representative of many of the best houses in Canada. This meant that every inch of accommodation had been sold and that easily a dozen more booths could have been disposed of had they been available.

A feature of the show this year is that the pure food branch of the federal health department has made arrangements to pass on all exhibits before the show is opened to the public. A certificate will be issued to all exhibitors certifying that their products are O. K.

Is was also announced that Friday September 15, had been chosen as Merchants' Day. At noon on that day a luncheon will be conducted by the grocers' section in conjunction with the Commercial Travellers' Association of Ottawa, and the chairman will be a member of the grocers' section.

T. A. C. Kennedy reported that the Exhibition Association had agreed to spend $800 immediately on repairing the roof of the Pure Food Show building, which is leaking in several places, and to spend a considerably larger sum after the fair is over in putting on a new permanent roof.

Those present at the meeting were: A. E. Kelly, chairman; Duncan Bell, treasurer; J. C. Allan, secretary; R. E. Edmondson, R. W. Porteous, B. G. Crabtree, P. G. Allan, J. Fyffe, T. W. Collins, W. Neate. T. A. C. Kennedy, A. S. Moreland and John Regan.

Letters To The Editor

Asquith, Sask., Aug. 5, 1922

Editor, Canadian Grocer:

In your publication July 28th, page 21, a subscriber asks regarding measures for vinegar. I was up against the same proposition until I saw a hardware merchant next door weighing formaldehyde, since when I have been weighing my vinegar, figuring ten pounds to the gallon. I think if you will notice on the head of the barrel the different weights will be given, while the invoice will show it in gallons figured at the above rate.

I hope this information will be of some service to you. I remain,

Yours sincerely,
H. J. Baldwin.

Are You Interested in This Proposal?

Tauranga, New Zealand, July 8, 1922.

The Manager,
Canadian Grocer,
Toronto.

Dear Sir:

It has been a desire of mine to see Canadian conditions, and I am wondering whether through your columns I could hit upon a grocer who would like to exchange places for say two years.

The stores I own are situated in good towns and we are doing a good business, but details in reference to exchange could be dealt with by letter between the parties concerned.

Of course, some guarantee of good faith and state of store's business would have to be taken into consideration, but that could be arranged.

I would like to hear from a man who owns a store producing about a profit of £2,000 yearly.

Thanking you,

Yours faithfully,
J. H. BEALE,

Wholesalers and Retailers' Committees Soon to Meet

Ottawa, Aug. 14. (Special.)—It will be remembered that at a joint conference between the members of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association and a committee representing the Grocers' Section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, held at Niagara Falls in June this year, special committees of both sides were chosen to meet and go over each of the items discussed at the conference and make a report. These committees will meet shortly, and in announcing this fact the secretary of the Advisory Committee of the Grocers' Section has the following to say:

"In our opinion, this is the first preparatory step toward improving the conditions of the retail grocery trade throughout Canada.

"If any members have any further questions that are not incorporated in the report of the conference which they desire to have laid before the joint committee, we would be pleased to have them send them to us as early as possible.

"It must be recognized by every retail grocer in Canada that the task the joint committee has ahead of it, in an endeavour to improve the legitimate channels of trade, is a big one, but it is not an insurmountable one. It may look difficult, because trade difficulties, like all other difficulties, never grow less by age. They become rather more securely rooted the longer they are left to grow, but by united effort we see no reason why they should not be uprooted. The first essential to proper trade improvement is a well grounded belief that the business we are engaged in is an essential and honourable occupation and, nothwithstanding any statements that may be made by those unfamiliar with commercial problems, retail merchants are a necessary and important part of every community, and they can never be dispensed with. Let us, then, use every endeavour to elevate and improve the retail trade of Canada through our associated efforts."

BOUGHT FOUR TONS OF SUGAR

"Canadian Grocer has been a great assistance to me in buying. I have been following the market reports very closely and have made considerable money by doing so. I bought four tons of sugar when the price was at the lowest. I have also bought considerable tea at the low price."

REMARKABLE RECOVERY BY CROPS IN SUMMERBERRY AREA

Summerberry, Sask., Aug 14.—Crop prospects in this district are good. To date there is no damage from any cause, no saw fly or rust being noticeable. There is a splendid stand of grain on all fields and it looks as if this district will have an average yield of 25 bushels of wheat. Heads are getting full and turning color. Cutting will be in full swing about Aug. 20.

There have been some of the most wonderful recoveries in the small area hailed here on June 25. The grain in one field was hailed completely out of sight on June 25; even the drill marks could not be seen. To-day there is an excellent crop of barley on it, fully headed and well filled, just 43 days since the storm.

Fall rye is an excellent crop here and is all cut.

BELGIUM CROP OF PEAS IS REPORTED EXCELLENT

L. Chaput Fils, Ltd., wholesale grocers of Montreal, have secured the Canadian agency for Van de Poel & Co's Belgian canned peas which are packed in Stabroeck, Belgium. These peas are packed in attractively labelled tins containing 14½ ounces net of the vegetable. The latest reports from Belgium tell of an excellent crop with prices on the new pack much lower than last year. It is expected that in view of the short crop of French peas, the Belgian peas will fill their place on this market. The first shipment of these goods is expected in Montreal next week on the S. S. Melita.

A NOVEL STUNT

The St. Clair Business Men's Association, Toronto, is going to conduct a novel stunt through the Exhibition fortnight. A brand new dollar bill will be withdrawn from a neighborhood bank by one of the association and it will be attached to a card upon which the first owner will sign his name. It will then be put into circulation and a list of its purchases will be kept throughout the two weeks.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

FEW changes are noted in the grocery markets this week as far as prices are concerned. The sugar market has been somewhat disturbed by the several amendments that have been offered at Washington, whereby the rates on sugar under the Emergency Tariff have been increased. The amendment that finally passed by a vote of 37 to 35, increases the rate on Cubas from $1.60 per cwt. to $1.84, and on full duty sugars from $2 per cwt. to $2.30. This it will be observed, while increasing the schedule rate, maintains the 20 per cent. preference on Cubas. Other amendments were introduced and rejected in favor of the one ultimately passed. Chief of the rejected amendments was that proposing a rate of $2 per cwt. on Cubas and $2.50 per cwt. on full duty sugars. It was rejected by a vote of 35 for to 37 against, which vote was reversed on the amendment carried. The senate is now to vote on the Bill and it is expected the vote will be taken during the week of August 21, before it finally goes to the president for his signature. Meanwhile increased rates on sugar have been unfavorably criticized by sugar interests, as it is estimated that it means an increased tax on the American public of two hundred million dollars annually.

The effect of all this discussion has been to unsettle the market, making holders of sugar in store anxious to unload them before the duty takes effect. Thus a buyers' market is created, with selling slightly shaded at 3¾c c. & f. for August shipment.

On account of the scarcity of demand, refiners find it difficult to maintain prices in the United States. Similar conditions prevail in Canada but there does not seem to be any disposition to lower prices.

Prices on the new crop California raisins are announced this week, and are lower than a year ago. Prices on the new crop California prunes and apricots are deferred. Standard peas, new pack, are quoted lower this week. Cereals in bulk are moving slowly but there is a moderate inquiry for the package lines. Both the coffee and tea markets display considerable strength. Fruits and vegetables are arriving freely and are quoted at lower prices.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Aug. 17.—The prospects for the fall business in the grocery trade are bright. All the wholesale grocers are optimistic. The local crops are good and while prices are easier on farm produce, money in the country districts will be freer and credit conditions better. The sugar market holds its strong position with a further advance in the raw market. Molasses also reflects the strength of this market although there is no change. Japan teas are strong with a higher price quoted on the third crop. Coffee also shows more strength. The spice market is quiet but developments are expected towards the beginning of September. Dried fruits tend towards lower levels and lower prices on currants, raisins and figs are assured. Walnuts stand firm but there is an easier trend to almonds and filberts. Package goods and cereals are steady in price. Fresh fruits are easier and apples are plentiful in this district. The prospects for a good crop of tomatoes and corn are better but the season will be late.

CANNED FRUITS LOWER

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS. — The warmer weather makes the prospects better for tomatoes. Local wholesalers still hold out hope of a good crop of tomatoes although the season will be late. Everything now depends upon the weather. If the heat wave lasts the prices on canned tomatoes may be lower. It is now an established fact that canned fruits are to be lower. Jams are already lower in price. Canned peas are strong and French peas will be higher. There is however a good crop of Belgian peas and the prices are much lower. It is expected that these will take the place of the French peas this year. Canned corn, so far shows a strong tendency since the crop is not as good as was expected. The season so far has been too damp.

BIG CROP OF FIGS AND RAISINS

Montreal

DRIED FRUITS.—The prospects are for much lower prices this fall on the majority of dried fruits. From Smyrna comes a report of an excellent crop of figs and raisins both in quality and quantity. Importers are assured of lower prices and in figs most of the business has been placed in the last ten days. In 1921 the actual crop of Smyrna raisins was 31,500 tons. The estimated crop this year is 98,000 tons. Last year the crop of figs was 19,400 tons. It is estimated to be 22,000 tons this year. As spot stocks of both are well cleaned up importers anticipate little trouble in disposing of the supply at the more reasonable figures which are expected. Lower quotations have been also made on California raisins. The opening price on Thompson seedless raisins is 4½c below that of last year.

VEGETABLES.—The dry weather has brought better prospects for tomatoes and corn. GOOD SUPPLY OF FRUIT

Montreal.

FRUIT.—There is an ever increasing supply of fruit on this market. Apples are increasing in quantity and decreasing in price. Some growers complain that the retailers are asking too much profit and hindering the marketing of the fruit. Apples will be low in price this year and in order to induce the growers to bring them to market there must be an improved demand created. Peaches and pears are lower but dealers feel that the price will be still lower during the next two weeks.

TORONTO MARKETS

TORONTO, Aug. 16.—The sugar market, while somewhat unsettled on account of the increased rates in the tariff in the United States, is unchanged as far as spot prices are concerned. The price, Montreal basis, is $7.50 per cwt., while the Toronto price is $7.84 per cwt. The market in canned goods this week is marked by a decline in the new crop standard peas, which are now quoted at $1.52½ per doz. Dried fruits on spot are unchanged. Prices on new crop prunes and apricots have not yet been named, but prices on the new crop raisins are out, and show somewhat easier levels as compared with a week ago. Bulk cereals are a little slow at the present time, but the packaged lines are selling well. The market for spices is active, with some advances as well as a few declines noted this week. Fruits and vegetables continue to arrive freely, and are offered at fairly easy levels.

BEANS HAVE MODERATE INQUIRY

PRICES ON NEW CROP RAISINS

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Spot prices of dried fruits are unchanged this week. Prices on the new crop California prunes and apricots have not yet been named. A meeting of the directors of the growers' association was held last week when it was thought that the quotations on the new crop would have been announced. However the announcement has been deferred. Prices on the new crop California raisins have been named, and are somewhat lower than last year. Newly seeded raisins to arrive about October first are quoted at 14½c for 15 oz. pkgs., at 15½c for the fancy, and at 13½c for the bulk boxes of 25 lbs. Advice from Smyrna regarding the new crop of Smyrna sultanas indicates that the price will be lower. They are due to arrive on this market about the middle of October. Prices on the new crop table raisins have been announced by the Malaga Packers' Association. The crop this year is earlier than usual and of better quality.

CEREALS.—Bulk cereals are inclined to be a little quiet at the present time, but the market is unchanged as far as prices are concerned. Buying is only in moderate quantities. This week a decline is announced and wholesalers are quoting them on the basis of $1.52½ per doz. Other lines of new crop peas are unchanged. There is a very active inquiry for canned salmon at the present time, wholesalers quoting ones at $5.60 per doz., and the halves at from $2.90 to $3. SUGAR MARKET IS UNSETTLED

Toronto.

SUGAR.—The sugar market has been somewhat disturbed by the action of the United States senate in voting in favor of an increase in the tariff rates on sugar in that country. Smoot of Utah, succeeded in getting his passed by a vote of 37 to 35. By this amendment the rates under the emergency tariff of $1.60 per cwt. on Cubas, and $2 on full duty sugars have been increased to $1.84 and $2.30 respectively. This it will be observed while increasing the schedule rate, maintains the 20 per cent. preference on Cubas.

The effect of all this discussion on sugar in the United States has been to unsettle the market making holders of sugars in store anxious to unload them before the duty takes effect, thus creating a buyer's market, with selling prices somewhat shaded at 3¾c c. & f. for August. At the close of last week the market was firmer with ready buyers at 3 1/4c for sugars in any position, and sales are reported of 10,000 bags August loading at 3.60c f.o.b. Cuba. On account of the scarcity of demand, refiners find it difficult to maintain prices in the United States, similar conditions also prevailing here, but there appears to be no disposition to lower prices.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG.—Business in wholesale and retail circles is showing a marked improvement. Cutting of the grain in the Prairie Provinces is in full swing and a large number of men from all over the country have arrived to help harvest this year's crop. New prices on new crop raisins have been named by the Association and are about half a cent per pound higher than quotations that were named on the old crop last week. Due to many lines of raisins being completely sold out, old crop prices have been withdrawn. New canned strawberries and cherries as well as peas have arrived and prices on fruits are about the same as last year's with peas slightly lower. Teas continue to show strength while coffee, although firm in primary markets, holds fairly steady on spot. Sugar continues to hold firm with prospects of an advance in the near future on account of the high price of raws. Rice is ruling firm with millers at the Coast advancing their prices. There is an abundance of vegetables on the market at slightly lower figures. Fruits are in fair demand at lower quotations.

NEW CANNED GOODS ARRIVE

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—New pack salmon is now on the market and there is a good demand for both sockeye as well as the cheaper grades. New pack Canadian cherries, strawberries and peas have arrived and the quality generally speaking is good. Prices will be about the same as last year with the exception of peas which will be slightly lower. California canned fruits are practically cleaned up and as the new pack will not arrive until October higher prices are expected on American lines. Canadian gallon apples are finding ready sale due to the scarcity of evaporated apples.

Opportunity to Market Canadian Canned Fruits

Ottawa, Aug. 15 (Special).—Writing to the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa concerning the opportunity for increasing the Canadian canned fruit market in the British Isles, Trade Commissioner Gordon B. Johnson says:

"The imports into the United Kingdom of preserved fruits and jam amounted in 1913 to 745,600 cwts.: in 1919 to 1,989,000 cwts. and in 1920 to 1,219,000 cwts.

"Frequent references have been made during the past 18 months to opportunities for Canadian canned fruit, including gallon apples, in the Scottish market, in which it has been urged that Canadian packers of these fruits should try to emulate the Californian methods of grading, of packing, of labelling and of marketing. Frequent mention has also been made of the necessity of furnishing a solid pack of gallon apple. During the past year a certain American company has almost monopolized this market in gallon apples because of the excellent solid pack they have been supplying.

"The same necessities apply to the market in Ireland. The imports into Ireland of preserved fruits amounted in 1920 to 31,500 cwts., valued at £132,400, which entered the country nearly altogether at Belfast and Dublin. Of the direct imports in 1920 of dried and preserved fruits into Ireland, that is, from countries other than Great Britain, amounting to 1,840 cwts., the United States supplied 723 cwts. and Canada 977 cwts."

Safes in the stores of A. Duchene and Z. Bogin in the town of Sandwich, Ont., were blown open early one day this week by burglars, who carried off $200 in cash and merchandise valued at $500.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Aug. 17.—The feature of the produce market is the lower prices quoted on live and dressed hogs, which have caused a weakness in other lines. Select light weights are now quoted at 13c a pound, weighed off cars on this market. As a result dressed hogs are again lower and smoked hams, cooked hams and smoked bacon are easier in price. The butter market shows a reaction after the drop in price and the better demand for export promises a stronger market. The same is true of cheese but in a lesser degree. The egg market is dull and prices are weak with an increase in receipts. There is no change in lard. The fish market is steady with only a fair demand.

BUTTER MARKET STRONGER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—Following the easier prices on butter came an improved demand for export and a reaction in the market. There is now a strong feeling and local dealers express the opinion that prices are due to advance this week.

TORONTO MARKETS

TORONTO, August 16.—Changes of any interest are few in the produce markets as far as Ontario is concerned this week. Markets are for the most part steady and inclined to be quiet. Butter and cheese are both ruling at easy prices, and the movement of the same is only moderate. The situation in the live hog market is inclined to be easier with a like tendency in both fresh and smoked meats. Another spell of warm weather has stimulated the demand for cooked meats and the market for them is firm. Poultry is very quiet, but there is a good steady movement of fish.

"Me?" said Bill in astonishment. "Why I thought you was drivin'."

Better at Arithmetic than Music

A teacher of music in a public school was trying to impress upon her pupils the meaning of f and ff in a song that they were about to learn. After explaining the first sign, she said, "Now children, what do you say; if f means forte, what does ff mean?"

"Eighty!" shouted one enthusiastic pupil.—Youth's Companion.

HIAWATHA

The name "Hiawatha" on a tin of apples means it contains only sound, selected fruit from the great orchards of Nova Scotia. We take special care in packing. This is indicated by the favor Hiawatha Brand gallon apples have met with in the critical Old Country market.

Pure Cider Vinegar

The same careful attention is given the manufacture of our high standard Pure Cider Vinegar. No fruit that has a blemish is used—only clean, sound apples are permitted to go through the cider mill. These two products will be found good money-makers by the Canadian grocery trade.

World's Walnut Crop is Large

With a large production of Sorrento walnuts in sight the foreign markets, as well as domestic buyers, are slow to place business at primary points says a recent report. A letter from the heart of the Sorrento section says that the market is weak with very little buying. The crop is estimated at 250,000 bags, which is larger than the 1921 yield but quality will be fine. France's walnut crop is said to be the largest in history and three times the output of 1921 is anticipated. California also will produce a big tonnage.

To Holders of Five-Year 5½ per cent. Canada's Victory Bonds

Issued in 1917 and Maturing 1st December, 1922

CONVERSION PROPOSALS

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers to holders of these bonds who desire to continue their investment in Dominion of Canada securities the privilege of exchanging the maturing bonds for new bonds bearing 5½ per cent. interest, payable half yearly, of either of the following classes:—

(a) Five year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1927.

(b) Ten year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1932.

While the maturing bonds will carry interest to 1st December, 1922, the new bonds will commence to earn interest from 1st November, 1922, GIVING A BONUS OF A FULL MONTH'S INTEREST TO THOSE AVAILING THEMSELVES OF THE CONVERSION PRIVILEGE.

This offer is made to holders of the maturing bonds and is not open to other investors. The bonds to be issued under this proposal will be substantially of the same character as those which are maturing, except that the exemption from taxation does not apply to the new issue.

Holders of the maturing bonds who wish to avail themselves of this conversion privilege should take their bonds AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE, BUT NOT LATER THAN SEPTEMBER 30th, to a Branch of any Chartered Bank in Canada and receive in exchange an official receipt for the bonds surrendered, containing an undertaking to deliver the corresponding bonds of the new issue.

Holders of maturing fully registered bonds, interest payable by cheque from Ottawa, will receive their December 1 interest cheque as usual. Holders of coupon bonds will detach and retain the last unmatured coupon before surrendering the bond itself for conversion purposes.

The surrendered bonds will be forwarded by banks to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa, where they will be exchanged for bonds of the new issue, in fully registered, or coupon registered or coupon bearer form carrying interest payable 1st May and 1st November of each year of the duration of the loan, the first interest payment accruing and payable 1st May, 1923. Bonds of the new issue will be sent to the banks for delivery immediately after the receipt of the surrendered bonds.

The bonds of the maturing issue which are not converted under this proposal will be paid off in cash on the 1st December, 1922.

Dated at Ottawa, 8th August, 1922.

W. S. FIELDING,
Minister of Finance.

MACDONALD'S

The Tobacco with a heart

The Meaning of Tobacco VALUE

The reason why Macdonald's Tobacco is so overwhelmingly preferred by Canadian smokers is the same reason why it proves so attractive to the retailer. That reason is VALUE.

Value, to the smoker, means "More Tobacco for His Money"—to the retailer "More Money from His Tobacco." There really is more money in Macdonald's for the man who sells it—largely because there is more tobacco in Macdonald's for the man who buys it.

Ads that will not be ignored are insisting that you stock up on "The Tobacco with a Heart."

Write a Keepsweet Ad and Win a Cash Prize

Here is an unusually interesting opportunity of winning a cash prize. You simply write an advertisement for Keepsweet Table Cream, an ad that you think will appeal to grocers and general storekeepers. A real good ad to the trade. They must be real selling ads, that is backed up by an idea that will compel merchants to place an order for Keepsweet Table Cream. As some of the world's most famous ads have been written by merchants, we look to you for some humdingers in this prize contest.

How to Win a Prize

Only bona fide grocers or storekeepers handling Keepsweet Cream, can enter this contest. Each advertisement must not contain more than 150 words. A "lay-out" diagram or rough plan of the advertisement must accompany the "copy," or material. Make your lay-out 7 inches wide by 10 inches deep. Do not copy phrases from previous Keepsweet ads. Use your own words to express yourself. Send as many ads as you like. Write on one side of paper only. Use ink. Rough lay-out may be in pencil. We reserve the right to use any advertisement received. None will be returned. The prize winners will be selected by a group of advertising experts. The contest closes September 30th.

Splendid Repeat Proposition

Keepsweet Cream and Keepsweet Milk are the sensations of the year in the grocery world. Hundreds upon hundreds of the finest Canadian houses are selling immense quantities of these products. Keepsweet Cream is a splendid repeat proposition—one of the finest ever marketed through the grocery and general store trade.

CANADIAN GROCER

Vol. XXXVI TORONTO, AUGUST 25, 1922 No. 34

Pays Too Many Taxes out of his Profits

Sales Tax, Stamp Tax on Drafts, Cheques and Receipts Come Out of the Merchant's Profits, Says Subscriber—Present Plan of Taxation is Wrong, He Claims, and Should Be Abolished in Favor of Say, Five, Ten or Twenty Per Cent. Sales Tax, Levied at the Source

A SUBSCRIBER writing to Canadian Grocer discusses the various forms of taxation that the retailer is up against, with the increase in the sales tax, the raising of the stamp tax on all drafts and bank cheques, and the proposed tax on all receipts of ten dollars and over, the latter to become effective on January first next. This merchant in his comments, states that the retailer pays out of his profits a sales tax of two and a quarter per cent. or four and a half per cent. according to his method of buying. He also is obliged to pay from his profits a stamp tax of four cents on a cheque for $51 and for larger cheques in the same proportion, a stamp tax of 8 cents when renewing a note for $51 and for larger amounts in the same proportion, and after the first of January next the retailer will have to pay out of his profits a stamp tax of two cents on all receipts of ten dollars and over.

"Why shouldn't there be an Excise Tax or Sales Tax of five, ten or twenty per cent., collected at the source or from the manufacturer, instead of stamp taxes and sales taxes, which come out of the pocket of the merchant?" this subscriber goes on to ask. What the country needs, he suggests, is indirect taxation. "Sufficient money should have been borrowed," he adds, "to keep the country going, and in the meantime the government should have gone from coast to coast, consulting with the business interests. A tariff then could have been drafted that would be acceptable to all interests."

An Annoying Taxation

In line with the opinions expressed by this merchant in regard to present government regulations re stamp taxation, is the resolution that was passed the week before last, at the annual convention in Halifax, of the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association. At this gathering it was moved by J. A. Bently and W. D. Hopgood, both of Halifax, that whereas it is the opinion of this convention, that the placing of stamps on all receipts of ten dollars and over, for the purpose of raising revenue by the government, is an unnecessary and annoying taxation arrangement, and one that will not result in accomplishing the object proposed, it is recommended that the stamp tax on receipts, drafts and bank cheques, etc., be abolished, and if need be, to produce the amount required by the government, the sales tax be increased to cover this amount, and that a recommendation be forwarded to the officers of the Dominion executive council, asking them to study this question and secure all necessary information, and to take up this matter with the government and endeavor to have the wishes of the association in this regard complied with.

Certain manufacturers and wholesalers are inclined to pass on to the retailers the cost of stamps affixed to drafts for collection of accounts from retailers. The stand taken by them is that if the retailer pays his account by cheque he assumes the cost of the stamp tax, whereas if the same account is settled by draft the drawer must pay the cost of the stamps. Under the new regulations this stamp tax assumes large proportions where a considerable number of drafts are taken into consideration. Further, this tax is likely to pyramid if the present practice of presenting drafts two or three times before acceptance, is followed. Then again the presentation of a draft for the full amount of a debt is frequently followed by the retailer subsequently sending in a cheque for part payment. This process may be repeated several times before the account is finally settled in full and an examination will reveal the fact that the process has involved the use of three or four times the required value of tax stamps.

A. C. Pyke, secretary of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, stated that he had not heard of any wholesaler in the grocery trade who was passing on this stamp tax on drafts to the retailer, nor had he heard of any manufacturer who is doing so. His association had not discussed this question.

On the other hand, retailers have not an opportunity of passing this added expense on to customers as well as have manufacturers or wholesalers who can add it into the price of the goods as an overhead expense. This is one of the recognized expenses of doing business known as "collection costs" and each branch of trade is subject to such expenses, in the ordinary course of trade, the retailer included. The majority of drafts are used to encourage collection before the expiry date of the terms under which the order is sold, and as such the drawer of the draft is the beneficiary and should pay any expenses involved. As to the charge of encouraging lax methods retailers answer that manufacturers and wholesalers have encouraged this by the prolific use of drafts. There are said to be more drafts used in proportion in Canada than in any other country. There is the likelihood of error in making out drafts and as this is beyond the control of the retailer he should not bear any expense in connection with their issuance.

Will Vigorously Oppose

Henry Watters, treasurer of the Dominion Board, Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, when asked what steps were being taken to protect the retailers' interests in the matter said: "While we have had considerable discussion on various taxation matters at our several conventions and conferences lately, this phase of the question has not been considered. But if the agitation on the part of the manufacturers and wholesalers gains any headway, it will be vigorously opposed by the R. M. A. on behalf of all retailers.

Sugar Prices are Being Cut But Refiners' Quotations are Unchanged

Market is Inclined to be Unsettled and Spot Stocks Are Being Liquidated at Lower Figures Than Refiners' Quotations Warrant

MONTREAL, Aug. 23, (Special)—Uneasiness is felt in the sugar market and spot stocks are being liquidated seemingly without any justification in primary markets. Raw sugars stand firm at 3.75 cents c. & f. New York and refiners here state that their market is steady with a strong tone and that there is no justification for the cutting that is going on.

This month and next should bring a good demand for sugar, particularly since the fruit prices are low but instead of the retail trade taking advantage of the advance in the price since many of them made their purchases, the stocks are being sacrificed. Not only are the retailers suspicious of the market but the public is too.

Wholesalers Cutting

Local wholesalers are cutting the price in order to unload their holdings, whether from a need of the money or a fear of developments. The result is that although the refiners price is $7.50 a hundred, wholesalers are selling at from $7.05 to $7.25 and in few cases is the list price adhered to. The fever has spread to the retail trade and they in turn are cutting and a price of 10 pounds for 69c is common. Retailers who have bought sugar in fairly large quantities as a speculation in the past are caught by the cutting and they are either losing the trade or the money which they hoped to make on their investment.

Public are Suspicious

In turn the public has noticed that there is a downward trend to sugar prices and are quick to come to conclusions. Grocers state that in many cases women have postponed their preserving expecting a still lower price. This has hurt the whole trade and from the retailers view point the cutting in sugar could not have come at a worse time that the present.

Brazilian Government Holds Coffee Supplies In Attempt To Force Prices Higher

This Condition Has Resulted in Buyers Seeking Other Markets From Which to Purchase—West Indies, Columbia, Mexico and Venezuela Now Supplying Canada and the United States

MONTREAL, Aug. 23 (Special).—Misleading conditions in the coffee market have developed through the attempt on the part of the Brazil government to force coffee values higher, according to local dealers and roasters and the United States Department of Commerce.

Contrary to reports, the visible supply of coffee is quite ample to cover the next year's demand. The Brazilian government is now holding 4,000,000 bags of coffee in order to force the price upwards. Evidently their calculations have gone astray, for roasters and buyers in Canada and the United States have gone elsewhere for their supplies and found them. Then too, other coffee producing countries have taken the opportunity to increase their production in order to meet the demand.

Imports From Mexico

The most notable increase has come in Mexico where coffee growing had become a backward industry. The West Indies have also stimulated their production and many Canadian buyers are now patronizing that market. Venezuela too is making a big bid for the trade and is sending agents through all the markets. Proof that Brazil is losing hold on the market is that this year only 12,000 bags of coffee have been shipped while last year they shipped 23,000 bags.

Prices About Steady

Local dealers express the opinion that the market will remain about steady unless Brazil suddenly dumps the supply she is holding on to the market. Then a slump might be expected. As it is the visible supply, without the 4,000,000 bags, is quite sufficient to meet the world's demand for the next year, according to local authorities.

"Our opinion is that all this taxation should be paid by the manufacturer or wholesaler and then passed on as an item of overhead cost. We certainly will not stand for any effort to make the retailer shoulder the cost of issuing drafts. We will oppose the movement just as energetically as we oppose the imposition of the sales tax on the retailer. The manufacturer and the wholesaler should very well consider the desirability of absorbing all sales taxes and passing them along as an item of cost of manufacture and sale, just as other costs are passed on. Thus the retailer is afforded an opportunity of passing the cost on to the consumer, which he would not otherwise have."

Canadian Grocer will welcome expressions of opinion from other retailers in regard to this question of passing on the stamp tax on drafts to the retailer.

Merchants Must Know the Various Vinegar Standards

In view of the prosecutions that have been made against grocers, for infractions of the Food and Drug Act, as it pertains to vinegar, it is well that grocers should know the various standards so that they can conform with them. They are as follows:

Vinegar shall not contain less than 3.5 per cent., and not more than 10.5 per cent. of acetic acid.

Wine vinegar is vinegar made by the alcoholic and subsequent acetuous fermentation of the juice of grapes.

Spirit Vinegar, Alcohol Vinegar, Grain Vinegar, is vinegar made by the acetuous fermentation of dilute distilled alcohol.

Malt Vinegar is vinegar made by the alcoholic and subsequent acetuous fermentation, without distillation, of an infusion of malt, with or without the addition of other cereals. It is dextrorotatory and contains in 100 cubic centimetres not less than 1.8 grammes of solids, and not less than .2 grammes of ash.

Cider Vinegar, Apple Vinegar, is made by the alcoholic and subsequent acetuous fermentation of the juice of apples. It is laevo-rotatory, and contains in 100 cubic centimetres not less than 1.6 grammes of apple solids, of which not more than 50 per cent. is reducing sugars; and not less than .25 grammes of apple ash. The water soluble ash from 100 cubic centimetres contains not less than 10 milligrammes of phosphoric acid, and requires not less than 30 cubic centimetres of decinormal acid to neutralize its alkalinity, 100 cubic centimetres of the vinegar contains not less than .15 grammes of glycerine.

Blended Vinegar is made by mixing two or more of the above varieties of vinegar, and the word blend should be as large as the other names of vinegar.

Concentrated Vinegar, Vinegar Essence, is a liquid containing more than 10.5 per cent. of acetic acid, whose acetic acid is entirely the product of the acetuous fermentation of alcohol.

A CORRECTION

The Liebig's extract of meat, mentioned in a recent item published in Canadian Grocer, referring to the fact that the Baker Mercier Co., Toronto, had been appointed Canadian agents for Liebig's extract of meat, is that manufactured by Tooth's Extract of Meat Co.

Another "Candy Day" in October

Merchants Will Have Special Opportunity on October 5 to Boost the Sale of Candy—All Canada Will Co-operate With Strong Committee in Charge

CANDY DAY for 1922 is announced for October 5. It will be remembered the success that attended last year's Candy Day, and more merchants than ever should seize this opportunity to increase their sales of candy on this occasion. The number of grocers who are adding high-grade chocolates and confectionery to their stocks is on the increase, these retailers realizing that in these goods, there is ample scope to stimulate profits. Like Easter, Christmas, Mother's Day, and Thanksgiving, Candy Day offers a special opportunity to the dealers to specialize in the sale of candy on this particular Saturday in October.

By making special window displays, store and counter displays, by advertising, and suggesting candy to one's customers, the grocer will find a source of revenue, that is decidedly profitable. Candy Day is to become an established fact, and like other special occasions, will in future be looked forward to by the public throughout the Dominion.

The committee in charge of Candy Day is as follows:—

Chairman, W. H. C. McEachern; General Financial Committee, H. N. Cowan, of the Cowan Co., Ltd.; Morden Neilson, of William Neilson Co., Ltd.; Wm. Robertson, of Robertson Bros.; Ed. Littler, of The Lowney Co., Ltd.; J. D. McFarland, of D. S. Perrin Co., Ltd.; A. D. Ganong, of Ganong Bros., Ltd.; Mr. Buchanan, of Willard's Chocolates, Ltd.; Frank O'Connor, of Laura Secord Confections, Ltd.; Harry Hunt, of Hunts, Ltd.; J. H. Tabor of Tabor Candy Co., Ltd.; and J. S. Ramsay, of Ramsay Bros. Co.

Publicity: R. P. Smith, W. P. Gregory and D. E. MacVannel. Provincial chairmen: Jas. S . Ramsay, British Columbia; H. J. Tabor, Alberta; C. C. Wardrope, Manitoba and Sask.; E. L. Buchanan, Ontario; Harry Hunt, Central, Toronto; E. Littler, Quebec; A. MacKenzie, New Brunswick; C. Monaghan, N. S. and P. E. I.

MAGISTRATE SAYS THEY ARE NOT MANUFACTURERS

Kitchener, Ont., August 23.—A decision of interest was handed out in Police Court last week when Magistrate Weir dismissed the cases against two local confectioners who had been summoned to appear for operating without having taken out manufacturers' licenses. The magistrate decided that the firms concerned, both confectioners manufacturing for sale in their own establishments only, were not manufacturers within the scope of the law.

This merchant reports heavy sales of candy and believes that displays of confections such as are here shown greatly stimulate turnover.

A Co-operative Plan that Really Works

How a Hundred Grocers Are Banded Together to Assist Each Other — Cost of Working Plan is Paid in Service — Helps the Manufacturer to Dispose Of His Goods

THEORETICALLY co-operation would be a solution of many difficulties which beset the grocer in conducting his business. Actually however, when put to work something so often goes wrong that in the majority of cases the scheme has to be abandoned. The story therefore of a co-operative plan which has been working successfully for over six years will be well worth the attention of the grocer who is willing to work in harmony with his fellow merchants to their mutual benefit.

As told in "Success" by Harold Cary, the plan is one which was originally conceived with the idea of helping more especially those grocers in a city who were not actually in close competition with each other, but provided merchants are imbued with the broad-minded idea of living and letting live, there is no reason why its benefits should not be enjoyed equally by two grocers in the same street as by two who are located at opposite ends of the city.

Back in 1915 C. M. Wessels, a salesman, salesmanager and advertising man, suffered from a queer pain. Every time he looked in a grocer's window and saw the hit-or-miss bunch of packages and fly-covered fly paper, or tried to buy a new but advertised grocery product in one of these stores, this pain bothered him. It was a mental pain that grocery merchandizing in some of these obvious ways could be so bad. He knew that it was just this sort of thing which made the purchase of groceries a "convenience" rather than a "selective" purchase on the part of the consumer. He realized that a grocery store could be made more efficient, more valued in the community and more profitable if a lot of the little things about selling could be taken care of for the grocer who is too busy to do them adequately himself. He studied the idea of making the grocery store more important and more attractive, so that the question of where you bought your food products would not be decided by the number of blocks between you and the store but by the efficiency of the store. Could not some scheme to take care of window dressing, sign writing, advertising and other important needs of the individual store be taken care of co-operatively? Could not some scheme to the benefit of the manufacturer be worked out so that the grocery store having such service for itself would in turn be giving a service to the manufacturer?

First They Had Dinner

In August, 1916, he invited twenty grocers from various parts of the city to have dinner with him at one of the hotels. After dinner he got up and began telling these men some facts which he had observed about their business. He was not afraid to mention fly-specks and stocks of goods on their shelves that they were unable to sell. He told them why they rarely if ever attended the meetings of their association which was organized to help them all in their efforts to be better business men. He pointed out that these meetings were meetings of competitors. Every retailers' association is so made up. John Smith won't tell Jones from across the street about his troubles in open meeting. It might give Jones an advantage over him in trade. It would be to no purpose for the two to get together and hire a window dresser because that would neutralize the effect and merely increase the cost of doing business.

But if John Jones of the First Ward and Smith of the Tenth, on opposite sides of the city, have a window dresser between them they will both benefit because they are not competitors. It is on this basis that co-operation between tradesmen of the same kind of business can exist. Because he is a good salesman Wessels had little difficulty in showing these twenty grocers, none of them competitors of each other, what could be done if they would all get together.

Then he told them about his idea of helping the manufacturer. He said that they could all pay for the co-operative service which they had been discussing or else they could pay in service instead of in cash. This service would be merely the stocking of an occasional new product or a well-known and standard old one and giving it a place of prominence in the store to see whether or not it would sell. He pointed out that manufacturers would be willing to pay for such service. It costs a lot of money to go around selling new products to grocers, and if a manufacturer could be shown how this group would be sold as a unit in perhaps carload lots he would be willing to pay for the service and still come out way ahead on the deal.

Talking Out in Meeting

The grocers all thought this was a stunning idea—service for service They agreed. In a few months there were a hundred non-competitive grocers as members of the co-operators of Philadelphia.

It was fascinating to see this little plan work from the start and it is even more fascinating to realize that it has gone ahead providing service without difficulties, improving the business of its members, lowering overhead, raising profits and giving better service to the grocers' customers.

Twice a month they meet in their own club room for one purpose or another. These men attend almost en masse every time. In spite of their own long store hours they come early and stay late. They stand right up in meeting and tell their own difficulties of running their own stores, without shame and with only pardonable pride. You can be sure there is no boasting to speak of, because they want help, know they can get it and have nothing to be afraid of.

They discuss prices, not only to the consumer but from the wholesale house and the manufacturer. If one of them has had a bad check passed he is quick to describe the system the crook used as well as what he looked like. One member will stand up and say that he sold bones, fat and suet last week at 5, 15 and 18 cents respectively, and ask what the others got. Some got more and some less. They quickly learn who is paying the best price for these waste

THINGS THAT SPELL SUCCESS OF THIS ORGANIZATION

These are some of the things which make this organization helpful to the grocer, as related by one member.

An experienced staff of advertising men to guide us in preparing and issuing our publicity.

Experienced sign writers. The right kind of signs are of the greatest importance to retail grocers.

Experienced window dressers to tend to this important thing for us.

Taking unsaleable goods off our hands and helping us to dispose of them.

Protecting our credits. I personally subscribed to a commercial agency and gave a great deal of time to this department. The result was that on a business of $1,800,000 in the past three years, I have lost only five hundred and forty dollars. My system was adopted by the Co-operators so that all the other members can use it without cost.

Speakers who address us at our club on meeting nights and give us information of the greatest importance to us.

We have an attorney at our disposal whom it would be a hardship to retain individually.

We buy, through the Co-operators, accident, liability, hold-up and other types of insurance in a group, saving fifty per cent.

We have picnics, parties and other social features for ourselves and our families.

products and the next week they all do better and the firm which is doing the buying gets the credit and the stuff which it deserves. In addition to the round-table discussion at each of these meetings a speaker talks on some phase of the grocery business and often one of the manufacturers whose products are being handled by the co-operators gives a little talk about his goods.

As a supplement to this general meeting the clerks of these grocers have a Co-operators' Club which meets for instruction and recreation twice a month. Attendance is insured by giving prizes each month. At these meetings the clerks are taught how to sell and how to keep store and given lessons in accounting, price slip making and in many other branches of store practice.

The Service Car Lady

For instance when the window dresser comes around with a supply of display materials and begins to clean out his windows and to install a well-designed, sales-pulling setting, with cards and pictures to draw the crowds, Mr. Somewhat Indifferent Grocer cannot help but benefit and to feel grateful. He is getting something for nothing by the only means known which will work over a long period of time: co-operation.

The service car which is maintained by the organization is in charge of a progressive woman who knows the grocery business thoroughly. She spends all her time driving to the various stores and finding out things about them which the owner may not have realized were important. She also takes orders for price tickets and window cards to be made by the sign writer.

From these little things the Co-operators have progressed to the matter of advertising. There is a certain moment when it is time to can strawberries and still another when raspberries are cheapest. At that moment the grocer must buy in much larger quantities to meet the demand which will come to him the moment the housewives know that the time has come. If they fail to find out he is going to be most awfully stuck.

Among the Co-operators, before their association was formed it had been the custom of each one to have printed at least once a week a single sheet with the news of the store—prices and facts of interest to consumers. A weekly newspaper, called The Co-operators, is published. The first page has recipes and other household items. The back page carries advertisements paid for by manufacturers. The double page inside carries the advertising copy of the individual grocer. This copy is changed for each member. Only the two outside, or front and back pages, are the same. The grocer gets his advertising for nothing.

CROPS IN ALBERTA FAIR TO EXCELLENT

Calgary, Alta., Aug. 22.—Crops in Alberta this season will range from fair to excellent, the latter variety more prevalent in the southern part of the province. A fair average yield is predicted in most of the northern districts, where for some time it was feared there would be a partial, if not a complete, crop failure.

Wheat cutting in the south is under way in certain areas, with the probability that it will be general next week. Rye is practically all cut. The hay crop in the south is heavy, and it is estimated that there will be a considerable surplus after all needs of that section of Alberta are met.

Displaying Goods is of Paramount Importance in This Grocery

Silent salesmen for the display of candies are used in this store, it will be seen, as well as attractively arranged tables for showing other lines.

Vinegar and the Law

A NUMBER of prosecutions have recently been instituted against retail grocers throughout the Dominion of Canada, for selling blended cider vinegar for cider vinegar, the standards of which are defined in this issue. Carelessness or negligence of the infraction is undoubtedly the cause of issuing summonses under the Food and Drug Act.

The merchant can do a great deal to educate the consumer as to the different vinegars, and if a customer desires a certain vinegar, he should either give it to her, or, in the event of substituting something else, he should explain the fact to her, informing the customer exactly as to what she is receiving. There is no doubt about it, the consuming public does not know the various standards of vinegar, as now established, and it devolves upon the merchant to educate them.

An inspector under the Food and Drug Act recently informed the Canadian Grocer that, after careful investigation, he had found carelessness among retail grocers in conveying information of this kind to their patrons. The manufacturer brands on the end of the barrel in good large letters the kind of vinegar contained within the barrel for the benefit of the grocer, that he may know the kind being delivered to him is in conformity with the law.

There is a certain responsibility resting upon the grocer in this regard, and it is up to him to be well informed as to government standards.

More Attractive Stores

ATTAINING to a higher degree of efficiency, and a greater carefulness in making one's store attractive, appears to be the ambition of the merchant in the country these days as compared with a few years ago. Neat, clean stores seem to have replaced the former ill-kept and unadorned ones in the villages and country places. Nowadays many of these country businesses rival their fellow merchants in the larger towns, and by keeping abreast of the times, by way of improving their stores, they are holding trade that otherwise might go to nearby towns, or to the mail order houses. In other words business comes to those who make the proper bid for it, while those who are indifferent have a patronage in sympathy.

Going through the country one has been impressed with the number of up-to-the-minute stores that are to be found, stores with splendid fronts, excellent window displays and interiors, comparing, as has already been said, very favorably with many of the best equipped stores in much larger centres.

On the other hand there are still merchants who are indifferent to the sickly and unappetizing appearance that their stores present. Fruits and vegetables are displayed in a haphazard mass. The stock on display has the appearance of being run down in anticipation of selling out. A customer naturally forms the opinion that such stores are listlessly conducted, and would not be inclined to trade in such surroundings, except as a matter of necessity. A showcase that is more or less topsy turvey is unsightly.

The merchant who is going after business in the right way will always pay particular attention to this important matter, that of making his store attractive at all times.

Making Use of New Ideas

FROM REGINA, Sask., comes news of a merchant who has called on the public for suggestions. This is not done as frequently as should be the case. The public likes to know that its opinion is valuable and the man who seeks this opinion is sure to benefit. One of the best ways to increase sales and speed up turnover is to make use of every new idea or plan you can obtain that good judgment tells you is worth the time, effort, or money involved. It is no difficult matter to secure these new ideas if you make it a point to be on the look-out for them. Sometimes it is the most simple and least costly of plans that produces the best results. A merchant some months ago organized in his store what he terms an Idea Club. This plan is conducted in the nature of a monthly contest, and every employee of the store, from the lowest clerk to the department manager, takes some part in the activities of the club. Each employee is expected to submit as many ideas as possible every month. These are to be written out in as detailed a manner as necessary, and then turned over to the head of the firm. Out of the ideas submitted the merchant selects those that are best and most practical. These are then mimeographed and submitted to all the employees of the store, who act as the final judges in the contest each month. Each plan is briefly titled, and the employee is expected to select the five which he or she, as the case may be, considers the best. In this way the winners of the contest are decided and the five prizes are then distributed. Ideas from members of the sales force and customers are often valuable and should be sought always.

The Other Fellow's Angle

IF YOU WILL put on your hat and coat, go out and walk two blocks to your right, then to the rear march and pass your store, you will have the opportunity to see it as your customers and prospective customers see it.

That's worth while, occasionally. None of us looks enough at the business from the standpoint of the outsider. We see it from behind the stage and we are very likely to forget what counts is the way the show looks from the seats. Behind the stage we shift the scenes and we tear around putting on the show, while we ought, occasionally, to view the performance from the gallery.

And while you're out walking, look over the other fellow's place. It will pay you to know what he is doing.

What is Good Will Worth in Money?

Good Will of Any Business Is Equal to the Total Net Earnings for the Last Three Years—Important to Know on What Good Will Is Based

By HENRY JOHNSON, Jr.

THE QUESTION what should be paid for good will in any going business is brought up in a letter I have just received. This is from a young man who contemplates going into the grocery business in a town of 55,000 which has grown rapidly.

He plans to establish a chain of stores, for he says that a single store proposition would not interest him. He remarks on the apparent fear of many grocers that the chain stores will wipe them out, but he says: "My idea is to pursue the same policy as the large chain stores—a cash and carry proposition. By doing so, how am I going to be affected?

"I know a good location here," he continues, "that I thought of buying. The proprietor is not very active. Besides himself, he has one clerk and butcher. I believe it could be made a splendid establishment. I do not know what his business amounts to annually, as I do not want to approach him before knowing definitely what I shall do. Suppose he does $30,000, $40,000 or $50,000, what is the good will worth, and what would be the approximate price exclusive of stock and equipment?"

My answer covers this as fully as I can do it:

"Dear Sir:—Yours addressed to Canadian Grocer received. You seem to have studied and analyzed local conditions intelligently. That is the main thing because it is really impossible for me to advise whether you should enter the grocery business. It is the best business in the world if you succeed and the worst if you do not. Successes are made everywhere and so are failures. It depends on the man—not on the town.

"Your analysis of chains as compared with individual stores is perfectly sound. Chains are only aggregations of single stores and most depends on the organiz-telligently. That is the main thing be-Every day in every section, new chains spring up, beginning with one or two and extending to ten or twelve, or more, in anywhere from three to six years.

Good Will and Earnings

"Your principal question centers around the value of good will. The rule generally recognized by accountants and other authorities, I believe, is that the good will of any business is equal to the total net earnings for the last three years. This means absolute net earnings. If the owner of the store you have in mind has paid himself no salary, has charged himself no rent, has figured no depreciation or interest on investment, but has taken all earnings of every character, figured without these deductions, and regarded the total thus obtained as the net profits, you cannot afford to buy on any such basis.

"Net earnings, properly regarded, is what is left after all charges of all kinds are deducted and allowed for. So, in computing net earnings, you must be mighty careful to know what you are figuring on. And after you have those figures have the inventory taken carefully and buy just as closely as possible."

It is mighty important for any purchaser, where the question of good will is involved, to know on what it is based. A grocer might run a store for years and show by his books a net profit, say, $2,000 a year who yet might not only have made nothing but have been running behind.

Certain Charges Cannot be Avoided

Where a man owns his own building, works in his store himself and gets assistance from his wife or other member of his family, he is usually found to make no charges for any of those items or for rent. Naturally, too, any such thing as interest on investment is never thought of in such circumstances.

So a grocer who shows, with perfect sincerity in most cases, annual earnings of $2,000 may readily be entitled to include sundry charges which will wipe out all earnings—or worse. Taking rent, fair salary for himself and others, depreciation and interest, a total of $2,000 to $3,000 might easily be made, and such figures would then show either no earnings at all, or a deficit of from $500 to $1,000 a year.

It is for these reasons that the item of good will usually is disregarded when small businesses are bought and sold. Usually the hard stuff is all that is taken into account. In the case before us, the new man would simply inventory the stock, estimate the fixtures and make his deal on that basis. He would purchase purely on his estimate of the potentialities of the store and location under his own management—which might easily be something very different from what had gone before.

Clearly, this shows that good will is an intangible, elusive thing—unless it be very solidly established on the basis of previous performance, and it is worth while to remember that, when so established, the business is not usually available for purchase.

Why Reluctant to Consult Your Wholesalers

A west coast merchant writes that he has been in business something over two years, is not satisfied with his figures, wants facts and information so he can decide "whether to sell out or dig in." When he bought his store, in April 1920 he knew nothing of the biz—"did not even know how to read his scale." He includes figures from January to May inclusive.

These show that he has sold $10,245 of groceries and $5,035 of meat, total, $15,280, or at the rate of approximately $36,000 a year. His cost, including merchandise and all other outgo, runs $14,150, so his apparent earnings run $1,130, at rate of $2,700 a year, assuming stock has been maintained. That would show net profit of more than 7½ per cent. on sales. That is, this would be so had he charged all expenses, including his own salary—which does not seem to be so since he lists "personal" at $227.37 for cash and $150 for groceries. That is a total of only $377 for five months, around $65 per month, which seems little if that is all he has drawn.

Even so, if we allow a salary of $1,500 a year for himself and assume that all other items are properly included, also that the $377 may be disregarded, we shall still have $1,200 or 3 1-3 per cent. on sales.

May Have no Reason for Discouragement.

So I wrote him that, seeing how many old merchants had passed the last year or two with little or no net profits to show, perhaps he was unduly exercised. He said he was going to inventory again July 1st, so I suggested that he await the outcome of actual figures, and then write again. I suggested something else; that he consult with certain local wholesale grocers, and I named several whom I knew. This seems to me a course which, for some reason, seldom suggests itself to retailers, and I often wonder why. Your local jobber is familiar with conditions, knows, or should know, all about your affairs, and is in position to give you brass tacks help out of his experience.

But also his figures showed the following: He was paying his butcher $38, a woman clerk $18 and a delivery boy $15 per week. Assume that he himself is worth $30 to the business, here are wages of just about $5,000 a year or very nearly 14 per cent. on sales. That is fully four per cent. too high, really about five per cent. On top of that he was allowing his help seven per cent. discount on their purchases—which is to my mind a ruinous percentage and a demoralizing practice.

Discounts on Purchases Not Correctly Estimated

Discounts of this character are usually not estimated at their value by the re-

Guelph Grocers Enjoy Annual Outing

Retail Grocers' Association of Royal City Hold Picnic at Puslinch Lake, When Retailers Win From Wholesalers and Travellers in Keenly Contested Ball Game—Races Provide Much Merriment Too

GUELPH, Aug. 18 (Special).—"Better than any previous picnic held under the auspices of the Guelph Retail Grocers' Association," was the verdict expressed in relation to the annual event held on Wednesday of this week at Puslinch lake. There was a record attendance. Retail grocers, wholesale grocers, and representatives from various manufacturing and wholesale houses from out of town were present. Meeting at the Y. M. C. A., the trip to the lake was made in motors, and here everyone entered into the baseball match and the various races, with the greatest enthusiasm.

Retailers Win at Ball

The question of supremacy at softball, which has been a topic of much debate between the retail grocers and the wholesale men and travelers for several weeks past, was decided, when the retail men decisively defeated their opponents by a score of 6 to 3. In Scott and Benallick, the retailers had a nifty battery, and the former only allowed four scratchy hits in a six-inning game. The retail men also proved to be sluggers, and E. J. C. Walker, who essayed to do the twirling for the wealthier team, was touched upon for 14 clouts, which included a circuit smash by Roy Elsley, and a double by Archie Benallick.

In an effort to pull out the game the wholesalers and travelers used Howard Simpson, George Walker and Bert Hewer in the pinches, and they were a big improvement over the regulars. Lloyd Taylor, of the retailers, had the distinction of making the only error in the game, but being that he was captain of his team, he escaped getting a calling-down for it.

The only drawback to an interesting game was the work of the umps, Mark Dulmage, and at the finish a resolution was unanimously passed by both teams that never again will he be asked to officiate. At one stage of the proceedings, however, the umps gave a remarkable exhibition of dexterity, when he handled an ice cream cone, a California pear and a bottle of pop, and gave his decisions through a megaphone, all at the same time without wasting a bite of the food or a drop of the liquid. This was the only time he was applauded during the game.

Races Keenly Contested

The prizes were numerous and attractive. This fact made the competition in the various events decidedly keen. In fact some of the contestants resorted to all sorts of unfair means, in order to get a slice of the awards. They were foiled, however, on every occasion by the eagle-eyed judges, J. H. Simpson and G. Walker, ably assisted by A. J. Hewer and George Williams, and, as a result, every winner was a legitimate one. Because of their good work as judges, Mr. Simpson and Mr. Walker were allowed to go in the Mystery Race, where each contestant was given a spoon and an empty bag. He then had to go 50 yards to a sandpile, and fill the bag with exactly three pounds. Further credit was reflected on Mr. Simpson, when he was the only one to return with the exact amount, and he was awarded first money. J. C. Hadden, who is an ex-retailer and still remembers some of the tricks of the trade, was first home in this event, but was disqualified because his bag was eight ounces short. Mr. Walker made two trips to the sand pile before he had the exact amount, and for his perseverance he was awarded third prize, Sam Wiggins beating him home for second money by returning with a neatly-tied package that was only one ounce short. G. K. Readwin, an added starter, got fourth money, his package being 10 ounces overweight.

During the races the fact was brought out that there are some very fine athletes among the grocers, travelers and wholesalers. Special mention should be made of H. J. Chappel, Howard Todd, Roy Elsley and W. Thatcher, of Guelph, and J. Copeland and A. E. Robinson, of the travelers. A star athlete of former years, Charlie Hicks, failed to do very much this year, and many expressions of regret were heard that he is going back. Archie Groom took part in every event, and in some manner or other managed to get in the prize money on a couple of occasions. G. F. Bibby surprised everybody by getting fourth prize in the egg race. He won first prize at the dinner table, however, when he consumed eight cups of tea.

Committee in Charge

Dinner was served at 6.30 at tables on the hotel lawn, and after full justice had been done to a splendid repast, A. Benallick, president of the Retail Grocers' Association, extended a hearty welcome to the guests, and thanked them for their presence. Short addresses were also delivered by J. H. Simpson, G. Walker, R. Young, Hamilton; G. Williams and G. K. Readwin. During the dinner and at intervals during the afternoon music was supplied by Robinson's orchestra.

The committee in charge of the picnic was composed of, A. Benallick, chairman; E. J. Drake, secretary; G. K. Readwin, H. H. Todd, H. Chappel, L. Taylor, S. Tovell, C. C. Borden, F. Stout and S. E. Wiggins.

WHAT IS GOOD WILL WORTH IN MONEY

cipients. They are apt to think that "seven per cent. is not much"—but it is, as any thoughtful food merchant knows well enough. So I wrote him further as follows:

The papers you have sent me seem to indicate:

1—You are selling goods too cheap.

2—You are operating under too heavy expense, or

3—You are making more money than you think you are.

This last is not likely, because a man usually knows when he is making money. Still I have known cases where a merchant purchased too much stock, thereby keeping himself poor, and all he had to do was unload to show a profit. But never under any circumstances should you give a discount on groceries to your people. That is really an addition to the salary account which is already too high and seven per cent. is an awful discount to give on foods.

I told him to face the facts as they might be revealed by his inventory figures and then write to me again; but I have heard nothing further from him. I conclude, therefore, either that I cured him or that he is not satisfied with what I wrote on the basis of my limited information. It seemed the best I could do, however.

Canadian Section is Suggested at British Industries' Fair

London, Aug. 23.—The organizers of the British Industries Fair have asked the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in London to co-operate in the establishment of a Canadian section of next year's fair. This fair is conducted on a very large scale, and is attended by buyers from all parts of the world. The invitation to the Canadian Chamber is another step in the promotion of the inter-imperial trade to which men are more and more turning their minds in this country. Concentration on inter-imperial commerce is opposed by the British shipping interests, which aspire to carry all the world's goods, but is being championed in other powerful quarters.

The office and warehouse staffs of the T. H. Estabrooks Co. Ltd. held a picnic recently at Crystal Beach on the St. John River. A baseball game between the office and the warehouse men was played, followed by swimming, foot races, and dancing, the whole party returning in the evening to the city on the boat after a thoroughly enjoyable affair.

Potatoes grown on the farm of T. H. Estabrooks of St. John, N. B., at Belmont, Sunbury County, have been declared, by Dr. Wm. Stewart of Washington, representing the U. S. department of agriculture, and Dr. T. C. Johnston of Norfolk, Va., director of the Virginia experimental station, to be the finest they have seen. These experts looked particularly for disease among the plants, as they are seeking seed potatoes insisting upon inspecting the growing plants before selecting. Mr. Estabrooks has thirty acres under this exceptionally good crop. These potatoes are Green Mountains and Irish Cobblers, and have been free from disease within one-tenth of one per cent.

Retailers' Day At The Exhibition Is Next Wednesday

Retailers' Day at the Canadian National Exhibition is next Wednesday. The Retail Merchants' Association have sent out from their Toronto office, invitations to all their members to attend the big Fair on this day, and it is expected that the attendance will be very large. Manufacturers and the officials of the exhibition are co-operating to make this day one of the great features of the two weeks' Fair, and merchants contemplating coming to the exhibition will do well to so arrange their visit as to be present on Merchants' Day. The noon day luncheon given by the directors each day, will on this occasion be especially devoted to retail interests, and the speaker this year will be Henry Watters of Ottawa, treasurer of the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association.

President of the F. W. Fearman Co. Passes Away

Hamilton, Aug. 19.—The news of the death of Robt. C. Fearman, president of the F. W. Fearman Co., Ltd., which occurred here a few days ago, following an operation, was received with general regret. The late Mr. Fearman had been unwell for some time, and an operation was resorted to, in an effort to allay his trouble. He was 61 years of age, and all his life he had been a resident of Hamilton. On leaving college he became associated with his father who founded the F. W. Fearman business in 1854, and on the death of the latter, Robt. C. Fearman was appointed president.

The late Mr. Fearman was prominently identified with the Masonic order in Hamilton, being treasurer of Barton Lodge for a number of years, and also a member of the Scottish Rite. He was a member of the school board at one time, and afterwards chairman of the public library board. He is survived by his wife and five brothers.

Nova Scotia and P.E.I. Retailers Hold Convention

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Aug. 23.—The first annual meeting of the provincial Association of Retail Merchants of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, was held here last week. A large number of merchants from both provinces were in attendance. The opening address was delivered by the president, A. J. Reid, and addresses of welcome were given by Lieut. Gov. McKinnon on behalf of the province, and by Mayor R. H. Jenkins on behalf of the city. Addresses were also given by C. H. Chandler and E. M. Trowern.

In his report the secretary of the N. S. and P. E. Island Board, J. Cuthbertson Doyle says the decrease in membership has not been what some might have expected due to the serious conditions. The actual paid membership list last year was on the 31st of August, 1921, 918 members, and on July 31st, 1922, it was 768, showing a decrease of one hundred and fifty members, which speaks well for the confidence the retail trade has in the organization.

"As we grow in years we are growing in usefulness and importance," he continued. "I believe the Retail Class of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island are realizing more and more the importance of our organization which is reflected in the large amount of correspondence which we are called upon to answer on matters of vital importance to the retail trade. The amount of letters which have been sent out by our office here for the last eleven months has reached the large amount of 21,195. With the small staff we have in our office it would give you some idea of the large amount of work we are called upon to do. All correspondence receives prompt attention and our work is done in as efficient a way as possible and our system calls for the greatest possible confidence in our members. We have a monthly audit made of our books by a competent chartered accountant so that all receipts and disbursements are properly accounted for and reports made to our members which are verified. Our books are open for inspection to our members at any time. The present year has been one of the worst years the retail merchant class has been called upon to face, with the decline in the value of stock, the decline in buying as well as reducing over-head expenses in order that they might weather the squall."

Auto drives to points of interest including experimental farm, fox ranches, etc., and an afternoon at the north shore returning to Beech Grove Inn on Victoria Farm where dinner was served, speeches, instrumental and vocal music, etc., were features of the entertainment program.

Letters To The Editor

Saskatoon, Aug. 15, '22.

Editor Canadian Grocer:

Referring to the sales tax would you kindly give me the following information?

Is a retailer obliged to take out a manufacturer's license, who sells in his store home made candies, jams, marmalade, pastry or any other such articles, to the consumer?

Is a retailer obliged to keep a record of these sales?

When did this Act come into force?

Subscriber.

Editor's note.—At the present time you are obliged to take out a manufacturer's license of $2 if you are making candy for resale in your store. The Retail Merchants' Association is fighting this ruling of declaring a retailer who makes candy for sale in his own store, a manufacturer, and just recently had two test cases before the courts. In Kitchener, Ont., the magistrate dismissed the case against two confectioners who had been summonsed to appear for failing to take out a manufacturer's license. The magistrate found that the firms concerned were not manufacturers within the scope of the law. However in the meantime you are advised to take out the license, keep account of sales, but do not remit amount of tax to the government, until such time as a decision is reached. This act as amended became effective when the budget was brought down, May 24 last.

Is General-Manager of Piggly-Wiggly Co. of Canada

Montreal.—John G. Gowans has been appointed general-manager of the Piggly Wiggly Company of Canada with head office in the Merchant's Bank Building, St. James St., Montreal. Mr. Gowans, who has spent the last twenty years with the S. H. Knox and Woolworth Company, has had a wide experience in the management of the chain store system. He also has had experience in the grocery business, for some years ago he owned his own business in Toronto. He is a Canadian and was educated in Toronto, where his residence is at present although he came from Buffalo to Montreal.

Mr. Gowans tells of his experience with the S. H. Knox 5, 10 and 15 cent stores while they grew from 55 stores to the present chain of 1,100, known as the Woolworth stores. The Piggly Wiggly Co. is now operating two stores in Montreal but hope to have several new stores opened in the next few months.

Kingston Grocers And Butchers Hold Successful Picnic

Kingston, Aug. 23.—The annual picnic of the grocers and butchers of this city was held here on Wednesday last. The Fair Grounds, where the big event was held, was thronged throughout the afternoon with crowds of people who were enjoying the many events.

The list of events included many amusing features such as the potato race, egg and spoon race and other well-known races such as accompany every picnic but some new ones were introduced such as the baking powder race which required that the runners pick up packages of baking powder on their way to the wire. This was a very funny event and caused many a laugh as did also the balloon race in which toy balloons had to be juggled along to the wire by the lady contestants in the race. The small boy had his fun in the bun-eating contest and the onlookers enjoyed the fun no less than he. The buns were spread on a railing and soaked in molasses. The boys were required to stand at the far end of the stand and when the signal was given, run and grab the bun allotted to him and run back to his original position and eat it as fast as he could.

A tug of war is a rather common affair at a picnic but not the kind that the grocers and butchers served up to the crowd yesterday afternoon. The grocers won but before they did they had one grand time pulling the hash artists over the line. The meat vendors hung on for dear life and almost had their opponents across the border to victory, but alas! the grocers had as their end man a heavy-weight of the strength of one Samson and he heaved and heaved until it seemed as though he pulled the whole butcher aggregation over the line himself. It certainly was one exciting tug of war.

The Kingston Gentlemen's Driving and Matinee Club co-operated with the Grocers' and Butchers' Association for the day and put on a very fine program of races that was keenly enjoyed by all at the grounds.

The officials for the day are to be congratulated upon the manner in which they fulfilled their various duties. The starters, judges, etc., in the races were on their jobs all the time and kept things going, thus contributing largely to the success of the picnic. The officers were: President, J. Stuart Crawford; Treasurer, J. M. Gordon; Secretary, J. Cullen; Manager, W. H. Dalby; Assistant-Manager, J. Marshall.

Gordon Aird, managing director of D. M. & G. A. Aird Co. Ltd., bakers, of Montreal, was married on Tuesday of this week.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

THE sugar market does not present any new features as compared with a week ago. The situation is still unsettled, and while refiners' quotations are unchanged on the basis of $7.50, Montreal, it is reported that there is considerable selling under this figure. The market for refined sugar appears to be somewhat demoralized across the line, and transactions from second hands are reported at $6.80, less 2 per cent., as against refiners' prices of $7. to $7.10. The raw market is strong, and there does not appear to be any particular reason for the cutting of prices on spot, that is taking place.

The canned goods market is fairly active. Lower prices are again quoted on standard peas. Other brands are unchanged. New prices are quoted on canned cherries, pineapple, strawberries and raspberries. Wholesalers are quoting the new crop seedless raisins to arrive November first. Prices are a little lower than last year. New Grecian currants will cost around 14c per lb. They are due to arrive about the last of October. The coffee market is strong. Teas continue their upward trend, and a strong market is reported on practically all grades. The market for spices is active, the preserving and pickling season stimulating the demand. Rice is quiet. Cereals are inclined to be easier, and package goods are unchanged. Fruits and vegetables particularly of the domestic kind, continue to arrive freely at the various market centres, and prices are lower, with the demand active.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Aug. 24.—The grocery market as a whole shows much more activity and interest. Retailers report better business in the last few weeks and all are looking forward to a good fall and winter. Sugar, that has stood firm in the last few months and has enjoyed much activity, is beginning to show weakness starting from the outside and working in. The refiners are standing firm, apparently, and primary markets are steady but both in the United States and Canada holders are liquidating stocks of refined sugar and prices are cut. Wholesalers are doing the cutting here. Canned goods are quiet and higher prices on pink salmon and on sardines are expected. The new pack of red raspberries will be higher in price but blue berries will be lower. Nuts and dried fruits are more active with lower prices ahead in many lines. Coffee is dull but there are interesting features to the market. Japan teas are strong and black teas are firm. The cereal and rice markets are steady with only a limited demand.

DULLNESS IN COFFEE

Montreal.

COFFEE.—There is much difference of opinion as to the true condition of the coffee market. Those dealers trading solely with Brazil note a bullish feeling in the market, but others report a dullness, yet a steady tone. Brazil is attempting to create an artificial condition in the market which will boost prices, but so far this has been unsuccessful on account of the increased production of other coffee growing countries. As far as can be seen at present, prices will stand steady at present levels which are said to be a fair value.

CANNED FISH IS HIGHER

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—In general canned products of the soil are easier for the fall but canned fish, such as sardines, lobsters and salmon promise to be higher. A report from Norway dated Aug. 8 claims that the sardine harvest this season has been a total failure so far, and higher prices may be looked for. There is also a scarcity of pink salmon and some packers are not able to fill completely the orders they have on hand. The crop of blue berries in Quebec has been good but the pack is not as good as the crop might warrant, since canners state that there is a shortage of pickers and equipment for packing. Nevertheless prices have been reduced as compared with last year so that the retail price per can can be reduced 5c. a tin. The opening price on red raspberries is higher and in sympathy, the old pack has advanced 15c. a dozen.

EVAPORATED PEACHES HIGHER

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is an advance in evaporated peaches of 2 cents, making the price 23 cents per pound in twenty-five pound boxes. Raisins both from the East and from the West are lower in price and an easier feeling is noted in currants. Figs are also lower, but the prune market stands firm. Citron peel is higher in price and wholesalers are now quoting 55 cents per pound. On the other hand lemon and orange peel are easier and balance up the price in cut mixed peel.

UNEASINESS IN SUGAR

Montreal.

SUGAR.—While the nominal price on sugar remains unchanged and a firm tone is evident in primary markets and among the refiners, there is a weakness developing in the wholesale trade for which the wholesalers alone are responsible. Second-hand sugars are selling as low as $7.05 on this market and run as high as $7.25 a hundred, but there are few quotations higher than that. Consequently the retail trade feels suspicious of the market and everywhere one hears whisperings of lower prices on refined sugar, yet without any foundation in the refining trade. Grocers therefore, who have large stocks of sugar on hand are beginning to feel panicky and are anxious to liquidate stocks as quickly as possible. The result is that some sugar is now being retailed at ten pounds for 69 cents in this city.

MORE SPICE ACTIVITY

Montreal.

SPICES.—The tone of the primary market is irregular although there is no change in wholesale conditions. There is considerable absorption of spot stuff and in a quiet way grinders supplies are being cut down. In the initial stages peppers are a little easier. Red peppers also show the same easiness. Cloves are the most active of all and are getting scarce with an exceedingly strong tone reported in New York.

FRUITS IN ABUNDANT SUPPLY

Montreal.

FRUITS.—Apples, peaches, pears, plums and melons feature the local fruit market. Apples are very low in price this year and the initial high prices quoted a month ago have attracted particularly large quantities with the result that prices are running low and will likely go still lower. The only hope for the farmers and growers is that the public will create such a demand at the low level that it will be profitable to farmers to bring their crop to the market. Plums are running low in price and quotations fluctuate so rapidly that a stable price can hardly be quoted. Last week plums were selling as low as 40 and 50 cents a six-quart basket on this market. Peaches are very low in price but are expected to go still lower and there is a good demand. Many dealers were surprised to see a later supply of red cherries on the market at a lower price than has been quoted in the last three years. This is unusual for so late in the season. Montreal melons are in good supply, but prices run high from $16 to $18 per dozen.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Aug. 23.—The sugar market is in a more or less unsettled condition, although prices on spot show no change as compared with a week ago, the price being on the basis of $7.50 per cwt. Montreal basis. There is selling reported from second hands under this price. The tendency in the market for bulk cereals is towards lower levels and some wholesalers are quoting easier prices this week, on some lines. The package goods are firm and unchanged. There is an active inquiry, dealers state, for spices, the pickling and preserving season now being in full swing, stimulating the demand. Prices are at firm levels. Easier prices are ruling on standard peas this week, some dealers quoting them on the basis of $1.47½ per doz. The tea and coffee markets are very strong. Dried fruits are moderately active. Wholesale prices on new California raisins to arrive November first are quoted this week. Fruits and vegetables continue to arrive in plentiful supply and are quoted at fairly easy levels.

BEANS ARE UNCHANGED

Toronto.

BEANS—The market for beans is steady and unchanged, with wholesalers quoting Canadian hand-picked beans at $4.40 per bushel, number 1 lb. pickers being from $3.90 to $4. California limas are quoted at from 11 to 11½ cents per lb.

NEW RAISINS ARE EASIER

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS — Wholesalers are quoting new seedless raisins to arrive November first. 15-oz. pkgs. seedless are quoted at 15c. each. Thompson's bulk seedless in 25 lb. boxes are quoted at 14½c.; 11-oz. pkgs. are 11½c each. California sultanas in bulk, 25's are 13½c. Ten-box lots Thompson's seedless, also of California sultanas, are quoted a quarter cent per lb. less.

New Grecian currants are likely to cost laid down in Toronto 14 cents per lb. The average price last year was a little lower than 14 cents. Shipments are due to arrive about the last of October. Spot prices of dried fruits in wholesalers' hands are unchanged as compared with a year ago, and demand is moderately active.

PEANUTS VERY STRONG

Toronto.

NUTS—Price changes in the market for nuts this week are few. Peanuts are holding at firm prices and there does not appear to be any tendency towards lower levels. Unsweetened cocoanut, strip, this week is quoted slightly easier at 20c per lb. The sweetened is the same figure and the cocoanut shreds are 18c per lb. Crops of nuts, generally speaking, look very good, according to advices from primary markets, and while dealers here are not anticipating much lower prices, values should remain fairly easy.

SUGAR MARKET IS UNSETTLED

Toronto.

SUGAR—The market for raws is affected by the weakness in the option market on the sugar exchange. Septembers are quoted at 3.47c to 3.48c. This weakness has influenced the attitude of holders of sugar in store which were offered at 5.20c ex-store, and since sold at 5.15c for one lot of 16,000 bags of Cubas. Holders of Cubas for shipment were very unwilling to admit weakness, and for a time held out for the last previous basis of 3¾c c. & f. New York, equal to 5.36c duty paid. Since then, however, they seemed to have modified their ideas and are now offering second half August shipments at 3 11-16c equal to 5.30c duty paid.

A cable from the island reports scattered rains. Only 5 Centrals are in operation, 182 Centrals having been closed down to date. The market for refined sugar appears to be badly demoralized across the line. New business is practically nil, and the only transactions passing appear to be from second hands at 6.80c, less 2 per cent, as against refiners' prices of 7c to 7.10c. the higher figure being quoted by Atkins. Since then Federal has reduced its price to 6.75c to meet the competition from Arbuckle, who announced that they would sell at that figure, less 2 per cent.

In Canada there is little of interest. The price is still $7.50 per cwt., Montreal basis, but quite a little selling is reported from second hands below this price.

TEA PRICES ARE STRONG

Toronto.

TEAS — All reports point to very strong markets in teas. The situation is generally very strong. Information from Japan indicates that the second crop teas are nearly exhausted, and the demands for home consumption would take very large quantities of 3rd crop teas. There is still a scarcity of low grade Japan teas. Ceylons, Indias and Javas are all at high levels. Prices on spots are strong.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG.—Markets in grocery commodities are more or less without feature this week. The primary coffee market is dull and inactive and indications are that the present crop will not be up to expectations. Western packers have named prices on canned cherries and peas but it is the opinion of the trade that their quotations are too high to compete on the prairie provinces with Eastern quotations. Dried fruits are moving in moderate volume. Cereals are unchanged. The sugar market holds firm with no change in quotations. Some American companies have advanced their prices on molasses. Teas continue to show strength and the market in rice is also firm. There is a moderate demand for fruits and vegetables at lower quotations. Salt is in a strong position.

WESTERN PRICES ON CANNED GOODS

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—Opening prices have been named by Western packers on canned cherries and canned peas with the opinion of the trade in general that quotations are too high when compared with Eastern quotations. Reports from British Columbia state that the tomato pack is favorable. New prices have been named by Western packers on Canadian apricots and they are quoted at slightly lower levels than last year. The market in canned goods is steady under a moderate enquiry.

STRONG SALT MARKET

Winnipeg.

SALT.—Reports from salt concerns state that the market is in a strong position but they will not advance their prices unless they are absolutely forced to. Many are in a position that they cannot guarantee present prices as with the present fuel supplies only lasting for one month to six weeks it entirely depends on the strike and fuel situation. Under these conditions it would be well to anticipate future requirements.

ARE PLANNING TO HOLD WINNIPEG EXHIBITION AGAIN

Winnipeg, Aug. 23.—A movement for reviving the Winnipeg exhibition is now underway. In compliance with the wishes of the council of the board of trade, a special committee will discuss the matter with the civic finance committee. As the board of trade has gone on record as being unanimously in favor of re-establishment of the exhibition, it may be taken for granted that the movement will get a decided boost from the board's representative.

W. E. Milner, secretary and general manager of the board, has been collecting exhibition data for the past year and a half, and this will be placed at the disposal of the conference if required. "We will do all in our power to get the exhibition going again, believing as we do that it will be a splendid thing for the city," said Mr. Milner.

Says Proper Refrigeration Saves Money

Grocer in Grimsby, Ont., Has Had Installed a System of Cold Storage in His Place, That He Claims is an Economical Piece of Equipment—Also Has Meat Slicer That He Declares is Worth the Price of a Clerk to Him in the Summer

INSTALLING a system of refrigeration in which he has disposed of the use of ice, J. P. Robertson, grocer of Grimsby, Ont., declares that in the year and a half in which he has had it, he has saved money. "The fact that I can keep produce and perishable foods for such a long period, and then sell them in a perfectly wholesome state, has saved me a good deal," Mr. Robertson told a representative of Canadian Grocer recently. "When the berry season is at its height, a merchant very often has a few crates or possibly only boxes of berries left on Saturday night. Before I installed this system of refrigeration, I either had to take these berries home and use them, or let them spoil, whereas now they can be conveniently placed in cold storage, and sold the following week. I have kept fruit in that refrigerator for over a week and when I have taken it out, I had no difficulty in disposing of it at equally as good a price as that obtained for fresh stuff. It is a clean and sanitary method and we have had a great deal of satisfaction with it. It maintains a uniform degree of frost at all times."

Heavy Sales of Meats

Mr. Robertson does a very fine business in smoked and cooked meats, and particularly in the summer months. He caters to a large summer resort trade at Grimsby Beach, and while he states that this trade is not as good this summer as in other years, he has had a very fair business. These people are big buyers of smoked and cooked meats. "Last summer my account for these meats ran over three hundred dollars monthly," he remarked. "This year it has not been quite so heavy. The condition of the road through here has been such as to divert traffic in another way, and there has not been the number of people who otherwise would come this way. Consequently I have lost some of my good summer trade."

Saves the Price of a Clerk

While it has not been so heavy as previously, sales of cooked ham in this store average about one ham a day in the summer, and in the extreme hot weather sometimes there are two and three hams cut up. A slicer is situated on one end of the provision counter. This counter is situated just in front of the large refrigerator, and is set apart from the regular counter for groceries. "That slicer saves me the price of a clerk in the summer," Mr. Robertson remarked when commenting on the value of a meat slicer. "We could not get along without it in our business. I have had that one for a long time, and it has never given any trouble."

Only One Brand of Bacon

Only one brand of bacon and cooked ham is carried in this store. Mr. Robertson believes in choosing a good bacon of reputable quality and concentrating selling effort on it. That is what he has done, and he declares that in a large measure this fact is responsible for his big turnover in these lines. "I think the bacon I am stocking is the best that can be bought, and I never have any complaints in regard to the same. I believe in aiming to handle only top quality goods whether it be bacon or general grocery commodities. I buy only the best and I have built up a reputation for quality that is constantly bringing business to my store."

Speaking of the competition of chain and cash and carry stores, Mr. Robertson did not think that the presence of a couple of this class of store had affected his business to any extent. His customers wanted the service of credit and delivery, and were not attracted sufficiently by the lower prices of the cash and carry stores to give up the convenience and advantages of the service grocery.

Two U. S. Packers Plan Big Merger of Their Concerns

Chicago, Aug. 22.—It is learned here that Armour & Co. and Wilson & Co., packers, would merge as soon as the legal differences surrounding such a deal could be surmounted. One of the provisions of the merger will be the assumption of the Presidency of the new firm, which will be known as Armour & Co., by Thomas E. Wilson, present head of Wilson & Co. He will succeed J. Ogden Armour, who will become Chairman of the Board of Directors.

The differences confronting the proposed merger centre around a mass of Federal laws. In addition to these laws, the attorneys working on the merger are confronted with an agreement signed by the five big packers in which they pledge themselves never to effect a combine. In addition to this, the two companies must obtain the consent of the Secretary of Agriculture to the merger. It is said Mr. Armour wished to absorb Wilson & Co. principally to obtain the services of Mr. Wilson as President of the company.

WANT TREATY RATIFIED

Seattle, Aug. 23.—A special to Washington says:

"Unless the senate will ratify the sockeye salmon treaty, affecting salmon native to the Frazer river, and unless it withdraws its standing objections to the halibut and lobster treaty, the Canadian and British governments will not enter into negotiations with the United States for a treaty of protection of salmon and other fish in the waters of the Pacific ocean beyond the three-mile limit. This in substance is the report which Secretary Hughes, of the department of state, has submitted to the senate. This report is in response to a senate resolution, introduced by Senator McNary, of Oregon, and adopted more than a year ago, asking the president to negotiate a treaty between the United States and Canada for the protection of salmon in the Pacific beyond the limits of the territorial waters of the two countries."

Retailers Are Not Profiteering In Fresh Meats In Spite of Accusations

Article in Daily Press on the Subject of "Peace Profiteering in Beef," Lays Blame at the Door of the Retail Butcher, But the Latter Has Something to Say in Reply

MONTREAL, Aug. 23. (Special).—According to an article published on "Peace Profiteering in Beef" by one of the local newspapers, "the retail butcher should conduct his business upon sound lines and not compel the luckless consumer to bear the burden of the merchant's incompetence and ignorance."

In this series of articles that revealed the story of beef marketing, the farmers, the cattlemen, the commission agents and the abattoirs all received a share of the blame for the evident wide margin between the price paid to the farmer for the cattle and the price paid by the consumer for the cuts of beef. But the retailer came in for the most severe criticism, as will be seen by the closing lines of the last paragraph of one of the articles, as noted above.

Farmers Are To Blame

The farmers share the blame, according to this article, in that they do not raise the right kind of cattle for the butcher and what they do raise is not taken care of or properly bred. In other words they take no interest in raising beef cattle and therefore western and Ontario cattle must be brought into Quebec increasing the cost by the heavy freight rates and because the west has practically control of the market. But in this instance the blame is shifted to the cattle brokers, for, it is said, they have so manipulated the market that the farmer even loses several cents a pound on the cattle between time of shipment and arrival at the abattoirs. This has so disheartened the cattle raiser that he has turned his attention in other directions. And so the blame is shifted from one to the other, until it is left at the door of the retail butcher and in its shifts it has lost nothing. Apparently a serious case of profiteering is set against the butcher, but perhaps the butcher has some evidence to give which may give a different aspect to the case.

Extravagant Distribution

A Canadian Grocer representative interviewed a number of retail butchers who had read with interest the articles mentioned above. Each butcher strongly denied the charge and willingly discussed the evidence laid against him. As one butcher said, "Things have not been very rosy in this business during the last year and do you think that if it were at all possible for one butcher among so many to cut the prices in order to compete more energetically for the trade in his district, he would not do so? I for one would if I thought that I had sufficient margin on which to do it and thereby get a bigger turnover.

No Economy In Marketing

"I think that that is proof that in the gross sales there is no profiteering. True enough there is apparently a wide margin between the price we pay for a side of beef and the price we sell the sirloin and other choice parts, but that is necessitated by the supply and demand."

Another retail butcher said, "The trouble is that every beef has four quarters. If they could breed cattle that had only hind quarters there would not be the apparent profiteering. In this district, for instance, I cannot sell a fore quarter. I must buy all hind quarters and to do that I must pay a higher price than I would if I were buying the whole side. I have tried hard to educate some of my customers to the fact that the fore quarter is good although the price

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Aug. 24.—The produce market is quiet with little feature of note except the advance in the price of butter which is well maintained. Cheese, however, is steady with no sign of a change. Eggs are unchanged but the supply is expected to drop off shortly. Hogs are steady at the lower level but beef shows weakness. Lard prices are steady. Smoked and cooked meats hold their prices with some improvement in the demand as compared with last week. This is mid-season for fish and the market is quiet with no change in prices.

BUTTER PRICES HIGHER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—Late last week the butter market showed an advance of one and two cents a pound which, despite reports to the contrary, seems to be well maintained and backed by a good export market and a scarcity of butter abroad. There is a probability however that in this province the wide margin between butter and cheese values may induce many factories to make butter in place of cheese and so swell the supply of butter. This would not in any case show any effects until late in September.

CHEESE.—Although the cheese market holds steady with a fair movement abroad, it does not reflect the advance in the price of butter. The striking feature is the wide margin between butter and cheese values and this may affect the make of cheese for the fall.

TORONTO MARKETS

TORONTO, August 23.—The tendency in the markets for this week is towards higher levels, with wholesalers quoting butter at an advance of one cent per lb. Cheese is unchanged, but dealers declare that higher prices are likely in view of the increased demand. There is some improvement noted in the egg situation. Receipts are lighter, and the quality is said to be better. Live hogs are a little firmer this week, but prices of smoked and cooked meats are inclined to be easy. Inquiry for both fish and poultry is a little slow, with prices for the most part at unchanged levels.

SPEAKING OF THE WEATHER

"I'm going to comfort Mrs. Brown," said Mrs. Jackson to her daughter, Mary. "Mr. Brown hanged himself in their attic a few weeks ago."

"O mother, don't go; you always say the wrong thing."

"Yes, I'm going. I'll just talk about the weather. That's a safe enough subject."

Mrs. Jackson went over on her visit of condolence.

"We have had very rainy weather lately, haven't we, Mrs. Brown?" she said.

"Yes," replied the widow. "I haven't been able to get the week's washing dried."

"Oh," said Mrs. Jackson, "I shouldn't think you would have any trouble. You have such a nice attic to hang things in."—Exchange.

RETAILERS ARE NOT PROFITEERING

is low. So I must go on buying the choice parts and pay the price in order to give the public what they want. If I had two stores, one in one part of the city where I could sell the fore quarters, and one where the choice cuts were in demand, I could sell all of the meat at an average lower price."

The Art of Butchering

The local men in the trade admit that the butcher's margin of profit depends largely upon his ability as a butcher. One butcher might lose money on a certain piece of meat while another would show a profit on the same piece. One would be acquainted with the art of the trade and the other would be less expert. All contend that in no retail business is there such an opportunity for waste and loss by deterioration as in the trade in question. And so it is that the percentage of profit depends solely upon the man's ability first as a salesman and secondly as a butcher.

A Point of Distinction

One butcher in this city pointed out that there is a big difference between a meat vendor and a butcher and upon this distinction depends the price at which the meat must be sold in order to show a fair profit. Wholesale meat dealers and abattoir officials, when asked by a representative for an expression of opinion with regard to the accusations made against the trade, said that two things should be done to help reduce the retail price. The first is to convince the retailers that a bigger turnover with a smaller margin of profit is more profitable to them than a larger percentage of profit on a smaller turnover.

The occupants of the parlor car of the Limited were startled by the abrupt entrance of two masked bandits.

"T'row up yer hands!" demanded the bigger of the two. "We're goin' to rob all the gents and kiss all the gals."

"No, pardner," remonstrated the smaller one gallantly. "We'll rob the gents but we'll leave the ladies alone."

"Mind yer own business, young fellow," snapped a female passenger of uncertain age. "The big man is robbing the train."

Two old settlers sat smoking in a cabin far away in the backwoods. No feminine presence ever graced that settlement, and domestic arrangements were primitive and rude.

The conversation drifted from politics to cooking, and one of the confirmed bachelors said: "I got one o' them there cookery books once, but I never could do nothin' with it."

"Too much fancy work about it?" asked the other.

"You've 'it it. Every one o' them recipes begun in the same way, 'Take a clean dish—and that settled me at once."

Personal Contact Gets More Trade

The best way you can make your business grow steadily is to meet and talk to passing motorists, and sell them on the service you can give them with a Bowser Chief Sentry. Then you can increase sales in your other departments.

The Chief Sentry not only saves time for the customer, but it enables you to handle more trade per hour.

The automatic features of the Chief Sentry, liberally advertised in the Saturday Evening Post and Literary Digest, reassure your trade that they will get full measure for their money. The sight glass on the discharge arm shows the customer that the measure is full. The tally bell announces the completion of each gallon of gasoline delivered. The Bowser centrifugal water separator insures as dry and pure gasoline as when first from the refinery. The recording meter acts as a perpetual sales register.

The Bowser Chief Sentry is high enough and big enough to make an impressive appearance and attract trade; it is low enough to go under any filling station canopy. It is unusually attractive in design. Bowser service combined with your personality, will attract more motorists and bring them back. Ask for booklet C-11, which describes the Chief Sentry money-making possibilities.

EGG IMPORTS IN GREAT BRITAIN

The total imports of eggs in the shell by the United Kingdom during the first half of 1922 amounted to 57,875,240 dozen, compared with 43,403,210 dozen during the corresponding period of 1921. The United Kingdom is without doubt the largest egg market in the world. This does not mean that more eggs are consumed in Great Britain than in any other country, but merely that more eggs are imported by that country than by any other. Denmark supplied 24,611,520 dozen of the imports during the first half of the current year. Next in importance to Denmark as a source of supply during the first half of 1922 was Egypt, which furnished 9,697,550 dozen of the British imports during the period mentioned. China was also an important source, 5,081,740 dozen having been received from that country. Imports from the United States amounted to only 30,450 dozen.

Royal Meat Choppers have patented improvements whereby the meat is actually cut twice while passing through the machine, ensuring a perfect mince.

Royal Coffee Mills provide a new system of steel knives whereby the coffee beans are cut, instead of being crushed and bruised into "flour" coffee which rapidly loses its flavour.

To Holders of Five Year 5½ per cent. Canada's Victory Bonds

Issued in 1917 and Maturing 1st December, 1922

CONVERSION PROPOSALS

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers to holders of these bonds who desire to continue their investment in Dominion of Canada securities the privilege of exchanging the maturing bonds for new bonds bearing 5½ per cent. interest, payable half yearly, of either of the following classes:—

(a) Five year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1927.

(b) Ten year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1932.

While the maturing bonds will carry interest to 1st December, 1922, the new bonds will commence to earn interest from 1st November, 1922, GIVING A BONUS OF A FULL MONTH'S INTEREST TO THOSE AVAILING THEMSELVES OF THE CONVERSION PRIVILEGE.

This offer is made to holders of the maturing bonds and is not open to other investors. The bonds to be issued under this proposal will be substantially of the same character as those which are maturing, except that the exemption from taxation does not apply to the new issue.

Dated at Ottawa, 8th August, 1922.

Holders of the maturing bonds who wish to avail themselves of this conversion privilege should take their bonds AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE, BUT NOT LATER THAN SEPTEMBER 30th, to a Branch of any Chartered Bank in Canada and receive in exchange an official receipt for the bonds surrendered, containing an undertaking to deliver the corresponding bonds of the new issue.

Holders of maturing fully registered bonds, interest payable by cheque from Ottawa, will receive their December 1 interest cheque as usual. Holders of coupon bonds will detach and retain the last unmatured coupon before surrendering the bond itself for conversion purposes.

The surrendered bonds will be forwarded by banks to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa, where they will be exchanged for bonds of the new issue, in fully registered, or coupon registered or coupon bearer form carrying interest payable 1st May and 1st November of each year of the duration of the loan, the first interest payment accruing and payable 1st May, 1923. Bonds of the new issue will be sent to the banks for delivery immediately after the receipt of the surrendered bonds.

The bonds of the maturing issue which are not converted under this proposal will be paid off in cash on the 1st December, 1922.

W. S. FIELDING,
Minister of Finance.

Working for You—

1,300,000 Newspaper "Sales Clerks"

JUST think what this means to you. About the middle of September we are going to start over a million and a quarter newspaper "clerks" making sales for you—and they will be on the job continuously all of the year.

These clerks include all the large dailies throughout Canada, with a combined circulation of 1,300,000 every day.

The message of these "clerks" is in the form of a series of large attractive advertisements, whose objective is to move Quaker Oats more quickly.

This advertising campaign will be read by every one of your customers—they will want more Quaker Oats. Over a million and a quarter families in Canada are going to order Quaker Oats more freely than ever.

It Means—

That every grocer will be able to make more sales, a quicker turnover and bigger profits. BUT—

To get these advertisements working for you, to get the maximum of the increased sales they will create, and to get the highest possible profits you should link up closely with them. Let the public know yours is a "Quaker" store. Get plenty of Quaker Oats on to your shelves at once—in advance of coming demands—and keep a liberal stock on hand. Don't take the chance of being unable to supply even one single customer.

To take complete advantage of your opportunities, you only have to back this up by a window display of Quaker Oats when the advertisements appear in the dailies covering your territory. Get in touch with us or with any Quaker salesman, jobber or broker, and a list of insertion dates will be supplied.

Get your orders or your enquiries off to us to-day—and thus take the first step towards getting in line with the drive—

Are Not Asking Retailer to Pay Tax

Question of Passing Stamp Tax on Drafts to the Retail Merchant is Again Discussed—These Wholesalers Think That on Renewal Drafts Customers Should Pay the Tax But Not on the Initial Ones

CONTINUING the discussion in last week's issue on the subject of the stamp tax on bank drafts and the attitude of wholesalers and manufacturers in the trade passing the same on to the retailer, it would seem that the practice of affixing the cost of the stamps to the drafts, is not being followed to any great extent in the grocery trade.

W. C. Miller, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Ontario, expressed the opinion that it would be illegal for anyone but the drawer of the draft to pay this stamp tax. He did not think that a manufacturer or a wholesaler could, within the meaning of the act, legally charge the cost of the stamps in the draft to retailer. As for instance, on a draft of two hundred dollars, the stamp tax is eight cents. Mr. Miller did not think that the drawer of the draft could lawfully make it out for $200.08, thus making the drawee pay for the stamp tax.

Hugh Blain, president of Eby-Blain Co., wholesale grocers, Front Street East, Toronto, did not agree with Mr. Miller as to the legality of passing this stamp tax on drafts on to the retailer.

The government insisted on the tax being paid, but did not say that a manufacturer or wholesaler should not pass it on to the retailer, if such a policy was acceptable to both parties. As a matter of fact he did not think there were many manufacturers or wholesalers who were passing it on, but were paying it on all drafts issued by them. "We are paying it on first drafts issued, but we think that when the draft is sent back the second time, the customer should pay the stamp charges, providing of course that the draft was properly tendered in the first place," Mr. Blain remarked to a representative of Canadian Grocer.

T. H. Kinnear, president of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Association, stated that this matter of the payment of the stamp tax on drafts was discussed in a meeting of the association the other day, and it was decided that it was for each wholesaler to decide himself what was the best way of meeting it. "This tax is quite a heavy burden," Mr. Kinnear remarked, "but I do not know of any other way for the wholesaler to pay it. We have always encouraged payment of accounts with our firm by draft. Payment by draft is very extensively used by our customers. We will pay the tax on the initial draft, but I think that on renewal drafts the customer should pay the stamp charges. If every draft sent out was accepted the present legislation would not reach such serious proportions, but when a large number are returned, then the cost of stamps for renewal drafts would be an expenditure that would amount to a very considerable sum in the course of a year. In the case of a bad debt, it has often been necessary to issue a draft on several occasions, and each time it is sent out, it means an added expense to the wholesaler, should he pay for the stamps each time. If the draft is not accepted the first time, then I think the retailer should be responsible for the stamp tax on the succeeding drafts.

Receipt Tax Being Framed on Basis of English Act

"THERE isn't a chance in the world of the tax on receipts being modified or abolished before the next session of parliament, and it is doubtful if any attempt will be made even then to interfere with it," said a high official of the Department of Customs and Excise to the Ottawa representative of Canadian Grocer a few days ago.

The official's attention was drawn to the fact that retailers in convention in various parts of the Dominion were placing themselves on record as being strongly opposed to the new law, but he simply smiled a knowing smile and said it was only natural that men should kick over the traces when burdened with a new form of taxation.

"The country needs the money," he said, "and we are satisfied that quite a lot will be raised by means of the receipt tax."

"Well then what about the regulations that are to govern the new tax?" was the next question.

"They will be issued in plenty of time," replied the official. "I expect it will be about the middle of October before we have them ready. You know we are conducting a thorough investigation of the operation of the receipt tax in the old country, and it is more than likely that we will adopt regulations similar to those in existence there. The receipt tax has been in force in England for several years and has been working out very satisfactorily."

The official then switched the conversation to the stamp and sales tax and waxed enthusiastic over the results which have been secured of late. "The amendment to the stamp tax has only been in force a few days," he said, "but from the time it went into force on the first of August, until to-day (August 12) there has been a 400 per cent. increase in revenue, over the corresponding period in July. Taking the same periods for comparative purposes, there has been a fifty per cent. increase in the sales tax, while the revenue produced by the combined taxes (stamp and sales) has been exactly double that collected in the first ten days in July."

Seek to Retain Trade of Customers Moving From Their Districts

Following up the Moving Trade and Keeping in Close Touch With Customers Who Are Contemplating Making a Change of Residence is Good Business, Say Montreal Grocers

MONTREAL, Aug. 28. (Special)—On the first of October many families in this city particularly will change their places of residence, which is an important fact that every grocer must take into consideration. The moving of families often means the loss of a customer and at the same time it offers grocers in general new prospects. The wide-awake grocers are not only doing their best to hold the accounts of the movers, but trying to gain the business of the newcomers in their district.

There are districts in the city which are more affected by the migration than others and, therefore, the merchants in these districts have to lay plans to make the best of changes. One grocer for the last month back has been keeping track of all the customers who mention to him that they are going to move in October. Without letting the customer know what he is about, he makes a note of the fact and, if possible, gets the new address. His intention is to write these people about the second week in September and, in a well-worded letter, suggest that they still leave their grocery account with him although they are going to another district. He also points out that by a well-organized delivery system and special attention to the account he is in a position to give the same good service that he has endeavored to render in the past.

Gets Results

Although this grocer has not yet had the opportunity to actually test out his system, he is convinced that he can hold many of the accounts that he would otherwise lose. In other years he has simply spoken personally to each customer whom he knew was moving, yet he has held customers who have moved to another district. Such a plan must be carried out thoughtfully, for delivery to some sections of a big city would not be profitable. Yet some local grocers have held accounts which have moved as far as five miles away. One grocer in Point St. Charles has a daily delivery to residential districts five miles and more away from his store. Almost all of these customers are people who once lived in the vicinity of his store.

Getting New Trade

On the other hand there is an opportunity for every grocer to get new customers through this same process. A driver can prepare a list of changes in his route and an effort on the part of the grocer may establish a profitable connection with the new comers. A circular letter featuring the service of the store is a big attraction and people like to have their trade appreciated. Milk men are quick to pick up new accounts in this manner and there is no reason why the grocers should not do likewise. A short letter might be prepared a week or so ahead of time and mailed to the address of the new tenants as soon as they arrive.

Getting Acquainted

There is much, too, in the art of getting acquainted. A local grocer who does a large business in an apartment house district of this city boasts that he can tell the business of almost every customer he has. He makes his customers a study and he is particularly quick to grasp names and remember faces. The result is that there is an intimacy about the business that gives the grocer an opportunity to understand better his customers' likes and dislikes and also gives him the confidence of those whom he serves.

Amendments Are Made to the Meat and Canned Foods Act

Alaska Red Salmon Must Not Be Labelled Sockeye, But After Sept. 1 Must Be Marked "Alaska Red" Only

OTTAWA, Aug. 30 (Special)—Amendments to the Meat and Canned Foods Act respecting the marking of importations of fish or shellfish have been brought into effect, and a memorandum covering the terms of the amendment has been issued by the Department of Customs and Excise to officers of that department.

The amendment provides that canned fish or shellfish imported into Canada to be exported need only be labelled to show the country of origin, and also providing that no false or misleading mark or designation of the kind or variety of the contents shall be shown on any can of fish imported for sale in Canada.

It is also announced by the department that with reference to the importation of canned Alaska red salmon and the use of the word "Sockeye" on the labels thereof, all such salmon imported for sale in Canada after September 1 next must be labelled to show the name "Alaska Red" only. The name "Sockeye" must not be shown in addition thereto. Fish imported prior to that date may be sold as at present marked. Confiscation is provided in the case of any importations improperly labelled.

RUSSIAN CROP PROSPECTS FAR AHEAD OF LAST YEAR

The condition of farm crops in Russia as a whole up to July 1 is estimated to have been above average, and with a fair harvest the position of Russia will be better than it has been in the last two years, according to reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The cities will have enough grain to meet food requirements, and the peasants will be in possession of enough seed for a considerable extension of the area to be sown for 1923, provided that the rights of internal free trade recently granted by the Soviet Government are not curtailed.

It is not expected that there will be a general surplus of grain for export. It is possible, however, that some quantities of grain will be sent to Italy and corresponding purchases made in England or America for import into the northern provinces of Russia—a roundabout method of sending grain from the producing regions of Russia to the consuming regions which is less expensive than the long railroad haul from south Russia to north Russia.

It is estimated that in 1922 Russia will have 5,000,000-12,000,000 long tons more of bread grains to supply the food requirements than in 1921 when the net harvest of bread grains amounted to 19,922,000 long tons after deductions had been made for livestock feed and seed requirements. The 1921 harvest was 4,352,000 tons under Russia's minimum requirements for human consumption. Therefore, this year, even with the minimum estimate of 5,000,000 tons more than last year, Russia ought to be able to feed herself.

ARE NOT ASKING RETAIL TO PAY TAX

drafts, and I think it is better for the wholesaler to do likewise in collecting from the retailer. I see no other way to meet it. It is a big item of taxation, and adds a heavy burden to the wholesaler, at a time when business is not as active as it might be, and when many forms of taxation are heavily assessing the resources of the jobber."

Finds the Grocer is Not a Profiteer

Commission Investigating Profits in Marketing and Distribution of Farm Products Entirely Exonerates the Grocer From Being Unduly Grasping in His Share of the Earnings From the Sale of Such—The Fault is Not With the Grocer

By EDWIN DAKIN in Commerce and Finance, New York

THE GROCERS are congratulating themselves. They have been given a rising vote of confidence.

The fourth part of the report of the Joint Commission of Agricultural Inquiry, made under a resolution of Congress authorizing an investigation of the marketing and distribution of agricultural products, has just been issued. And now it seems that one can no longer blame the grocer when he charges a quarter for three roasting ears or a head of lettuce.

The Commission has prepared a diagram showing the gross profit realized by each factor—from the miscellaneous handling costs to the price received by the shipper. The products considered include potatoes, watermelons, strawberries, spinach, prunes, onions, lettuce, celery, grapes, cauliflower, citrus fruits, canteloupe, asparagus and cabbage.

It has long been the popular conviction that in the marketing of such products the farmer was underpaid and the consumer was overcharged, and that the generous difference lying between these two extremes was being pocketed by the grocer as undue profit.

The report throws a different light on the whole situation. There is no doubt that the consumer is being charged exceedingly high prices for farm products sold at retail. But the fault does not lie with the groceryman.

Only 4 Per Cent. Profits

Of the proceeds from 9,476 carloads of agricultural products sold at wholesale from September, 1920, to July, 1921, in such representative cities as Boston, New York, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, the report indicates that 60 per cent. went to the producer, while 31 per cent. was paid for transportation, 5 per cent. for miscellaneous handling charges, and only 4 per cent. profits. In several instances, as in the case of cabbage shipped from California, no profit was shown at all. The producer received 42 per cent., and transportation and handling charges not only ate up all the rest, but left a total loss of 17½ per cent. to boot. The conclusion is evident: It is the handling and transportation, not the grocer's greed, that stretches the bridge between producer and consumer.

Fourteen distinct transactions are indicated in getting the products from the farmer to the dinner table. These include transportation to the terminal, the terminal service, the terminal market, transportation again, the industrial converters such as canneries and mills, then marketing their products, transportation once more, then storage, then the journey to the retailer and his service in delivering the products to the consumer.

The distribution problem is admittedly fast becoming one of the most serious that our present industrial organization has to face. Costs of production, owing to the modern use of machinery, have been undergoing a steady and relative decline. Final cost to the consumer, on the other hand, has been undergoing a steady increase that has borne no relation to production cost. There is hardly a product or a commodity on the market of which this is not true. And the reason is—distribution.

Carrying Charges Heavy

As the congestion of population increases, the costs of commodities pyramid—in direct proportion to the pyramiding of transportation charges. It costs little more, for instance, to ship a barrel of potatoes half across the continent than it does to transport that same barrel from one end of New York City to the other. In this pyramiding there is not only the mere cost of freight and drayage to be considered. Every time the commodity is loaded or unloaded, every time it is put into storage and later pulled out, the cost of the labor involved mounts up. And labor is the most expensive commodity today. Combine its tax with that for transportation, and the total becomes appalling.

These facts are more or less obvious, and yet they have failed until now to receive from the general public the attention they deserve. It is to be hoped that

Subject of Margins Again Comes Up

This Grocer Would Like to Know What is a Satisfactory Margin on a Certain Flour—"We Appreciate," He Writes, "If This Margin Is Made Too Large, Cut Prices Among Retailers Are Encouraged"

By HENRY JOHNSON, JR.

DEAR Mr. Johnson:—
I have read every article I have seen under your name in Canadian Grocer and gleaned some valuable merchandising information therefrom. I used to be a pretty good customer of yours. The background of your merchandising experience and what you have learned elsewhere has given you a grasp of merchandising principles which is rare. Because of this, we would like to have your opinion on what is a satisfactory margin for us to allow the retailers on a certain cake flour. We realize that many grocers' specialties give the retailer a profit of 25 per cent. on his selling price and that in general the average profit on his full line gives him 20 per cent. to 22 per cent. We have always wanted to allow him a fair profit, consistent with the character of our goods, his cost of handling and the type of service he delivers. We appreciate that if this margin is made too large, cut prices among retailers are thereby encouraged. We also appreciate that if this margin is not sufficient, we lose dealer interest and are even apt to encourage antagonism. Bread and pastry flours in bags usually yield the retailer from 12 per cent. to 15 per cent. and this cake flour has usually yielded him from 20 per cent. to 25 per cent., the margin varying with freight and price-making policies in some localities. When prices settle to a stabilized basis again, we shall probably do as we did for many years —keep it at the same price level throughout the year. At present, the price in the central west gives him slightly over 20 per cent. on his selling price. In making price revisions, we always try to consider the margin the grocer will get. He will probably price at regular figures—50c, 40c, 35c, etc., per package. It is unusual for it to be sold at odd cents. A suggestion from you will be appreciated.

This grocer's letter being entirely along right lines, I wrote thus:

The subject matter of your letter is something of perennial interest to the retail trade and, with your permission, I shall use it in the near future in Canadian Grocer. I am sure you will not object to such use because it shows that at least one manufacturer is trying to work with the grocer on an equitable basis. Of course I know your product well. I suppose we first handled it all of twenty-five years ago—I should say at least twenty-two years. Retail margin on your goods should be about 25 per cent. It is not necessary that it be much larger, and it should not be perceptibly smaller.

Retailers Usually Their Own Worst Enemies

This letter has been long delayed. There were too many letters ahead of it, but it is good stuff at any time. Their difficulty is emphasized in the lines I have run in bold faced type. It is much the same difficulty others have with grocers. Manufacturers often cannot be as liberal in their plans as they would like to be, because when the average grocer has the opportunity to get a fair margin, he thinks it a good chance to "get after" a neighbor with cut prices—and then the margin soon goes flooey!

This is due partly to the habit grocers have of computing margins carelessly on cost and even when in theory they know such is not sound practice. So a 25 per cent. margin is erroneously figured as 33 1/3 per cent. The grocer thinks that is too much to let his neighbor have, so he cuts the price. His neigbor goes him one or more better, the profit is all gone—and then the fun is that both the first mover in the cutting bee and his neighbors all together join in blaming the manufacturer—who had nothing whatever to do with it, except to be liberal in his figures.

Again, the trouble is partly due to ignorance on the part of grocers as to what margins different classes of goods should bear. Obviously, if a staple flour is to be held at a margin of 12%, a semi-luxury like cake flour, is justly held at 25%. And the best of it is that grocers can get correct margins, if they only have the good sense to do it. Few customers will ever kick against paying the necessary price for various kinds of articles, but grocers think they will—so they cut in advance. Or, if some one or two kick, they cut on all. So they keep their noses voluntarily to the grind stone —and blame the manufacturer.

We Must All Work With the Tools at Hand

But manufacturers want to play fairly with retailers. It is always my hope that eventually education will get in its work a bit, and grocers will cease to work free.

I know no better illustration that grocers do not need to work for nothing than the evidence in this letter that he traded with me. For he was buying for a "frat house". He could not have held his job if he had paid more than a fair price for his goods. Yet he was satisfied to trade at a store where service was given, goods were excellent, he could find anything he wanted, but he often paid more for many things than he could have bought them for elsewhere!

Why and how? O, well, try getting what your goods are worth, and you can do it provided you have the goods, and really deliver the service as well as charge for it.

But now, when you see a manufacturer approaching who wants to give you a square deal, see that you co-operate with him.

Several months ago I got a statement and letter from the manager of a co-operative store in Quebec, accompanied by the certificate of the auditor who had examined his accounts. The papers are illuminating. The auditor attached a schedule of insurance which he writes shows "the stock was over-insured about $1,000 and fixtures under-insured about $3,000" on January 1st, according to book values.

When I read that schedule, I thought such advice alone would go far to offset the cost of the auditor. It is worth something to know where your insurance is $4,000 wrong. Further, if one who keeps such careful accounts is thus wrong, what of the ordinary grocer?

These accounts are very fully kept. The expenses are subdivided so that one can see what really has happened.

Sales were $84,679.53 last year and the margin averaged 15.51%. Stock at close of year was nearly $14,000. Assuming that as the average, the turnover is seen to be over five. That is good, very good, for a general store.

Wages and salaries are not segregated altogether, but the figure of $2,691,-50 is given for selling salaries. That figures a little over three per cent. on sales and indicates that wages expense generally is low.

Delivery runs $1,807.34, or more than 2-12%. Rent is two-thirds per cent.—paid to themselves as owners of the buildings. That part of the accounting is probably not quite right, because value of buildings is given at $6,200 and, while rent earned from outside is some $77.00, the business should pay ten per cent. gross. But there is leeway enough in any case.

No Special Privileges or Advantages

You will note that there are no special advantages here over what any merchant may enjoy. The difference in favor of this man is that he faces all issues—knows where is going—does not fool himself.

In one place he seems a little wrong. He figures 10% annual depreciation on delivery equipment. That should be twice as much. Ten per cent. is correct on inside equipment, but outside equipment wears out twice as fast. You cannot count on more than five years life on wagons, horses, trucks. Inside the store, fixtures may last forever. Therefore, ten per cent. annually is regarded as ample for conservative management.

Another item puzzles me. That is the "freight and express, $417.86." This is included in expenses. Yet I hardly think those charges have not been added to cost—and if added to cost, why are they put into expense? I can never see the reasoning, from any standpoint, whereby such items are put into expenses. If it is desirable to segregate those charges just for information or for the satisfaction of knowing what is being paid for transportation—and no merchant ever can know too much about such items from all angles—the end can be accomplished by opening an account which periodically, is carried into merchandise. But certainly, it is misleading ever to run such things into expense even temporarily.

Transportation is part of the cost of merchandise. It is just as much a part of such cost as the invoice prices of the goods. It should be recovered immediately and directly through the cost. There is no good sense in doing such a thing indirectly when the direct course is before us—logical, conclusive and final.

This business operated on a gross average margin of 13% in 1921. The expenses were 12%. The net profit was one per cent. on sales. In 1922, the average cost of merchandise was 84.49c for each dollar of sales. That left a margin of 15.51%. Expenses were 13.65%. Net profit was 1.86% on sales. That is a good record. It is somewhat remarkable in that few grocers did better in '22 than in '21; but this one did.

The showing is good. My strictures are incidental, but I know they will be well received. And I should like to know about that "freight"!

WANT MORE CO-OPERATION BETWEEN GROWERS AND RETAILERS

Farmers and fruit growers on the Montreal market complain that the retailers are hindering them in marketing their crop of apples this year. The supply of apples is abundant. The crop is a record one and the early apples are a feature of the market. Yet there is not, according to the farmers, the demand that might be expected. Their claim is that with the big crop the prices will naturally be low and in order to make marketing of the crop profitable the demand must be greater than in other years. The only hope to create this demand is to make the price so attractive that the supply will move freely to the consumer. Co-operation between the growers and the retailers is essential in encouraging the production. In some instances the farmers are right in their complaint. This week yellow transparents were sold on the market at 60c. and 70c. for 11 quart basket or $5.00 a barrel while two or three retail grocers were asking 25 and 30 cents a dozen for the same apples.

ROLLING STORE FAILS

"The Store at Your Door," grocery in San Francisco, says the New York Journal of Commerce, has gone into bankruptcy. Gay Lombard, president of the "Store at Your Door" Company, launched the project a few months ago. He was formerly a large grain operator in Portland and later the executive head of the Yosemite Flour Mills and the California Macaroni Company. Through liquidation brought by other stockholders he was forced out of these companies and sought to establish this new method of selling food products at retail, depending on the sale of stock in the concern to the prospective customers in order to put it over.

Showing a well-equipped and a well-arranged store. Equipment for convenient and rapid service is a feature of this store. Interior displays are attractive.

Another Co-Operative Failure

THE FAILURE of a wholesale and retail co-operative society in the State of Illinois, as announced recently, adds another to the long list of failures of similar organizations. This particular scheme was more enterprising than others of its kind, in that it involved a wholesale house and 67 branch stores. $80,000, it appears, was paid in as capital, and $385,000 is represented as borrowed money from the various coal miners' unions, which means that the society has lost $185,000 or a fraction more than $5,000 a month.

Whether the coal strike has anything to do with increasing the loss recently is not stated, yet it is apparent, says a U. S. exchange, that when the coal miners could not succeed with an evident plentiful supply of money, it is plain to be seen that other attempts with less resources could not hope to get away with it. This has been the history of a great many co-operative grocery stores started in various parts of both Canada and the United States, that have resulted in failures.

Organizations of consumers bent upon reducing the cost of living, who have attempted similar co-operative societies must now be impressed with the success, or rather the lack of it, that attends such ventures. Labor organizations have been especially prone to such attempts to reduce living expenses. It is evident that co-operatives cannot run a store any cheaper than any individual running on the same basis, and the fact that many of these co-operatives are headed by inexperienced managers, makes the likelihood of success even more remote. Members soon learn that prices as between co-operatives and independents do not vary so much, and the latter giving first-class service usually get the greater patronage.

Big Future for Rural Trade

FINAL FIGURES governing the sixth census of Canada shows population on June 1 of 8,788,483, being an increase of 1,581,840 over the population recorded in 1911. The percentage of increase is about 21.95 per cent. It would seem by a perusal of the reports that the claims of agriculturists that the farming industry is the basic industry from certain standpoints, are borne out. Of the total population, 4,439,505 reside in rural districts compared with 4,348,978 living in urban centres. Alberta leads the way in so far as increase in population is concerned, the percentage being 57, with Saskatchewan second with a 53 per cent. increase. Yukon shows a decrease, British Columbia gained 33 per cent., Manitoba gained 32 per cent., Nova Scotia gained 6 per cent., New Brunswick 10 per cent.; Prince Edward declined 5 per cent.

Further evidences of the growing importance of the agricultural districts of Canada is found in the fact that settlers arriving in the three Western prairie provinces during the month of May numbered 1,020. They brought with them $227,000 in cash, and effects valued at about $100,000. This is bringing a relatively high proportion of wealth to the country and indicates that these are the type of settlers who are wanted to form community centres in the vast prairie lands of Canada.

Retailers and other business men in other branches of trade will realize, from such statistics, the fact that the agricultural districts of Canada are of a growing importance, that their special needs must be taken care of and that they offer wonderful business opportunities for those who study their requirements.

Too Much in a Window

A RECENT letter to the editor of this paper comments on a window display that was seen in a store handling groceries and drygoods. He describes it as a conglomeration of merchandise, without any particular effect being aimed at. More than forty different articles were thrust into the window, it would seem, giving the onlooker the idea of a sort of "hit and miss" collection of things. The wide variety of lines shown impressed the passerby, but the point is raised as to whether the best results are obtained from a display of so many lines, or from a few articles bearing some relation to each other.

Grocers and merchants generally are strongly convinced of the effectiveness of window displays as a means of stimulating sales and drawing people into the store. Some retailers claim that their windows pay their rent, and are always the means of increasing business. However, a window to do this must be attractive and sufficiently outstanding to catch and arrest the attention of the passerby. It is doubtful if a window showing as wide a variety as forty different articles would indicate, is as valuable an aid to sales as concentration on a few lines, each having some bearing on the other. The greatest success it would appear has been gained in this way. A large number of articles put into a window without any special idea of securing a particular effect can have little value, as a means of increasing sales of any one of the many lines shown.

Many Attend Opening of New Food Building

Toronto, Aug. 26.—The new Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition was formally opened last evening, when a large number of people, at the invitation of the Pure Food Association, attended. The new building, which has previously been described in this paper, is, without a doubt, the finest of its kind on this continent. It is located north of the main grand stand. It is beautiful in its architecture, and serves to concentrate public attention on the fact that Canada is a leader in the world production of food. Some two hundred exhibits are shown in this building. People in great numbers walked through the aisles viewing with most evident interest the displays and artistic arrangements of the various booths. Exhibitors were generous in their donations of samples, and guests of the evening were everywhere tendered a splendid recognition. People marvelled at the number of food products shown and remarked that, in the Pure Food Building alone, apart altogether from the remainder of the great fair, there is an exhibition on a scale unrivalled on this continent.

There were really no opening proceedings, the same being better described as informal rather than formal. Geo. T. Irving, second vice-president of the National Exhibition, was present and opened the building. An orchestra played delightfully during the entire evening.

Will Be Judge At The Imperial Fruit Show In London

Ottawa, Aug. 28. (Special)—P. J. Carey, of Toronto, fruit packing and orchard specialist of the fruit branch of the Department of Agriculture, has been appointed Canadian representative on the board of judges in connection with the Imperial Fruit Show to be held at the Crystal Palace, London, Eng., from October 27 to November 4.

The board of judges will be composed of three persons, one representing the Imperial authorities, one the Canadian fruit growers and the third will sit as a neutral. It is generally conceded that Mr. Carey's appointment will receive unanimous endorsation from all parts of Canada as he has had wide experience and enjoys the confidence of growers and shippers from coast to coast.

The indications are that there will be a very good entry list from Canada this year. The Canadian fruit commissioner has had many enquiries from each of the provinces and it is expected the entries will be fairly representative of all parts of the country. All entries for the competitive British Empire and Overseas classes, together with the entry fees, will be received at the fruit branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. These will have to be in the hands of the fruit branch on or before Sept. 25 in order that they may arrive in England not later than October 2.

New Goods

An Automatic Bottle Capper

A new automatic bottle capper is being placed on the market that is designed to help domestic canning, in that the ordinary small-necked bottle may be used for preserving catchup, fruit juices and sauces. This small machine by the pressure of the hand upon two levers secures the ordinary crown cap to the bottle without any hammering. The machine has no springs or mechanism, the principle being simply leverage. It is made by the Comstock Bolton Co., and will be distributed through the Charles P. Archibald Co., 285 Beaver Hall Hill, Montreal, to the grocery trade.

Seeing

is believing

YOU KNOW that O-Cedar Products give complete satisfaction—your daily contact with hundreds of women who regularly buy these goods must have convinced you that O-Cedar is the quality Polish and the O-Cedar Polish Mop an absolute necessity in the modern home.

You have faith in O-Cedar—
How do your customers know you have?
Seeing is believing.

If they can see O-Cedar Products displayed on your counter, they will realize that you are a believer in O-Cedar—and having confidence in your judgment, they will readily buy these goods which yield so fair a profit to you.

O-Cedar Polish

One Step Further

When a woman does buy O-Cedar Polish, it is worth your while to go a step beyond merely handing it to her and taking her money.

Say to her:

1st. Be sure to use it with water; which will ensure her using it in the one correct way to get proper results.

2nd. It's good enough to use on your piano; by which she will realize that O-Cedar Polish is quite as much a Polish for fine furniture as for floors. A lot of women wrongly imagine that O-Cedar is only for floors. By telling them it is for furniture—and improves even the most expensive furniture—you will help to widen the use of O-Cedar and thereby you will sell more of it.

All of which we would not dream of suggesting to you, unless we were doing our part. We are doing a great deal to help you sell more O-Cedar, by advertising it consistently in a wide list of daily newspapers.

"Co-Operation Takes Away the Element of Competition in Business"

Henry Watters, Treasurer of the Dominion Retail Merchants' Association, Speaking on Merchants' Day at the Canadian National Exhibition, Declares That Competition is Necessary to Develop Efficiency in Business

TORONTO, Aug. 30, (Special).—Henry Watters, of Ottawa and treasurer of the Dominion Retail Merchants' Association, was the principal speaker at the directors' luncheon at the Canadian National Exhibition today, the occasion being Merchants' Day. The attendance of retailers was very large, the seating capacity of the dining room being taxed to accommodate all desiring to attend.

"I feel it an uncommon compliment to be invited to speak on this occasion," began Mr. Watters, "and I take the opportunity to thank the directors for allotting a special day for merchants, so that the retailers of the country might have a chance to meet together at this Fair, to share views one with the other. It was a happy thought that designated a day to the agriculturists, a day to the manufacturers, to transportation and to the retail merchants. These I think represent the great factors that go to make up the industrial fabric of the country. Not one is entitled to pre-eminence over the other.

All Interests Must be Represented

"Where would the agriculturists be without the transportation, without the manufacturer, or without the system of distribution to the consumer? There is no more reason why we should have an agricultural, occupational group governing the country or any section of the country than we should have a retail group doing it. If we are to have a stable, responsible government, all interests must be represented. Any attempt to introduce into the administration a system of group interests is fatal to all responsible government.

No Idea of Social Conditions

"With all that has been said in regard to immigration here to-day, I am in hearty accord. We must go slowly. We have foreigners coming into the country who have no idea of social conditions prevailing, and who enter business ready to work any and all hours, twenty-four in fact, if customers will come. Canadian merchants find these foreigners an impediment, for the reason that they do not readily conform to our social customs, including limited hours of work, but whose only idea is to make the dollars. We want immigration from the same stock from which came the men that have made Canada what it is to-day. We do not want the immigrants that cannot be assimilated into our ideas.

"Co-operation as against competition in business is a subject that is uppermost at the present time. I am not an opponent of co-operation, but if one is looking for the marked success, one cannot look better than in the men engaged in the competitive field. All high types are developed in competition. It makes for a high standard of efficiency. Co-operation takes away that element of competition, that is valuable to business."

Continuing the speaker denounced the "price cutter," characterizing him as an anti-social member of the community and should not be encouraged. He quoted the professor of economics of Harvard University, who he said, declares that cutting of fair, normal prices is opposed to the general interests, and the people must make it up in some way.

An Optimistic Outlook

Other speakers at this luncheon included the Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of Immigration in the Dominion government, and D. A. Cameron, president of the Toronto Board of Trade. Both men spoke of the splendid crops in the provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, also in Ontario, and were optimistic as to the commercial outlook as a result. The fact that the Canadian dollar was again at par is significant, declared Mr. Cameron, of the present upward trend of business. Hon. Mr. Stewart dwelt on the subject of immigration, declaring that in this country it is a selected immigration that is needed.

Among the grocers present were D. W. Clark, Toronto; Robt. Dawson, Toronto; and W. J. McCully, Stratford.

Ottawa Grocers Promise Their Best Pure Food Show

Ottawa, Aug. 28. (Special)—A splendid account of the "doings" at the Halifax meeting of the Dominion Board, Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, was given by Alex. Phillips at the semi-monthly meeting of the grocers' section of the Ottawa branch recently.

The members had as their guest of the evening Thomas Leckie, chief inspector of the inland revenue department, who discussed with them several phases of the Pure Foods Act and offered a number of suggestions whereby the grocers might co-operate with the department in respect to the carrying out of the provisions of this act.

A. S Moreland, chairman of Ottawa's Pure Food Show committee, was the unanimous choice of the meeting as Ottawa's representative at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto. Although the plans are fully completed for this year's Ottawa show, Mr. Moreland was especially instructed to be on the lookout for new ideas for next year's show.

Mr. Moreland waxed enthusiastic when reporting upon the arrangements for the Ottawa show. Everything was in the very best of shape and he looked forward to this being by far the biggest and best exhibition of pure foods in the history of the association.

Final arrangements for the grocers' luncheon at the Central Canada Exhibition were announced by B. G. Crabtree, who is the section's representative on the exhibition board of directors. The speaker for the occasion will be Hon. J. A. Robb, Minister of Trade and Commerce in the Federal Government, and the chair will be occupied by A. E. Provost of Provost and Allard, wholesale grocers, Ottawa. The luncheon, which will be at noon on Friday, September 15, will be held in conjunction with the Ottawa Commercial Travellers' Association.

Following the regular meeting there was a short session of the Pure Food Show committee composed of B. G. Crabtree, A. E. Kelly, T. A. C. Kennedy, A. S. Moreland and J. C. Allan. The final touches were put to the arrangements for the show.

Those who attended the regular meeting were: A. E. Kelly, chairman; Duncan Bell, treasurer; J. C. Allan, secretary; T. M. Collins, B. G. Crabtree, A. S. Moreland, T. A. C. Kennedy, J. Gladstone, Alex. Phillips, J. A. Wright, Alf. Roche, T. Bowman, J. C. Campbell and Thomas Leckie.

Regina Retailers Fined for Selling Eggs Unfit for Use

Regina, Aug. 30.—The retailing of bad eggs in Regina has been checked during the past few days, when inspectors of the Department of Agriculture visited grocers and storekeepers of the city and obtained several convictions against merchants for infractions of the Saskatchewan Egg Marketing Act.

One grocer was fined $5 and costs for offering bad eggs for sale, and $5 and costs for neglecting to keep candling records.

Another merchant was fined $5 and costs for buying eggs for resale without having the necessary license.

A third retailer was fined $5 and costs for offering bad eggs for sale; $5 and costs for neglecting to keep candling records; $5 and costs for not displaying egg license in a conspicuous position.

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

ON TUESDAY of this week, all Canadian refiners announced a reduction in the price of sugar, the new quotation being on the basis of $7.25 per cwt., Montreal, with the price delivered at Toronto being $7.59. The sugar market has been more or less unsettled in the past fortnight, and sales have been reported from second hands at less than list prices. There has been a quiet demand refiners state, and buying has not been heavy at all from any particular source. Prices on the new pack of evaporated apples have been announced. These show much the same levels as have been ruling on last year's pack. A number of dried fruits on spot show reductions, including currants and raisins. Prices on new pack of California prunes and apricots are still deferred, and now are not expected until after Labor Day. In canned goods some lower prices are named this week. Standard peas are easier at $1.42½ per doz. at Toronto. One brand of raspberry jam is quoted lower, also some salmons and sardines are reduced. The market for teas continues its upward trend, and all reports indicate a generally strong situation. Coffees are steady, but the market is strong. Cereals tend to easiness, and some houses are quoting lower prices on certain lines this week. Package goods are unchanged, and dealers report movement of the same in moderate volume. Rice market is steady, and more or less quiet. There is a good inquiry for spices, the present season of pickling and preserving stimulating the demand. Fruits and vegetables continue to arrive freely on all Canadian markets and prices are ruling at comparatively low figures. The flour market is inclined to be a little easier, although no change is announced in prices this week.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, August 31.—All the grocery trade is brighter on account of the outlook for the fall and winter. Much more activity is noticeable throughout but retail buying has not yet got into full swing. The next two weeks should show a marked improvement, provided there is a firmer basis in many staple lines. Refiners' quotations on sugar are lower, the new basis Montreal being $7.25 per cwt. Cutting is still going on and retailers are quickly unloading what they hold and buying only for immediate requirements. Corn syrups and molasses show no change. The tea market is strong throughout and is likely to hold that position. Coffee is steady but dull. There is much activity in pickling spices and an improvement in other spices. Flour prices are lower and there is a weak tendency to cereals. There is no change in package goods. Lower prices have been quoted on canned red salmon and Canadian sardines are reduced. Canned peas are lower in price. Dried fruits are being reduced by the wholesale trade and buying is expected to show an early improvement. There is no change in the nut market. Fresh fruits and vegetables continue low in price with an abundant supply. Apples are particularly low.

CEREAL MARKET IS WEAK

Montreal.

CEREALS.—There are no changes in the cereal market but it is conceded that the market is in a weak condition at present due to the splendid crops harvested throughout the Dominion. Wholesale prices are temporarily steady with some cutting to stimulate unloading but lower prices may be expected in the course of the next few weeks.

SUGAR MARKET IS LOWER

Montreal.

SUGAR.—The sugar market is still in an unsettled condition and quotations are only nominal. Refiners are quoting lower prices at $7.25 but local wholesalers are selling as low as $7.00. Although the raw market is steady there is no confidence in the market and a reduction in the refiners' list price would not be surprising.

SYRUPS ARE STEADY

Montreal.

SYRUPS.—The market for molasses and corn syrups is steady with only a light demand and no indication of any change.

TEA MARKET IS FIRM

Montreal.

TEAS.—There are no new developments in the tea market. Prices are steady with a strong tone, particularly on Japan teas. Second crop Japans have been cleared up despite the attitude taken by buyers early in the market and now third crop offerings are in demand with a strong market at a stiff price.

FLOUR PRICES LOWER

Montreal.

FLOUR.—Wholesale grocers are quoting a lower price on flour as a result of a reduction recently made by the millers. The price is now $7.50 for first patents spring wheat flour and $7 for second patents and strong bakers at $6.80 a barrel. Winter wheat flour continues at $5.30 and $5.40 in broken lots in used jute bags and 25c. higher for printed cottons.

FRUIT PRICES ARE LOW

Montreal.

FRUITS.—It is some years since this market has been supplied so plentifully with fruit at so reasonable prices. Apples are particularly low and the offerings are large. Plums are also plentiful and large supplies of peaches and pears are on the market. Prices are changing so rapidly that a fair quotation cannot be listed. Lemons are low in price with large offerings and a light demand. Montreal melons are in good supply but the price holds up.

WINNIPEG MARKETS

WINNIPEG.—Few changes are noted in the grocery market this week. Both coffee and tea markets show considerable strength. There is a good demand for all lines of canned fish and B.C. packers have announced that prices on pink salmon will advance shortly. Opening prices on raspberries have been named by canners and with the small pack prices will be higher than last year. Dried fruits show practically no change but the demand for raisins locally at lower prices is showing an improvement. Prices on new crop California prunes are further deferred. Flour has shown a reduction of 15c per bag. Bulk cereals are a little slow at the present time and retailers are cleaning up their lines of package goods. The New York raw sugar market is easier and if any further declines are noted it will be reflected immediately on the local market. The first shipment of Australian oranges of exceptionally good quality has arrived on the market and are selling freely. Heavy shipments of Ontario tomatoes are on the market at lower levels.

STRONGER TONE TO COFFEE

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—The tendency in the market for coffee is towards higher levels, according to reports from primary points. The New York market is showing a firmer tone which is reflecting a firmer position on spot. Quotations remain unchanged with buyers purchasing in quantities necessary to meet their requirements.

PINK SALMON IS FIRM

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—There is a good demand for all lines of canned salmon. B. C. packers have announced that they will advance their prices on pink shortly. The department of Marine and Fisheries has ruled that all red Alaska salmon must be labeled Alaska Red only. The name sockeye must not appear on the label. Norwegian sardines will be late in arriving on the market this year as the catch is reported light and higher prices can be looked for. Domestic sardines are ruling firm. Pilchards and herring are in good demand with sales of haddies limited. There is practically no change in canned vegetables. There is a good demand for corn and tomatoes. Reports from canning centres state that the pack of tomatoes will be light and indications are that prices will be about the same as offered to-day. Opening prices on raspberries have been announced by both Eastern and Western canners and with the small pack quotations are higher than last year. New Hawaiian pineapple is expected around the middle of the month at higher quotations. Owing to the abundance of fresh fruits on the market the demand for canned fruits is quiet. Reports from Ontario state that prices on peaches and plums will be lower on account of the heavy crop. California fruits are practically unobtainable until the new pack arrives sometime around November.

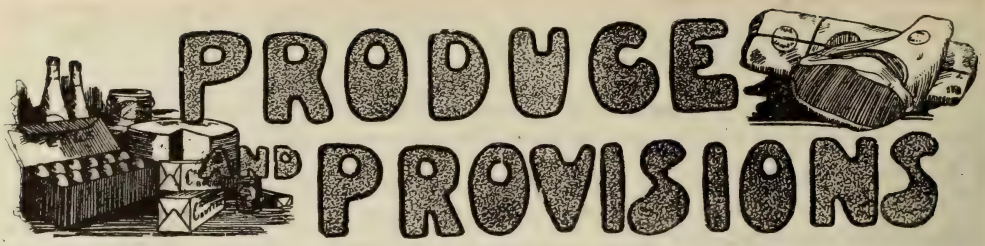
the report of the Commission will do much to emphasize them in the public mind. Conditions will not be changed by apathetically submitting—or by becoming occasionally indignant and raising the cry of "profiteer." Relief must be sought at the source of the disease.

With constant increases in congestion of population, with the continuous movement of people from rural districts into the cities, the problem promises to become more serious from year to year. There are no precedents to judge by. Cities so immense as those of which America now boasts—and perhaps mistakenly boasts—are a new thing in the world's history. Such exacting standards of living as those which our population in general now demands are also new. What working man two centuries ago would have demanded fresh meat or fresh vegetables in winter—would even have dreamed that such things were possible? Yet even the laborer in the most modest of circumstances now takes such things as a matter of course.

Either the present standard of living must gradually and surely decline, or the upward movement of distribution costs must cease. It is a matter for debate whether, under present conditions, distribution costs can permanently be lowered to any great extent. But at least it should be possible to check their increase.

Standardization the Best Way



In scaling down the cost of production, American industry has long ago hit upon standardization as the best modus operandi. Our chain stores, our automobiles, our ready made clothing, these are but a few examples of a universally accepted thing. The Commission now proposes standardization as a means of checking the rising price the consumer pays for farm products.

It recommends, first, standardization in production of crops in the various agricultural centres, so that a more economic selection, grading, and preparation of commodities in the producer's local markets will be possible. The farmer should, as far as possible, specialize in those crops for which he can find a demand in nearby markets—rather than ship commodities hundreds of miles—as in the case of California cabbage—before a purchaser is found. There are certain crops, however, not products of truck gardens, for which such shipping will be inevitable. In that case, careful selection and grading of varieties cultivated will eliminate the present unnecessary waste from culling after the products leave the farmer's hands. The Commission regards co-operative marketing organizations as especially adapted for developing a more uniform and standardized production. Authorized agencies are recommended for arbitrating any disputes that arise between shippers and receivers as to value, condition, kind, grade and quantity of commodities. Minimizing shipping movements and better organization of terminal facilities is urged, in order to dispense with the unnecessary waste of labor.

Need of a Smoother Flow

The Commission recognizes the necessity for a smoother flow and a more economical distribution of commodities in response to current consuming demand, and urges that warehouses be made to function as reservoirs, rather than institutions for the encouragement of speculation. In this same connection, speedy re-enactment of legislation regulating trading in grain futures is also recommended.

Converters of agricultural products, such as canneries and mills, are urged to reduce costs of distribution by adjusting production more definitely to current requirements. The Commission states that in an effort to reduce the cost of production by creating a great volume of manufacture, converters have adopted a policy of forced distribution, resulting in the accumulation of large stocks of idle merchandise in the hands of the distributors. These stocks carry constantly increasing taxes from invested capital, credit, interest, insurance, rent and depreciation—costs which the consumer must of course eventually pay. Struggles among the manufacturers of different trade-marked brands to gain control of the market are also condemned, since efforts to block the normal outlets of distribution of other manufacturers can result only in interrupted supplies and an uneconomic expense.

Never Has Any Waste With a Slicer Nor Does He Sell the Ends Any Cheaper

J. Wallace, Lake Shore Road, New Toronto, Has a Combined Meat and Grocery Business and Finds the Combination Works Well—One Section Stimulates Trade in the Other

AS HAS frequently been stated in this department of Canadian Grocer, a combined butcher and grocery store is a venture that works well. J. Wallace conducts such a business on the Lake Shore Road in New Toronto. He finds that one section helps to stimulate trade in the other. He has been a butcher longer than he has been a grocer, but adding groceries to his store has been a good move, and the turnover in the latter is equally as good as that in meats. He does not contend that he sells groceries to everyone to whom he sells meats, but there is no doubt that a great many people who come into the store purposely to buy meat also purchase groceries before leaving.

Is Well Equipped Department

On one side of the store is the grocery section and on the other the meats. In the latter department equipment for the speedy handling of customers and for the proper care and display of meats is provided. The meat counter is enclosed in glass, permitting displays under the best possible conditions. A meat slicer at one end renders a service that Mr. Wallace says he could not dispense with. "We never have any waste with that slicer," he told a representative of Canadian Grocer recently. "We sell the entire ham or side of bacon at the one price and do not dispose of ends at a reduced figure. We can cut ham or bacon right down to the last slice on the slicer. It is also possible to serve more people at a busy time when one has a slicing machine and with help who are not experienced butchers it is better for them to cut the smoked and cooked meats with the slicer. We average one ham a day in the summer, which I consider very good in a community such as this."

More Than One Brand of Bacon

Discussing his turnover in bacon, Mr. Wallace stated that he did not confine his sales to any particular brand. He bought two and three kinds sometimes and he believed they were all of first-class quality. His customers did not as a rule specify any particular bacon other than the best, and he carries only the better grades.

Sales of fruits and vegetables are also in heavy volume in this store. Mr. Wallace carries all varieties of domestic fruits in season, and in the summer months when other lines are moving a little slowly, they provide a splendid source of revenue.

Canada's Cheese is All Right Says J. A. Ruddick

Ottawa, Aug. 28.—"The analyst found nothing to indicate that the cheese was the cause of the illness, and the illness itself was not in any case serious." This statement was made by J. A. Ruddick, dairy commissioner, who is just back from a trip to Great Britain, in regard to the report that some Canadian cheese had caused the sickness of a number of residents of Dover.

Mr. Ruddick stated that as soon as he learned of the report, he had it thoroughly investigated.

"The matter," he said, "apparently attracted more attention in Canada than in the old country. The case has been entirely forgotten there and has done no harm to the trade in Canadian cheese."

Canadian Fruit Trades Commissioner Completes Tour

Ottawa, Aug. 28 (Special)—J. Forsyth Smith, Canadian Fruit Trades Commissioner in Liverpool, has just completed a tour of Ontario. About a dozen meetings were held throughout the province at which Mr. Smith gave a lot of useful and interesting information on fruit growing and handling in the British and continental markets. These talks proved of special interest to the exporters.

Mr. Smith will commence another series of meetings in the Maritime provinces, the first one being at Fredericton, New Brunswick, on the 31st of this month. After visiting a number of centres in New Brunswick he will address five or six meetings in Nova Scotia, commencing about the 7th of September, probably in Halifax.

Following these meetings, Mr. Smith will return to Liverpool.

Sardine Catch Is Affected By Weather Conditions

Montreal.—Word has just come from Christiania, Norway, that the largest shipment of sardines that has ever been made to America was recently shipped by the United Sardines Factories, Limited, of Bergen, Norway, to the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, of New York which operates a chain of stores throughout the United States. This shipment consisted of 25,000 cases of sardines.

Despite this, later reports come from Norway that the catch of sardines this year has been almost a total failure. Up until the 3rd of August there had only been six or eight real warm summer days, according to this despatch. The weather has been chilly and damp and not suitable for sardine fishing but the companies employed in this industry are hopeful that August would bring more seasonable weather and better fishing conditions. The lateness of the season, even though better weather should have followed this month, will set the pack back and will have a tendency to raise the market value of sardines imported to this country from Norway. The price of sardines is already high and local dealers fear that it may be still higher.

SENEGAL EXPORTS OF PEANUTS IN FIVE YEARS

The average quantity of peanuts exported per annum from Senegal during the five years 1916-1920 was 190,512 metric tons, according to the American Consul at Dakar, Senegal. Peanuts constitute the most important export crop of Senegal most of the exportable surplus going to England and France.

New Oleo Regulations Now Effective

Regulations Governing the Importation, Manufacture and Sale of Oleomargarine in Canada Are Announced, and Are in Lieu of Former Legislation Enacted in Aug. 1920, and April 1921

OTTAWA, Aug. 30. (Special)—The Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General in Council on the recommendation of the Right Honorable the Prime Minister, for the Minister of Agriculture, and in virtue of the provisions of section 8 of the Oleomargarine Act as amended, is pleased to order as follows:

The regulations relative to the importation, manufacture and sale of oleomargarine in Canada as established by Orders in Council of the 30th August, 1920, and the 9th April, 1921, are hereby rescinded and the annexed regulations are hereby made and established in lieu thereof.

These regulations shall have force and effect from August 19, 1922.

Importation

1. Every person who imports oleomargarine shall deposit with the collector of customs at the port of entry at the time the first entry is made by him one copy of his license to import.

2. Every person who imports oleomargarine into Canada shall deliver to the collector of customs for each lot imported a certificate of inspection of the country of production, except when the oleomargarine is manufactured wholly of vegetable oils or fats, when the certificate shall be in such form as may be required by the Minister.

Manufacture

3. Licenses to manufacture oleomargarine shall be issued only to such applicants as have satisfied the Minister that any building or buildings in which the applicant proposed to manufacture the oleomargarine is well lighted and ventilated, constructed of suitable material and provided with sanitary conveniences; that there can be no contamination of the oleomargarine by objectionable odors from packing houses, fertilizer or other sources; that the machinery and equipment is modern and capable of easy and efficient cleaning, and that the probable output of the proposed establishment will be sufficiently large to justify the employment of an inspector.

4. No oleomargarine shall be manufactured in Canada except under the supervision of inspectors appointed by the Minister.

5. No oleomargarine shall be manufactured in Canada in any premises used for or connected with the manufacture or reworking of butter.

6. All materials intended to be used in the manufacture of oleomargarine shall be inspected and approved before being used for such purposes. The inspector may at any time take samples of any such materials for analysis.

7. No oleo oil or neutral lard shall be used in the manufacture of oleomargarine unless it is the production of an abattoir under the inspection of the Minister, and bears the Government inspection mark, or has been manufactured in the country of origin under inspection satisfactory to the Minister and is at the time of importation covered by the official markings and export inspection certificate of the country of origin.

8. No milk shall be used in the manufacture of oleomargarine unless it is from non-reacting tuberculin tested cows or has been pasteurized under the supervision of an inspector appointed by the Minister, and no butter shall be used in such manufacture unless it is free from rancidity or any objectionable odor.

9. No preservative other than salt shall be used for the preservation of oleomargarine.

10. No person other than a licensed manufacturer of oleomargarine shall mix oleomargarine and butter.

11. No substance intended for the coloring of oleomargarine shall be imported into Canada in packages containing oleomargarine, and no manufacturer, wholesaler or retailer dealing in oleomargarine shall deal in, sell, or give away any substance intended for coloring oleomargarine.

12. No person shall use, or cause to be used, the words "Butter," "Creamery," "Dairy," or the name of any breed of cattle,—

(a) in any form of advertising or description of oleomargarine, or

(b) on any package containing oleomargarine.

Sale Regulations

13. No person shall sell, offer, expose or have in possession for sale in Canada any oleomargarine manufactured wholly from vegetable oils unless it is so designated upon all labels, brands or other markings.

14. No person shall manufacture, import into Canada, or shall sell, offer, expose or have in possession for sale any oleomargarine unless the word "Oleo" is stamped on the surface of the oleomargarine in capital block letters at least one and one-half inches high and of proportional width.

15. No person shall sell, offer, expose or have in possession for sale in Canada any oleomargarine unless it is contained in—

(a) the original package which shall bear the official inspection mark of the country of origin, together with the name and address of the manufacturer; or

(b) a small package wrapped separately having on the label or wrapper the word "Oleomargarine" printed or marked so as to form a most conspicuous word on the label or wrapper, as well as bearing the official inspection mark of the country of origin, together with the name and address of the manufacturer.

(c) provided, however, that no person shall sell, offer, expose or have in possession for sale in Canada any oleomargarine bearing on the package or container thereof the trade-mark or the name of the manufacturer in which is included any of the words "Butter," "Creamery," "Dairy," or the name of any breed of cattle.

16. In all hotels, restaurants and public eating places where oleomargarine is served there shall be prominently displayed in some conspicuous place a placard containing the words "Oleomargarine Served Here" in capital block letters not less than one and one-half inches long.

17. No label, brand or other marking shall be used in connection with the sale of oleomargarine until it has been approved by the Minister. Such approval may be withdrawn at any time on account of the violation of any provisions of The Oleomargarine Act, 1919, and an Act to amend The Oleomargarine Act, 1919, or any regulation made thereunder, whether such violation is due to the action of the manufacturer either in Canada or elsewhere, or of any wholesale dealer or other person who may be interested in the sale of oleomargarine bearing such label or brand.

18. No person shall sell, offer, expose, or have in his possession for sale any oleomargarine moulded or cut into prints or blocks unless such prints or blocks are of full net weight of one-half pound or one pound.

19. Any person charged with the enforcement of The Oleomargarine Act, 1919, and an Act to amend The Oleomargarine Act, 1919, may with the consent of the Minister,—

(1) seize and confiscate any apparatus or materials used or intended to be used in the manufacture of oleomargarine in contravention of any of the provisions of The Oleomargarine Act, 1919, and an Act to amend The Oleomargarine Act, 1919, or of any regulations made thereunder.

(2) seize and confiscate any oleomargarine which contravenes any of the provisions of The Oleomargarine Act, 1919, and an Act to amend The Oleomargarine Act, 1919, or of any of the regulations made thereunder.

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Aug. 31.—The produce market is quiet and inactive with weakness in many lines. Although live hogs show a half cent decline, fresh pork is slightly higher in price. Hind quarters of beef are firm but the market for fronts is quiet and weak. Bacon and smoked meats are steady but cooked hams show a weakness with a lighter demand on account of the change in the weather. Lard prices are unchanged. Butter has a weak tone but so far the price is unchanged. In some quarters there is already a decline in cheese prices, and on the whole the market is dull. This is accounted for in the inactivity of the export market and the accumulation of spot stocks. Eggs are going high with a noticeable decline in the receipts. There is no change in fish prices.

BUTTER MARKET IS WEAK

Montreal.

BUTTER.—While wholesale prices on butter are steady there is a weak tone evident in the market. The wide margin in value between butter and cheese is partly responsible for this weakness in addition to the inactivity of the export market. The local demand for creamery butter is good, but a decline in the price during the next week would not be surprising.

CHEESE PRICES ARE EASIER

Montreal.

CHEESE.—The cheese market is particularly quiet with little export. The local receipts show a big increase and the price is weak with a decline of 1 cent reported in the wholesale market. Until the export market shows more activity the cheese market may be expected to be easy.

EGGS.—The egg market shows a firmer tone with already a decrease in the local receipts. In some instances the wholesale price shows an advance with newlaids quoted from 37 to 38 cents per dozen, and selects at 34 to 35 cents per dozen. This is an advance of 2 cents a dozen over the price quoted one week ago.

CHANGES IN MEAT PRICES

Montreal.

FRESH MEATS.—There is a decidedly weak feeling in the meat market with the price of select light-weight hogs, weighed off cars showing a decline of 50 cents per cwt., making the price $12.50. Although the price of live hogs is slightly easier, quotations on cuts of fresh pork show an advance of 1 cent. Legs of pork are quoted from 22 to 23 cents, shoulders 20 to 21 cents. The beef market is a little easier with wholesale prices 2 cents lower than a week ago. Lamb is also reduced 1 and 2 cents per lb.

TORONTO MARKETS

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—In the Ontario produce markets this week, butter, cheese and eggs are all quoted at higher levels, the situation in these products being generally stronger. Export inquiry for both butter and cheese has strengthened the market. Consumption of eggs shows a considerable improvement in the face of limited supplies coming forward. The tendency in provisions is towards lower levels, and somewhat easier prices are also named on fresh meats, particularly in pork products. Cooked meats are selling well at unchanged levels. Lard and shortening are in fair demand at steady prices. Poultry receipts continue light and fish is moving in limited volume.

BUTTER MARKET STRONGER

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The market for butter is firmer at the present time, the demand for export having created a stronger situation. Buyers state, however, that the market is showing considerable fluctuation, one day being higher and the next somewhat easier. Creamery prints number one, are quoted at from 38c. to 40c. per lb., and number two at from 35 to 37c. per lb.

Inspectors appointed by the Minister shall have access at all reasonable times to any premises in Canada in which oleomargarine is manufactured, or stored, or kept for sale.

Every person who either imports, manufactures, or sells oleomargarine wholesale shall keep a special book in which is entered the date of each importation, purchase, sale and shipment of oleomargarine, and the quantity so imported, sold or shipped, the person from whom it has been purchased and to whom it has been sold or shipped, and the place from, in, or to which it was imported, sold or shipped, and the name of the railway or steamship company or other transportation agency by which such oleomargarine was transported, and such books shall at all times be open for inspection for any person authorized by the Minister to examine same. This special book shall contain no entries or information other than required by this regulation.

The Veterinary Director General for the Dominion of Canada shall have charge of the enforcement of the provisions of the Acts and of these regulations and of any other regulations made by the Governor in Council, in so far as such provisions or regulations relate to the manufacture and importation of oleomargarine.

Any pecuniary penalty imposed under these regulations shall when recovered be payable to the Dominion Department of Agriculture for the Receiver General of Canada.

Production of Beet Sugar In Germany Shows Improvement

Montreal.—Reliable information drawn from trade reports and the report of the special representative of the Department of Commerce, Berlin, puts the acreage under beet sugar cultivation in Germany this year at 894,140 acres as compared with 802,750 acres last year. In 1914 1,359,000 acres were under sugar cultivation. The yield of beet sugar is estimated to be 1,500,000 tons or 200,000 tons more than last season. This increase in the yield may suffice for the absolute domestic requirements but no surplus for export is anticipated. Approximately 100,000 tons of refined sugar have been sent into Germany since the import embargo was lifted in June last. A minimum of 50,000 tons additional must be purchased abroad to meet the home requirements between now and the beginning of the new crop.

Therefore, while next season there will not be the demand for imported sugar in Germany as there was last year there is no hope that she will be able to export any sugar into other parts of Europe or England as she did prior to the war. Canadian refineries have been and are kept busy filling export orders for refined sugar for European ports and the condition of the sugar market in Germany has an important bearing upon the sugar market in this country.

H. P. ECKART & CO. EMPLOYEES ENJOY ANNUAL PICNIC

Toronto, Aug. 22.—The employees of H. P. Eckart & Co., wholesale grocers, with their families were the guests of the firm at the annual picnic held recently in Victoria Park. About two hundred were in attendance, and a splendid program of races was run off, a number of beautiful prizes being keenly contested. The office and selling force played a game of ball against the warehouse staff, resulting in the former winning. Altogether a very enjoyable afternoon was spent.

Why Oil Storage Pays a Profit

To a great many merchants, the handling of kerosene and gasoline is merely a matter of accommodation. However, these two commodities can be made to yield a profit if properly sold.

Above, we show an installation of two one-gallon Wayne Pumps connected to underground tanks. If you sell kerosene and gasoline with a storage system like this, you will find it profitable. And here is why.

Sales are easier to make.

Measure is exact, neither over nor under. Unauthorized withdrawals cannot be made without your knowledge.

A constant check on the supply is always instantly available.

Spillage and waste are eliminated.

Valuable floor space is conserved.

Edible stock is kept free from the odor and taint of kerosene and gasoline.

These points make it worth your while to learn more about this better, profitable way of selling kerosene and gasoline. Our representative in your neighborhood is an expert on planning oil storage systems. Won't you let him call to see how your profits can be increased? There is no obligation involved, of course.

Write, and, when you do, ask for bulletins of Series CG.

DO NOT LOOK FOR A HEAVY RUN OF SHRIMP THIS SEASON

The canning of shrimp on the Gulf of Mexico was resumed on August 15, and canners report a very satisfactory booking of orders of the early pack. A number of producers have entirely withdrawn their offerings from the market, as they anticipate advances in prices since they do not look for a heavy run of shrimp this season.

NEW SMYRNA FIGS ON THE WATER

It is expected that the steamer Themistocles, which left Smyrna last Saturday will bring the first express shipment of layer figs of the new crop to reach New York, says a report. This shipment should arrive about September 22. The first regular shipment in September is expected to be made by the Constantinople, sailing from Smyrna on September 8 and due in New York about October 2. The booking for October shipment from New York of the various grades has been very heavy. The market is opening on a low basis. Buyers will receive their figs earlier than last season, in ample time for the holiday demand, and a very active trade during the coming three months is anticipated.

To Holders of Five-Year $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Canada's Victory Bonds

Issued in 1917 and Maturing 1st December, 1922

CONVERSION PROPOSALS

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers to holders of these bonds who desire to continue their investment in Dominion of Canada securities the privilege of exchanging the maturing bonds, for new bonds bearing 5½ per cent. interest, payable half yearly, of either of the following classes:—

(a) Five year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1927.

(b) Ten year bonds, dated 1st November, 1922, to mature 1st November, 1932.

While the maturing bonds will carry interest to 1st December, 1922, the new bonds will commence to earn interest from 1st November, 1922, GIVING A BONUS OF A FULL MONTH'S INTEREST TO THOSE AVAILING THEMSELVES OF THE CONVERSION PRIVILEGE.

This offer is made to holders of the maturing bonds and is not open to other investors. The bonds to be issued under this proposal will be substantially of the same character as those which are maturing, except that the exemption from taxation does not apply to the new issue.

Dated at Ottawa, 8th August, 1922.

Holders of the maturing bonds who wish to avail themselves of this conversion privilege should take their bonds AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE, BUT NOT LATER THAN SEPTEMBER 30th, to a Branch of any Chartered Bank in Canada and receive in exchange an official receipt for the bonds surrendered, containing an undertaking to deliver the corresponding bonds of the new issue.

Holders of maturing fully registered bonds, interest payable by cheque from Ottawa, will receive their December 1 interest cheque as usual. Holders of coupon bonds will detach and retain the last unmatured coupon before surrendering the bond itself for conversion purposes.

The surrendered bonds will be forwarded by banks to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa, where they will be exchanged for bonds of the new issue, in fully registered, or coupon registered or coupon bearer form carrying interest payable 1st May and 1st November of each year of the duration of the loan, the first interest payment accruing and payable 1st May, 1923. Bonds of the new issue will be sent to the banks for delivery immediately after the receipt of the surrendered bonds.

The bonds of the maturing issue which are not converted under this proposal will be paid off in cash on the 1st December, 1922.

Minister of Finance.

Write a Keepsweet Advertisement and Win a Handsome Cash Prize

This is the idea. Write an advertisement that will appeal to grocers and general storekeepers. An ad that you reckon should prompt them to place a whacking big order for Keepsweet Cream and Keepsweet Milk. You know the kind—real selling ads. To make it doubly interesting for you we are offering five cash prizes for the five best ads submitted. Recent mails have brought in the first batch of ads, and these indicate that the standard is going to be high.

How to Qualify

Only bona fide grocers or storekeepers handling Keepsweet, or their clerks, can enter this contest. Each advertisement must not contain more than 150 words. A "layout," diagram or rough plan of the advertisement must accompany "the copy" or material. Make your layout 7 inches by 10 inches deep or the size of this advertisement. Do not copy phrases from other Keepsweet ads. Use your own words to express yourself. Send as many ads. as you like. Write on one side of paper only. Use ink. Rough layouts may be in pencil. We reserve the right to use any advertisement or material received. None will be returned.

The prize winners will be selected by a group of advertising experts. And remember—the contest closes September 30th.

C. O. D. Service in Parcel Post System

Regulations in Connection With the Same Will Become Effective October First—E. M. Trowern, Dominion R.M.A. Secretary Says Association is Studying the Whole Postal Question—Others Believe Legislation is Direct Favor to Mail Order Houses

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the intention of the Dominion government to inaugurate a C.O.D. service in connection with mail matter, to become effective on October 1st.

E. M. Trowern, Dominion Secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, however, declares that the association must first study the effect of the measure just announced by the Post Office Department, before seeking to oppose and upset it. As outlined on this page, charges due the sender of parcels up to $100 may be collected from the addressee and remitted to the sender by post office money order.

Must Study the Effect

"On the face of it," Mr. Trowern stated, when interviewed by a representative of Canadian Grocer, "it would seem that this new legislation bestows a special favor on our mail order houses, and provides another contentious factor in the competition that the average retailer has to meet. But we have a great many merchants apart from our large mail order houses, who are doing and are building their business through the mails. Before taking any steps to prevent this legislation from being carried out. I would like to study the effect of it first. The Retail Merchants' Association is investigating postal rates and postal matters generally at the present time, and this is one of the questions that will be looked into. In the way of stamps for cheques and receipts when the new regulation in regard to the latter comes into force at the beginning of the year, we think that the Post Office stamps should not be used for these purposes, but only the Inland Revenue stamps. Where the latter are not used, the Post Office Department is getting the revenue that should go to the Inland Revenue Department to pay the war debt. We think that these special stamps should be sold in the post offices of the country where it is not convenient to secure them otherwise."

No Privilege of Examination

Asked as to the fact that the Retail Merchants' Association some years ago fought a similar measure as has just been brought down, Mr. Trowern stated that the new legislation is not quite the same as was opposed on a previous occasion. At the time in question it was proposed that people be permitted to have goods sent through the mails C.O.D., allowing them to examine the goods before acceptance was made, and, if not satisfactory, the same could be returned. Such a proposal, of course, never passed the proposal stage. The new regulations specifically state that no article is to be accepted for C.O.D. which bears any wording to the effect that the article may be examined before acceptance, as the C.O.D. service does not carry with it any examination privilege.

Direct Favor to Mail Order Houses

"The association is studying this C.O.D. parcel post question from every angle, you can tell retailers," Mr. Trowern added, "and their best interests will be served."

D. W. Clark, president of the Ontario Retail Merchants' Association, and grocer

CASH AND DELIVERY SERVICE IN PARCEL POST

OTTAWA, Sept. 1.—Anncuncement is made by the Postoffice Department that a C.O.D. service in connection with mail matter will become effective in the Dominion on October 1. The regulations under which the service will be operated are as follows:

On and after October 1, 1922, a C.O.D. service in connection with mail matter will be established within Canada, whereby charges due the sender up to $100 may be collected from the addressee and remitted to the sender by Postoffice money order.

This service will apply only in the case of mail matter posted at a money order postoffice for delivery at another money order postoffice within Canada. Rural routes, starting from money order postoffices, are for this purpose considered as money order postoffices and may be granted a C.O.D. service.

The C.O.D. fee also covers insurance and registration.

(a) The C.O.D. fee covers insurance in the case of parcels prepaid at parcel post rates, to the extent of the value, against loss, abstraction or damage, while in the custody of the postal service, not to exceed $50 when a 15-cent fee is paid, and not to exceed $100 when a 30-cent fee is paid.

(b) The C.O.D. fee covers registration in the case of articles prepaid at other than parcel post rates. This carries with it indemnity for loss only, which in no case shall exceed $25, or the actual value of the lost article when the same is less than $25.

Under the heading of general regulations, the announcement states that in specifying charges to be collected, the sender may include postage and C.O.D. fee paid.

It is forbidden to send articles C.O.D. which have not been ordered or requested by the addressee.

It Is Estimated That 5 Per Cent. of the Total Value of Stored Food Products is Damaged Each Year By Insects

A NEW bulletin, entitled "Insects Infesting Stored Food Products," Dr. R. N. Chapman, author, has just been issued by the agricultural experiment station of the University of Minnesota. The object of the bulletin, says Dr. Chapman, is to provide information for those troubled with insects in stored products so that they can determine for themselves what insects are causing the trouble, where they come from and what must be done to get rid of them.

5 Per Cent is Damaged

While there are no accurate statistics available, it is estimated that about five per cent. of the total value of stored food products is damaged each year by insects, or a total loss of around $200,000,000 annually in the United States. This staggering sum is not the entire cost bill by any means, because, as the doctor says, the entire business of a cereal company has been and may be ruined because the buying public found insects in some product.

"This enormous loss represents one of our greatest economic wastes for two reasons," says Dr. Chapman. "First, it represents not only the loss of a certain amount of grain, but also the loss of the labor of agriculture, manufacture and trade which has contributed to the harvesting, milling and handling of the product. Second, it is entirely possible to reduce this loss to an almost negligible minimum."

Insect problems of warehouses and wholesale and retail grocers are discussed in separate sections which emphasize the necessity of thorough inspection of all goods, of keeping warehouses clean and free from small amounts of flour and meal in corners and rafters, and of keeping the goods moving so that none will be stored for long periods of time. Conditions in the average warehouse are such that insects once gaining admission will thrive and multiply. The thing to do, therefore, is to keep them from getting in, or making conditions in the warehouse so unusual that they cannot live there.

Proper Inspection is Necessary

Dr. Chapman says that proper inspection of goods received, cleanliness in the warehouse and management of the stock to prevent long storage especially in hot weather are essential to keep insect pests out of warehouses. Methods of prevention like these, he adds, are worth more than all the known means of eradicating the bugs after they once get in.

Dr. Chapman contends that each warehouse should have its quarantine room so built that it can be closed tight and so equipped with radiation that it can be heated to a temperature of 130 deg. F. or fumigated.

"All infested material or material suspected of being infected should be put in this room as soon as its condition is discovered," he says. "Only stock that is known to be sound should be in the regular warehouse. This practice will prevent any insects from becoming established and will make for a reputation for dependable goods."

Inasmuch as the goods have passed through the hands of several dealers, and as each transfer has added another opportunity for insects to get into them, retail stores are even more likely to be infested than either the factory or the warehouse. It requires a horde of insects to destroy an appreciable amount of groceries, but when the fastidious housewife finds a single insect in the food or the slightest trace of insect work she is likely to return the goods and discontinue her trade. Dr. Chapman finds that small amounts of old breakfast foods in unswept corners are the most common source of insect life in groceries.

"The most important things for a retail grocer in protecting his stock from insects are," he says, "to accept only fresh, clean stock, and to keep his store clean and his stock always fresh. Unless these two things are done it is hopeless to try to keep insects out of the store. All who trade at a store where such care is not taken, run the risk of having their homes infested.

"The retail grocer should examine carefully some representative packages from each consignment of goods in order to see if there is any web on the sides or traces of insects in the material itself. All effort made in inspecting the goods upon their arrival will be lost if the store itself is not free from insects. Any material which contains them should be removed from the store at once, and fumigated, heated, or, still better, if it is badly injured, burned."

Carefully Cleaned and Painted

The problem becomes very serious, Dr. Chapman finds, when the insects have once got into the grocer's store. In such cases all the stock should be gone over and material which shows any signs of infestation should be removed to a quarantine room where it can be thoroughly fumigated or heated. After this process the entire store should be carefully cleaned and painted.

C. O. D. SERVICE AND PARCEL POST SYSTEM

on Avenue Road, Toronto, does not look upon this new regulation in regard to the parcel post system as anything but a direct favor to merchants doing a mail order business. The number of merchants outside the big houses, that are doing a mail order trade, he thinks is not large, and the great concourse of retailers will look upon this legislation as another factor in mail order competition, with which they will have to contend. The association in Mr. Clark's opinion should look into this question very thoroughly.

Wholesalers' Attitude

A. C. Pyke, secretary of the Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, when asked as to the attitude of his association to this question, stated that he had not seen the announcement, but that the matter would be taken up at an early meeting of the Ontario Association. He believed that wholesalers generally would be opposed to such a measure. The association had urged the government to readjust parcel postal rates, believing that the same were much too low in comparison with freight and express rates, giving an unfair advantage to mail order houses. He was of the opinion that the wholesalers' association would recommend such legislation as is now proposed when they come to discuss it.

Is Appealing the Judgment in the Wholesalers' Case

Toronto, Sept. 6.—The Attorney-General of Ontario is appealing the judgment of Mr. Justice Orde, as given a couple of months ago in the case against Canadian Wholesale Grocers' Association, T. H. Kinnear, A. H. Paffard, J. W. Chamberlain, A. C. Pyke, officers of an association, the statement of appeal reads, known as the Wholesale Grocers of Ontario, and also Thos. Kinnear & Co., W. H. Gillard & Co., Castle Ltd., E. W. Gillett Co. Ltd., Armstrong and Paffard, Ltd., W. C. Macdonald Reg'd. Incorporated, St. Lawrence Starch Co. Ltd., and Canada Starch Co. Ltd.

The plaintiff appeals to the Divisional Court from the judgment pronounced on the 24th of June by Mr. Justice Orde on the grounds that the acts committed and contemplated by the defendents, are unlawful, at common law, and by virtue of the criminal code, that the said acts are injurious to His Majesty's subjects. The plaintiff, it is claimed, is entitled to the relief sought in the within action.

BIG FIG CROP IN SMYRNA

Both in quantity and quality the Smyrna fig crop for 1922 is expected to exceed by 20 per cent. that of 1921. This estimate is based upon rainfall, winds and other climatic conditions prevailing during the past winter and spring. However, it is feared that only the same tonnage as last year (18,000) will be available, due to hazardous transportation from the interior to the coast.

Has Increased His Trade Seven Times

R. S. Jones Opens Store in New District One Year Ago and Business is Showing Gratifying Expansion—A Reputation for Handling Only the Best Butter and Eggs Builds Trade, Mr. Jones States

THAT district of Toronto comprising Bloor Street West of Dundas Street, and running towards the Humber river is developing at a rapid rate and grocers who opened in this section a year ago report an increase in business that is altogether gratifying. It is a case of expanding with the community.

Increases Trade Seven Times

R. S. Jones, Bloor Street, W., at the corner of Durie street, started in the grocery business just one year ago. He has an ideal location, with splendid window facilities for display, fronting as they do on both streets. He has increased his trade, during the twelve months, seven times, and he is well pleased with the way it is going ahead. His business, he told a representative of Canadian Grocer, is altogether a family trade. It has been built largely on a reputation for quality, and through the fact, he declares, that he has specialized in the sale of butter and eggs. "I buy the one make of butter," Mr. Jones stated, "and it is the best that can be bought. I have people coming from as far away as Roncesvailes Avenue for the butter I sell. The same is true of eggs. I stock only the freshest I can get. This reputation of carrying such high-class butter and eggs has been one of the biggest factors in increasing my trade. People who have come into my store, solely to buy these products have been sold other groceries, and have eventually become permanent customers.

Little Less from Credit

"Specializing in the sale of butter and eggs as I have done, has advertised my store in a way that has meant increased turnover in other lines. My business is conducted almost totally on a credit basis, some culstomers paying weekly, some fortnightly, and others only once a month. They are all good, and in the year my loss as a result of giving credit has only been a little better than three dollars, and that I believe is not lost but will be paid."

Mr. Jones believes in giving good service in the matter of delivery and finds that in his district it pays to do so. However for the service he gives, he states that he must be paid for it, and he strikes his prices accordingly. He insists on a fair reasonable profit on everything, and will not "cut" his prices to meet the competition of the cash and carry store, nor of the man who is "cutting" and giving the service of delivery and credit at the same time.

Use Windows for Display

Making the best use of the windows for display, and utilizing the counter and showcases too for the same purpose, Mr. Jones is getting results. If a new line comes on the market, and he has been convinced that it is a good article, he does not hesitate to introduce it to his customers. He does this by making a window display, placing some of the goods in question on the counter and suggesting it to customers when placing their orders. Recently he succeeded in placing in the homes of his customers, a certain product that he had stocked for the first time. He was more than pleased with the initial success of it, and he is now getting repeat business on it.

Slicer is Essential

Equipment of a kind to facilitate service has been installed by Mr. Jones. Discussing the meat slicer which he has in his store, Mr. Jones told a representative of Canadian Grocer that he would not be without it. With it, customers could be waited upon very much more quickly. Before he purchased it, one day he was cutting bacon with a knife, and the process was so slow, that he went to the telephone and asked the representative of the company making this machine to send one out at once. He could not get along without it. He has a discriminating bacon trade, and with a slicer it can be cut to their liking. He handles only one brand of bacon, and considers it of first quality. It is giving splendid satisfaction to his people.

HEAVY SALES OF FRUITS

R. White & Son, who have had a store at 138 Sorauren Avenue, Toronto, for a number of years, have now opened a branch store at 2260 Bloor Street, W. in the Runnymede district. This firm goes in for the sale of fruits and vegetables, also flowers in the summer months, in a big way. The windows are used for the display of fruit practically all the time, and displays are also made on improvised tables at the front outside the store. A lot of "catch" trade is the result of this special effort directed at fruit sales. The displays get the people into the store to buy fruit, and very frequently when in here for that purpose they buy other groceries as well, Mr. White told Canadian Grocer. "Fruits represent a quick turnover and a good profit."

EXCELLENT MALAGA ALMOND CROP PROMISED

Jordan and Valencia almonds from Malaga, Spain, will be plentiful this year, according to trade reports just received. It is estimated that the present production will be greater than last year's by 25 to 50 per cent., and the maturity about a week or two earlier. The grade or quality will be on a par with last year's crop with possibly a slight per cent. more of the large sized nuts. Prices will probably be somewhat less than those of last year, but it is yet too early to predict; much will depend upon the production of other Mediterranean countries and other factors. Some 1,701,181 pounds of Jordans and 2,583,357 pounds of Valencias were exported to the United States last year and a total of 896,657 pounds from January 1 to June 30, 1922.

Would Examine Patent Medicines

Inspector of the Department of Health, Ottawa, Advises Merchants to See That Preparations Received Conform With Legislation—Some Light on the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act

THAT the merchant should examine all proprietary medicines he receives to make sure that they conform to the Proprietary or Patent Medicines Act was a point emphasized by H. J. Dager of the Department of Health at Ottawa, in the course of an address on this subject recently.

What Act is For

The Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act is an Act placed upon the Statute by the Federal Government for the purpose of identification of manufactured preparations unlawfully compounded and sold to the public consumer, designed for the elimination of habitual formed artificial secret preparations to be passed upon by a properly constituted advisory board appointed by the government to determine the advisability in granting a license to sell, and serial registration number for identification of the manufacturer for preparations intended to be placed upon the market. The Advisory Board shall have power to prescribe what shall be deemed sufficient medication of medicines containing alcohol in excess of two and one half per cent. to make them unfit for use as a beverage, and also what shall be the maximum single and daily doses to be prescribed in the case of any medicines consisting of or containing any drugs mentioned in or added to the schedule to this Act, of which decision of Board is to be final in all cases.

Every manufacturer of a patent medicine shall apply annually for a license to sell each and every preparation manufactured, and no medicine shall be sold without being granted a serial number which number shall have been placed in conspicuous characters upon the label and wrappers with the words, "The Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act," which shall be sufficient to identify the medicine for the purpose of the Act, upon each bottle, box or other container. And any person furnishing false or incorrect statement upon oath shall be liable to a penalty for the violation, of such medicine sold or offered for sale.

No patent medicine shall be sold or offered for sale unless it has printed upon the package the registration number, or if it has the true formula or list of medicinal ingredients contained therein printed upon label or wrapper, then it would not come within the realm of a patent or proprietary patent medicine: the printing of a formula upon the package absolves it from registration.

There are other features of the Act which prohibit the sale of any patent medicine if it contains opium or any of its derivatives for internal use, also no such patent medicine shall be manufactured, imported, exposed or offered for sale or sold in Canada.

The Act further specifies that no person, firm or corporation shall distribute, or cause or permit to be distributed, from door to door or upon a public place, or highway, or through the mail any sample of a proprietary or patent medicine, provided this section shall not prevent manufacturers or wholesale dealers distributing samples to the trade. Patent medicines that do not conform to the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act are liable to be seized by any inspectors administrating the Foods and Drugs Act, and shall be forfeited to His Majesty and may be destroyed or otherwise dealt with as the Minister shall direct.

Furthermore, I may point out that patent medicines bearing the old registration numbers only under 4,000 indicating the Canadian Registration can be legally sold up to the year 1924, registration numbers from 4,000 upwards are for the individual registration for each preparation commencing at that number under amended Act, or in other words, when the Act was amended necessitating the registration of each individual preparation, the new numbers commenced at 4,000.

There is one more point I wish to draw to your attention; that is under the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act, the Department have been very lenient so far in the observation of the law. So far as I know, there have been no prosecutions made but there have been a large number of seizures of preparations that have not conformed to registrations; this cannot be expected to continue for all time. It is encumbent to examine Patent Medicines he receives in his store upon delivery; should he find they do not conform to the Act, they should be refused and returned.

The principle to be adopted is to see if the article bears any recommendation for a disease, either internal or external. It should bear a registered number.

Any inspector would be pleased to give you information if you would appeal to him either personally or through the mail.

MUST NOT MAKE EXTRAVAGANT CLAIMS FOR PROPRIETARY MEDICINES

RECENT contraventions of the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act in respect to medicinal advertising, have been brought to the attention of the Health Department at Ottawa.

"Either through ignorance of the law or through over-enthusiasm certain people have been making extravagant claims for their medicines in the advertising columns of the newspapers," said L. P. Teevens, Officer in charge of the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Branch, when discussing the matter with the Ottawa representative of Canadian Grocer.

Section 7 (f) of the Act provides that: "If any false, misleading or exaggerated claims be made on the wrapper or label, or in any advertisement of the article, its manufacture will be prohibited."

And again it is important that manufacturers of patent medicines remember that section 7 (e) of the same Act provides that no preparation subject to the provisions of the Act shall be represented as a cure.

The wisdom of both these sections may be realized when it is taken into consideration that articles which are claimed to have value in cases where immediate medical attention is required, are used without effect, thus delaying specific treatment until possibly the patient's life is endangered.

Mr. Teevens pointed out that applicants for registration under the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act are requested to state the medicinal ingredients which they employ in the manufacture of the medicines for which they seek registration.

He explained that this course was necessary in order that the department may know that the article presented for registration is a bona fide patent medicine.

Of course, the manufacturer is not obliged to give his secret process of manufacture, or state quantitatively, the drugs employed. A recital of the medicinal components is all that is necessary.

"What kind of people are those who have just moved in next door to you?" asked Mrs. Gadder.

"Oh, I never talk about my neighbors," replied Mrs. Herdso. "All I know about them is that their stuff came in one load; that only one of the bedsteads has any brass on it; most of the furniture looks old; there's six in the family; the children are all boys; they have dogs; the man is about twenty years older than the woman; they had a squabble with the driver of the van when they settled with him, and their name is Smith."

Establish Rigid Terms of Payment

Grocer Who is Doing 60 Per Cent. Credit Business Asks Advisability of Changing to Cash System—Is Counselled to Adopt a Stricter Method of Collections

By HENRY JOHNSON, JR.

THAT indefinable thing, "conditions," short memory and the hang-over from the easy days of 1917-19 still affect many merchants. One writes to me saying nice things about my writings and asking how he is to overcome certain troubles.

He has been in grocery-meat business eight and a half years, made $15,000 clear, of which he has some in cash, and runs credit to extent of 60 per cent. of sales. Collections last eight months very slow, has got in just enough to pay bills—which he has always discounted—but no more. Bills are small, mostly running to $15 to $30. Feels that if this keeps up he will run behind. Does $4,000 to $5,000 a month, 45 per cent. of which is meat. Small town of 3,000 with two cash and a lot of credit stores, lots of produce, things about like other country towns; wheat promises 40 per cent., corn is good and there will be some cotton.

Asks whether he should change to cash-carry, cash-delivery or without, self-serve grocery with meat market out front. Has good location.

Now, if we look back eight and a half years we shall get to January, 1914. Undoubtedly, he started small, and an industrious, intelligent man who starts small is more than apt to succeed rather easily and make money rapidly. Probably he did not feel the slow months of 1914 at all, never noted any slackness of war depression, but sailed right along, growing steadily in his little business.

Easy Times Spoiled Him

The eighteen months of semi-depression that followed the beginning of the war went by him unnoted. Then came the gradual, steady rise in values, the growing demand for goods, followed by the armistice and reckless spending. Up to the middle of 1920 he had never known a declining value, to speak of. Then things hit hard, and he was unprepared by any previous experience.

Having only $3,000 to $4,000 outstanding, with sales that average $4,500 a month, only about 73 per cent. of a month's sales are outstanding. He is turning his credit investment more than eight times a year. Nobody can hope to do better than that. So I wrote him that, while it was hard to say specifically what any man should do, I advised him to hesitate about changing any business to cash which now was running 60 per cent. credit.

I told him it was a disadvantage to have credit largely among farmers—whom, in my own business, I never trusted. Not because farmers are not honest, either, but because farmers as a class have no conception of time. So long as they intend to pay—and mostly they certainly do—they think things are all right, but the merchant has to meet his bills within ten days to keep his discounts and credit, and he cannot do that without money.

If there is any weakness—and with such a turnover of credit, I confess I cannot see much of it—I should say it lies in the failure to establish rigid terms of payment and then enforce them, regardless of specially favorable conditions. Had this been done during the flush times, no trouble would now be experienced. The remedy is to apply the rules strictly from now onward.

Live By Your Own Rules

Credit rules must be rigid. You must permit no deviation. You must not take liberties with them yourself to make special concessions to a favored few. If you do that, your rules go to pieces and you are worse off than if you had not made them. Bills must be payable every thirty days and then, with only a few days grace allowed—at most ten days—the accounts must be stopped if the bills are not paid. Moreover, payment must be in full. Balances must not be left. That means no balances—not a cent—never.

One potent factor in making collections effective is to get your bills into your customers' hands the first of the month. People pay first bills first. It's human nature. See that yours are always first. I counselled my friend to keep a stiff upper lip, keep cool, put into force the suggested rules and things would work out all right. For evidently his management has been good.

That was in July. Now comes September, with news from everywhere that, for the first time in more than two years, wages are advancing and men are scarce, that farm products are higher, and we know there is generally a abundant crop. The tide seems to have turned.

But let the lesson sink in. Get your credit in shape. Make your rules and stick to them. With that improvement, a credit investment which is completely turned every 45 days must be regarded as gilt edged, provided only that other factors in the business are properly related and correctly based. I assume they are in this case.

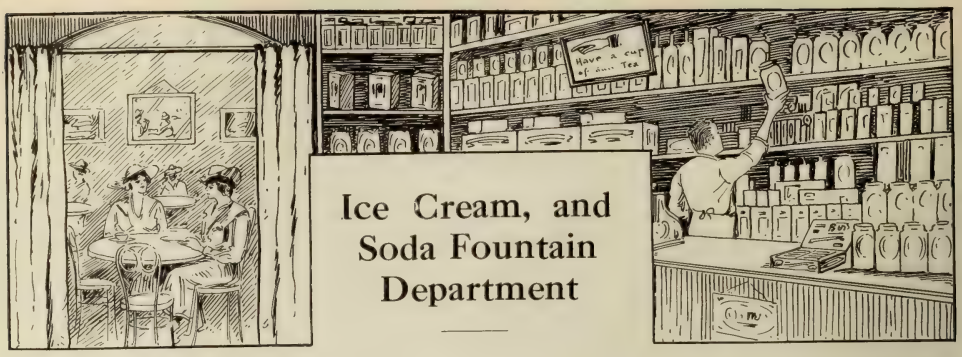
Similar Troubles Here Also?

Another letter from the copper mining country reports on a cash-and-carry grocery business started two and a half years ago on borrowed capital which now has $4,000 stock and $1,400 in bank, all free and clear. To put it colloquially, that doesn't look so awful cheesy! Two men have gained a livelihood, and apparently a good one, for two and a half years and cleared up $180 a month, $90 a month each, besides. From nothing, that looks good to me.

Have always done a cash business. A year ago were selling $5,000 a month, but now only $3,500, due largely to competition of large company stores wherein goods are sold 'way down. Apparently the big concern is losing steadily on its grocery sales, but that is small comfort to these "boys" whose reports show a few dollars made in one store and about the same lost in the other during the past month. One good thing is that they know what they are doing.

Question is, what can be done to increase volume to old basis? I hardly feel competent to answer that, though I know the larger town rather well. I believe that "conditions" are due to improve automatically and think that probably competition will be less vigorous as things ease up. Copper has been in the doldrums for some years now and is due to look up again.

Best course will be to keep expenses down to the minimum. Watch all leaks vigilantly. Plug hard to build business on good things, not on a cut-price basis, which usually means dud profits. Study the local newspapers, also one or two metropolitan newspapers, say to get slants on good advertising. Jones Store of K. C. will furnish lots of hints. Strive to build demand on certain things you control or on which you can excell, not on a price but a character and high quality basis. Then, Keep It Up. Trade building is not a touch-and-go, spasmodic undertaking. Make it part of your daily life and work. Keep vigilant. Work hard. Watch.



I believe those are all the hints these young men need.

"What do You Expect—Humming Birds?"

Maybe you remember the Hebrew clothier who sold a very cheap suit to a man who complained later that he had found moths in the coat. "Vell, vat you expect for de brice," said the disgusted dealer: "humming birds?"

This letter made me think as the Hebrew did. See if you agree: "Could you suggest a suitable container for displaying prunes? At present I am using cookie cans with glass front, but do not approve of this as cans are worth fifty cents apiece and carrying three

Ice Cream, and Soda Fountain Department

Advertises Ice Cream to His Trade As "The Cheapest and Best Dessert"

This Merchant Finds it Pays to Boost Ice Cream as a Dessert—In Selling at the Fountain it Pays to Remember Customers' Names

ICE CREAM the "cheapest and best dessert," is the way a merchant in northern Ontario plays up his ice cream department., and customers are invited to bring their friends to the soda fountain to enjoy a "service that will be appreciated."

There is, perhaps, no other department in the store where service is more essential, this retailer declares.

In selling at the fountain it pays to make an effort to remember customers by name and to remember their preferences and cater to these in every reasonable way. When a patron makes any complaint about a drink or a dish, it is best never to argue or hesitate but gladly prepare another or give the money back. Notice that the word "gladly" is used because you spoil the customer's good will if there is any grouchy, grudging hesitancy about doing so.

There is salesmanship in the way the dish is handed to or placed before a customer, the courteous, considerate way which is the direct opposite of shoving it or pushing it at the customer.

There is salesmanship in the way the dish or drink is prepared, in the attitude which indicates that the dispenser takes a pride in doing his work as well as it can be done. There is store salesmanship in periodically bringing out a new dish or new drink on the menu. People like variety and it makes customers talk and bring their friends. It is very important, however, never to advertise or feature any dishes that can't for any reason be served. Always be able to make good on the menu as shown to the customer.

For table service it is important that the tables, just like the fountain, should always be kept dry and clean. A good way to drive customers away is to have patrons get their hands or sleeves sticky with syrup on mussy tables or counters. It helps to keep tables clean by serving all dishes on a small plate. The patron lays the spoon on the plate instead of on the table and also any overflow from the dish is caught by the plate. In good dispensing, of course, there will not be any liquid or ice cream flowing down the side of the glass or dish but of course accidents and mistakes will happen occasionally.

Never allow any person while eating at tables or counter to feel that they are watched or under observation. It tends to hurry them and make them uncomfortable. At the same time be ready and quick to give any additional service that is required.

In preparing any drink or dish be very careful not to place the fingers inside the dish or glass but always to handle it from the outside.

Keep the ice cream dippers in clean running water. Always serve a glass of water with every sundae or soda. Don't make it necessary for the customer to ask for it. Fill the glass for the customer when it becomes empty. Make them feel that you will leave nothing undone to please them.

Serve small paper napkins at tables. Customers like to wipe hands or mouth. Serve them at fountains, too, or have them placed where the customer can readily reach them.

These Recipes Should Prove Popular

Cup de Luxe

One pint grape juice, one pint cider, one pint soda, one jigger of grenadine, lots of fruit, bunch of mint.

Apple Blossom

Two ounces of pure apple juice, teaspoonful sugar, one glass of milk, ice, shake well.

Grape Milk

Two ounces white grape juice, one teaspoonful sugar, one egg, glass of milk, ice, shake well, strain, serve with nutmeg.

Loganberry Fizz—Fizz Glass

Juice of half lime, split loganberry, half spoon sugar, frappe, fizz with siphon.

Airplane Special

On a banana split dish place a slice of coffee ice cream, surrounded with whipped cream. Lay a coffee eclair on the ice cream and fasten a Nabisco wafer to the eclair, by means of tiny wires or toothpicks stuck into each end of the wafer, to resemble the wings of the plane. On the eclair place two halves of a Brazil nut, representing passengers. (This sundae may be varied by using different kinds of ice cream and eclairs, but in each case the cream and eclair should be of the same flavor, to avoid a "messy" mixed taste. The trade is learning to prefer simple sundaes, instead of the elaborate concoctions of three or four different syrups, creams, etc., which cloy the palate.)

Hot Almond Chocolate

This is one of the popular things; it was on a few menus in the past and may take with the lovers of bitter things. It is prepared by pouring the usual amount of chocolate syrup into a mug and adding a dash or two of essence of bitter almond and then filling with the hot milk and topping with whipped cream in the usual way. Those who serve a finished chocolate can add the essence to that, but be careful not to overdo the latter.

Free service and free salvation are two exploded theories. Service and salvation both mean hard work, and hard work has to be paid for.—The Stirring Rod.

Sales of Ice Cream Both in Bulk and In Bricks Run High in This Store

A Grocery and Ice Cream Department is a Profitable Combination, Says C. Deffari, Who is Located at Queen Street W., and Indian Road, Toronto —Store is Handsomely Fitted to Give the Best Possible Service

CONDUCTING a grocery and ice cream business is a profitable combination, according to C. Deffari, who has an establishment of this kind, at Queen Street, W., and Indian Road, Toronto. As the accompanying photograph will indicate, Mr. Deffari's place is one of the most attractive of its kind, and is fitted with equipment that makes for quick and efficient service, to say nothing of the improvement it brings about in the appearance of the store. Opening some months ago, he has been more than gratified with the success that has attended his efforts. In a location where a great many people are passing, and near to the Sunnyside amusement resort, he has attracted a great deal of business, his sales of ice cream in bulk, running anywhere from eight to fifteen gallons every day, and the quantity of bricks disposed of have averaged from three to four dozen daily.

A Splendid Soda Fountain

Mr. Deffari has a soda fountain, enabling him to sell all the soda drinks, and a plentiful supply of other soft drinks are also kept. Decorated in attractive colors, grey predominating, the store is an attractive place wherein to drop for a dish of ice cream or a cooling drink. Tables seating four, on which are dainty menu cards, provide accommodation where the customer can partake of his cream or beverage in absolute comfort. Handsome, silent salesmen running alongside the fountain, display chocolates and other confections to best possible advantage. The grocery section is at the rear, but cannot be said to be in the background. One is immediately impressed wtih the fact that it is a combined grocery and ice cream palor. The groceries are nicely displayed, the grocery counter stretching across one end of the store.

A Big "Catch" Trade

Sales of groceries, Canadian Grocer was informed, are largely to a "catch" trade, and the ice cream department serves to attract a large volume of this class of business. People come into the store purposely to buy ice cream or some other beverage, and before leaving they have purchased various lines of groceries. This has happened in a great many instances, and in fact in this case the refreshment section is largely responsible for the increasing business being done in other foodstuffs.

A silent salesman in this store is set aside for displaying tobaccos. Sales of "smokes" of various kinds run into a good turnover and find a ready demand from the young men who come into the store for ice cream.

A window facing on each street provides splendid facilities for displaying goods, and during the summer these windows have largely been used for showing fruits. Special attention is directed towards the sale of fruits, both of the citrus varieties, and also of the domestic kinds in season. In fact all imported fruits are carried.

Fountainettes

One customer at the fountain is worth a dozen people on the sidewalk. Make your window display attractive.

Sometimes the "meet them with a smile" is overdone. Better a sober face to a customer than a silly one.

* * * *

If you advertise everybody knows you; if you don't you are a stranger. Your very best advertisement is the quality of the goods dispensed at your fountain.

* * * *

Flowers get away from the ground because they don't like dirt. Customers will get away from a sloppy fountain for the same reason.

* * * *

A few well selected and tested sodas and ices on the menu are likely to please more customers than a profusion of new concoctions.

The C. O. D. Postal Service

INAUGURATION of a C.O.D. service in the parcel post system of the country, as announced a few days ago, will be viewed by a great many retailers as giving further privileges to mail order houses, and as a question of prime importance to their interests, should be looked into at once, by the retail merchants of the Dominion. It is generally conceded that mail order houses have benefited the most since the first launching of the parcel post system, and adding a service of cash on delivery renders it possible for them to extend their operations, carrying as they may their business to the outlying parts of the country.

Retailers in the small country places have long since looked upon the competition of the mail order houses as contentious, and the granting of still further privileges, making it easier to collect payment for parcels shipped through the mails, will not be viewed with favor. It is up to the retailers, who in large numbers are opposed to such legislation, to see to it that their feeling in the matter is heard before the proper authorities.

Western Crop Estimate

IN ITS ANNUAL crop estimate, just published, the Manitoba Free Press places the wheat yield this year at 371,901,000 bushels from a total acreage of 21,471,000 acres. These figures exceed all previous estimates forecast by various authoritative bodies.

During the growing period of the crop there have been comparisons made with the famous crop of 1915, the paper says, when the total yield of wheat of the Prairie Provinces was 360,187,000 bushels from 13,867,715 acres. It is only necessary to compare these figures to realize that while the present crop of wheat in actual number of bushels is the largest ever produced in the West from point of average of yield, it falls very far below 1915.

Previous estimates made this year have varied from 297,781,000 bushels to 350,000,000, the former being the Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimate, based on conditions at the end of July, and the latter the Grain Trade News estimate.

This year's Free Press estimate would average 17.31 bushels to the acre, while the banner year 1915 the average was 25.97 bushels.

Other grain yields in the Prairie Provinces this year are estimated as follows, the figures in parenthesis indicating the acreages sown:

Oats, 413,539,000 bushels (10,861,000); barley, 61,080,800 bushels (2,053,400); rye, 54,311,000 bushels (2,329,000); flax, 3,088,000 bushels (504,200).

Threshing is general throughout the entire length and breadth of the Prairie Provinces and threshing in northern districts is generally from two to three weeks earlier than it has been for many years. Never in the history of the West have the railways been in a better position to move the crop in the matter of cars.

The Hon. Chas. Stewart, one time Premier of Alberta, and now Federal Minister of Immigration, speaking to the retailers at the luncheon of the directors of the Canadian National Exhibition, last week emphasized the fact of a bounteous harvest this year, and declared that retailers could now look to a return of better days in business. There is no doubt but the good crops that are now assured will do more to eliminate depression and to revive trade again to a state of normalcy than any other factor.

End of Rolling Stores

A FAILURE of the Grocery Store on Wheels in San Francisco recently, otherwise known as "The Store at Your Door Company" for which a petition in bankruptcy was filed, should be a lesson for others who are prone to risk their money on such innovations.

Gay Lombard, the president of the company, imagined he was going to revolutionize the distribution of groceries in San Francisco and that the consumers would flock about him, endeavoring to purchase stock in this great enterprise, but in neither case did his dreams come true.

A "rolling store" is not practicable for many reasons, and when all is said and done, there is great satisfaction to the consumers to be able to know that at any moment of the day, it is easy to phone their neighborhood grocer and be promptly served. If a few moments after the delivery boy has departed, there should have been some error in the order, it is quickly remedied.

The "Store on Wheels" savors too much of an irresponsible peddler and in this enlightened sanitary age, the peddler is only patronized by those who are willing to take a chance to save a few pennies. Again, the wear and tear on equipment, ascending and descending the hills of San Francisco, would make the overhead far greater than at first supposed.

Where Attention Counts

PEOPLE frequently enter a store without any idea of making a purchase. This is particularly true if the store is attractive and well arranged. In this regard a grocery can be especially inviting to the person looking for something fancy and appealing in the way of foods. In fact an invitation to the public to come in and look around, without any feeling or obligation of having to buy has proved worth while to a good many merchants, increasing sales in a volume altogether gratifying.

While many stores increase their sales in this manner, there are others where this invitation to the public to inspect the wares results in a direct loss simply because the clerks, and in many cases the proprietor himself, have not mastered that knack of making the customer feel at home while in the store. The result is that the persons so treated are apt to switch their trade to a store where courtesy is the watchword of the sales force. Let the man in the store put himself in the customer's place. Is it not a fact that you yourself would be very apt to go back to the store and to the sales clerk where you received the most and best attention while on a looking-around tour; where the most pains were taken to show you everything; and tell you everything you wanted to know? You know that is just what you would do, providing you saw something that took your fancy and suited you. Then why not give visitors even more attention—if such a thing is possible—than if you knew they had come in to make a purchase. A "looker" or a careful shopper is always a prospective customer.

Await Outcome of Greeks' Effort to Hold Back Turks

Montreal, Sept. 6 (Special)—Local importers are awaiting with interest, news of the success or failure of the Greek troops to hold back the invading Turks. Smyrna itself is now in danger with all the newly-harvested crops awaiting shipment. Should the Turks cut off shipping from that port many of the lines of dried fruits expected for the fall and winter trade will not be on hand. The trade has been looking forward to the delivery of the goods on which remarkably low prices have been quoted and the whole trend of prices in this line has depended on the abundant supplies promised by Greece. Conditions are now critical and developments have an important bearing on the grocery market in this country.

Claims This Article Is Adulterated And Misbranded

Ottawa, Sept. 6 (Special).—A product labelled as National Cream which has been found to be adulterated and misbranded has led to action on the part of the Pure Foods Branch of the Federal Health Department. The details are set forth in correspondence which has been placed in the hands of J. C. Campbell, secretary of the Eastern Ontario and Ottawa district branch of the Retail Merchants' Association. A letter from V. Kitto, acting chief Dominion analyst to Mr. Campbell, states that sample has been examined and the results of analysis are as follows:

Total solids, 87.0 per cent.; Lead Number—Trace; Sucrose, 39.2 per cent.; Glucose, 42.0 per cent.; Starch, Present.

This shows, the department claims, that it is adulterated and misbranded. The department further states that any stock that has been shipped out to the trade, the manufacturer should be held responsible for it being taken off the market.

Fined for Selling Blended Vinegar As Cider Vinegar

Listowel, Ont., Sept. 2.—For selling blended vinegar as cider vinegar, two grocers here were fined recently. One charge was heard in court, while the other was settled out of court, the fine amounting in one instance to $57.90 and in the other to $47.90.

In finding the accused guilty of selling blended vinegar for cider, Magistrate Hamilton made it plain that he considered Mr. Vandrick in no way criminally guilty, and considered the minimum penalty under the Act, of $25 and costs, where the product sold is not injurious to health, too high. "If I had my own way," he said, "I would make the fine $5.00." Magistrate Hamilton also criticized the government for their delay in prosecuting, the samples having been procured in February.

The costs in connection with the case included $10 for analysis, $10 for counsel fee, and $7.90 for traveling expenses.

Where Currency Is Not Depreciated No Certificate Required

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—Instructions to Customs and Excise officers respecting the importation of goods from foreign countries whose currency is substantially depreciated, based on the amendments to the Act passed by parliament last session, have been issued by the Departments of Customs and Excise. Officials are advised that the currency certificate of a Consul, Trade Commissioner or bank, in the form previously specified, is not to be required in the following instances:

1. In respect of invoice goods imported from a country where the currency is not regarded by the department as substantially depreciated, in which case the present authorized certificate of the exporter, showing the relative value in standard currency or paper currency of the invoice is to be accepted, subject to the usual verification by the collector at the port of entry.

2. Where the depreciation or appreciation of the currency of invoices compared with the currency of Canada is less than one per cent. In respect of such invoices the collector will accept entry as at present and compute the value for duty purposes in accordance with the governing rate of exchange as shown by the appraiser's bulletins.

All invoices of goods imported from a country where the currency is regarded as substantially depreciated shall bear thereon the currency certificate of a Consul, Trade Commissioner or bank in the form specified, and until further ordered this instruction will apply to invoice goods imported from Germany, Austria, Hungary, Jugo-Slavia and Russia, and to countries where the currency has no fixed standard value.

Are Heavily Fined for Selling Inedible Eggs

Edmonton, Sept. 6.—Successful prosecutions of merchants who have been evading the regulations with respect to sale of eggs unfit for consumption, have been conducted recently by the poultry branch of the provincial government. Some of the offenders in this regard were located at Vegreville, where it was found that two concerns had offered inedible eggs for sale contrary to the regulations of the government.

Prosecution was undertaken and after a lengthy hearing, a fine of $50 and costs, the maximum under the regulations, was imposed by Magistrate MacIntyre on a Vegreville firm. Another charge was laid against another retail dealer, who keeps a store at Vegreville. He was fined $5 and costs.

The officials of the poultry branch of the Department of Agriculture are determined to enforce the regulations with respect to marketing of bad eggs, and where necessary are ready to take action similar to that recorded.

Edmonton Retail Grocers Discuss Pricing of Goods

Edmonton, Aug. 30.—An educational campaign in the matter of pricing of goods was decided upon by the grocers' section, Retail Merchants' Association, at a special meeting held in the Board of Trade rooms the other night. Circulars setting forth the recommendations made will be sent to all grocers within the city limits of Edmonton, with a view to securing their co-operation.

The trading policy of wholesale houses within the city was also a topic of discussion. An endeavor is being made to remedy certain conditions that handicap the retail trade.

Want the Chinese Kept Off the Victoria Market

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 6.—The Public Market is again under fire. C. E. Whitney-Griffiths, secretary of the advisory board of British Columbia Farmers' Institutes, urged the Chamber of Commerce recently to support his organization in a fight for enactment of a by-law to prevent the sale of Chinese goods in the market.

"The market was organized and reopened for the benefit of the producers of the Island and it is hardly conceivable that we should allow imported goods to be sold or that foreigners should be permitted to build up a lucrative business to further strengthen their hold in our country and by such means bring in yet further undesirable people who cannot or will not ever assimilate with the white race," stated Mr. Whitney-Griffiths.

James H. Beatty, a director of the Chamber of Commerce, stated that some of the stallholders at the market were not producers, but merely acted as retailers for other growers.

President J. W. Spencer estimated that 60 per cent. of the fresh garden produce sold in Victoria came from the farms of Orientals.

A story is told about an old Southern negro who was asked by the proprietor of a store how he happened to need credit when he'd had such a good onion crop.

"De ducks got 'bout all dem onions, sah," was the mournful reply.

"What do you mean the ducks got them?"

"Well, you see," explained the old man, "I sent dem onions up to Memphis an' dey deducts the freight, an' dey deducts the storage charges, an' dey deducts the commission, an' dey deducts the taxes—yes sah, de ducts got 'bout all dem onions an' dat's why 'm here."

Turnover—What it is, What it Does

Deliberations of the University of Nebraska on Vital Subject to Every Retailer—Rate of Turnover is the Measure of a Manager's Ability—Capital Turnover Takes Three Forms—Six Reasons Given for Importance of Turnover

UNIVERSITY of Nebraska has recently embarked upon a research dealing with business and business methods. It is one other evidence of the growing interest and importance attached to the science of retailing and the economy of distribution. In a bulletin they have just issued on the question of turnover, they deal with some of the fundamentals of business success and adminstration which it is well to keep ever fresh in the mind. This year, more than many that have passed, is one in which great attention is being given to the question of turnover and its importance to the well-conducted business. The term, turnover or stock-turn, is a familiar one and the rapidity with which a stock of merchandise or commodities moves in trade may be taken as a measure of a manager's ability.

What is Stock Turnover?

In defining the term, turnover, the bulletin of the Nebraska University says:

To the manufacturer who makes over the form of the materials which he buys before he resells them at an increased value, the rate of turning his entire investment in working capital may be more significant than the rate of turning that portion invested in stock of materials or commodities. For him the cost of goods sold consists not alone of purchases of materials, but also of labor in the form of wages paid, fuel, supplies and other elements of manufacturing, and turnover is consequently a more complex matter. He usually conceives of turnover as meaning the turning of his working capital as a whole rather than of only that portion which is immediately invested in merchandise materials.

Capital turnover may, therefore, be considered as taking three forms:

In the first place it is the turning of the amount of capital invested by the merchant in merchandise. This rate may be found by dividing the cost of goods sold by the average amount of working capital invested in merchandise during a given period.

In the other two forms turnover, as viewed by the manufacturer, may refer either (1) to the annual rate of movement of the entire working capital invested in his business or (2) to the rate of turning his total investment of capital, fixed and working, which may be employed in the business. These two forms of turnover may be found by dividing in the first instance, the cost of goods sold by the average amount of the entire working capital, and in the second instance by dividing by the amount of the total investment. The former method gives the turnover of the entire working capital of the manufacturer, and this corresponds roughly to the merchant's stock turnover within a given period. The latter method shows the turnover of the total invested capital. Each one of these rates is important and must not be overlooked but the turnover of working capital is given particular attention because of the fact that it can be speeded up and managed more advantageously than can that of the total investment.

Importance of Turnover

Six reasons are assigned for the importance of turnover to the successfully operated business.

1. Increasing the rate of stock turnover is one means by which a manufacturer or a merchant may increase his sales of goods without a corresponding increase in expenses. It must be borne in mind that operating expenses include both indirect, or fixed, and direct expenses. The former include such items as insurance, rent, interest on borrowed money, and taxes, while direct expenses consist of wages of the sales force, advertising and the like. A high turnover distributes the fixed expenses over a larger number of units, and thereby reduces the cost of handling each unit sold. So long as the fixed expenses and the profits on each unit sold remain the same, increasing the number of annual turnovers will make possible a greater net profit on the same capital invested in the business.

Even though the percentage of profit on an article is only 15 per cent., if it is earned often enough, in a year the turnover on money, or rate of profit on investment may be many times 15 per cent. It has been found that an article like Uneeda Biscuit may turn over as many as 52 times a year, and a dollar invested in such goods might, therefore, earn the margin of profit 52 times.

A dealer might earn satisfactory profits on a five per cent. margin of profit on an article, if he sold it often enough; and he might easily lose money on an article offered at a 100 per cent. profit margin, if he carried a large stock and rarely made a sale.

2. It is necessary to know what the annual turnover is, in order to know just what margins to add to the cost price of the different commodities handled. And the average net profit desired can be best determined in this way. The business man or merchant, must know, and not guess, how many times he sells out completely the value of his stock in trade in a given period, and relate that number to the percentages of gross profits on each line handled in order to gain the general average of net profit desired. For example, if a stock of goods turns five times a year, and, assuming that each article in the stock turns with equal rapidity and with its proper percentage of total expenses added to its cost price, a net profit of 5 per cent. could be earned by setting the selling price only a little over 1 per cent. above the cost price.

If the annual cost of doing business is 25 per cent. of the total sales, the margin of gross profit, or the mark-up on the cost of individual articles, must be sufficient for all articles sold to average 25 per cent. on their cost. Obviously, this does not mean that each commodity must bear a 25 per cent. margin or spread. The vital question for the business man is always how much profit the dollar invested can be made to earn in selling the article.

3. In these days of public outcry against current prices a rapid turnover is an advantageous way to meet the high cost of operating a business. When costs rise with selling prices fixed, or when selling prices fall with costs remaining the same, dealers must buy and sell on narrower margins of profit. Under such conditions the margin of gross profit is reduced, yet small profits on a larger number of units, totaled for a year, may equal or exceed, the net gain derived from stock carrying greater gross profits but turning less rapidly.

4. Dividing or scattering the costs of doing business over many turns enables the merchant and business man to meet competition, whether of new or of old firms.

The experience of two Indiana stores may be cited: "Rapid turnovers, for example, are to-day securing the trade of a new five-story department store in a small Indiana city for a less pretentious shop diagonally across the street. Its quick returns allow the smaller store to make money on margins so narrow that it repeatedly cuts under the prices set by the big rival's slow turnovers."

5. Rapid movement and replacement of stocks eliminate shelf-worn and out-of-date goods. Clean and up-to-date lines tend to make a favorable impression upon prospective customers. The proprietor of the business might also be expected to take a keener interest in offering and advertising a clean stock of recently-produced goods.

6. Manufacturers and merchants with relatively high turnovers as compared with their competitors derive the bene-

Weekly Grocery Market Reports

Statements From Buying Centres

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

WHOLESALERS report more activity in the trade in the past ten days, and indications point to a resumption of demand and improvement generally in the fall months. The sugar market is unchanged as compared with a week ago, prices holding at last week's decline. Trading in sugar, however, is inclined to be a little slow, dealers having pretty well prepared themselves for the preserving season rush. The refined situation on the other side is reported dull and some refiners have been quoting $6.50 and $6.60 per cwt.

The canned goods market is much the same as a week ago. No change is reported in prices, and demand is in moderate volume. The feature of the market for dried fruits is the announcement this week of the prices on the new pack California prunes. F.O.B. prices show an advance of from a cent to a cent and a quarter over last year, but on account of the favorable situation in exchange this year, prices laid down in Canada should not be so high. Delivery is looked for in October and November. The cereal market tends easier, but the prices as quoted a week ago are unchanged. There is a fair inquiry for the same, the package lines at this time enjoying the greater demand. Both coffees and teas are at strong levels. The latter commodity is in a firm position, practically all grades showing a tendency to move to higher levels. Rices are inclined to be firm, although on spot prices are steady, and buying is not in any large amount. Much activity is evidenced in spices, the preserving and pickling season stimulating the inquiry. Quotations hold steady and strong.

A reduction is announced this week in the price of flour. The market has been reported easier for the past few weeks, and the anticipated decline has taken place. However, wholesalers state that the market is steady at the lower levels, and they declare that further declines are unlikely for the time being at least. Millfeeds are unchanged, and demand for the same is quiet.

Fruits and vegetables continue to arrive freely. Crawford peaches are beginning to come, and are selling at fairly reasonable prices. Plums, pears and apples are plentiful, and quotations easy. Potatoes are easier, and practically all vegetables are ruling at attractive levels.

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Sept. 7.—The whole grocery market has been particularly quiet during the past week but since the holiday and considering that the schools are now open the prospects are brighter. Yet confidence is lacking and this must be renewed before buying will gain the proportions hoped for. Sugar is mainly responsible for destroying the hopeful signs that were evident. The refiners' price is steady with evident firmness to raws but wholesale prices continue to be cut with corresponding cuts in retail prices. Canned goods are unsettled and the trend is downwards with a few changes. The dried fruit market is uncertain mainly on account of developments in the east. The coffee market shows no change. Black teas are stronger and may go higher this winter. Japan teas stand firm. The spice market shows more activity but with little price change locally. A reduction in self-raising flour is the only feature in package goods. A weak tone in cereals for the future is limiting buying but prices for spot stocks are steady. The rice market shows an easy tone for the fall. Fresh fruit prices are low and the offerings large. Quotations on cabbages, potatoes, tomatoes and onions are lower. Wholesalers are quoting some lower prices on nuts.

CEREALS.—There is a weak tone to the cereal market that is not surprising in view of the crops that are being harvested. As yet there have been no actual changes in quotations but prices are being cut on spot stocks and buying is limited in view of the tendency towards lower prices.

CANNED GOODS EASIER

Montreal.

CANNED GOODS.—There is little buying being done in canned goods yet, but prices in general show an easy trend. The only stocks of the new pack yet on the market are of peas, wax beans and some corn. Canned fruits are also easy and some lower prices on jams are quoted. Green gage plums 2s in H. S. are reduced to $1.65 for choice grades and $1.50 for standards. Clark's quoted a reduction on some sizes of the different canned meats put up by them. A reduction is also made in catsup, the 9 oz. bottles being quoted at $1.85 and the 12 oz. are reduced 40c. a doz. Gorman Eckert's Olive Butter is also reduced 75c. a doz. to $3.00 for the 6 oz. glass.

PRUNE PRICES EASIER

Montreal.

DRIED FRUITS.—Although the new prices on prunes have not yet been quoted by the wholesale trade the revised prices on spot stocks, such as there are, are a little easier. Apricots are high and likely to remain so but this week there is an easier feeling on account of the demand being cut off by the high price. The war in Greece is playing havoc with produce from the east and already Smyrna raisins have shown a jump of 5 shillings. The production may be entirely cut off.

PACKAGE FLOUR LOWER

Montreal.

PACKAGE GOODS.—The only change in package goods is a reduction in self-raising flour which makes the price for the 3½lb packages $2.05 a doz. and $4.00 a doz. for the 6-lb. package. Package rolled oats is steady and is likely to remain so until the new crop of oats is ready for the market.

RICE MARKET IS QUIET

Montreal.

RICE.—The rice market is quiet with only a limited demand at present. Like cereals there is a tendency on the part of buyers to hold back in the expectancy of easier prices. There is a weak tone to the market and dealers frankly admit that prices may be easier this fall.

SUGAR PRICES LOWER

Montreal.

SUGAR.—Late last week the refiners reduced their price on refined sugar 25c. a hundred lbs. This came without any surprise to the trade and as a result of the accumulating weakness in the refined market. The United States has been experiencing the same condition but more activity is now showing across the border. Still there is weakness in the local market prices, even below the $7.00 mark are being quoted by the local wholesale grocery trade and confidence is absolutely lacking in the retail trade.

SYRUP PRICES STEADY

Montreal.

SYRUPS.—The market for syrups is steady throughout. Molasses maintains its price but without any activity which would attract attention.

INDIAN TEAS STRONG

Montreal.

TEAS.—There is a stronger note to the tea market and reports on the Indian tea crop show that it is short and a firm price rules with a likelihood of an advance. Already London is quoting an advance on the cheaper grades of black tea on hand and it would appear that for the next four or five months prices will at least stand firm in the local market. The Japan market maintains its strength and the third crop is being rapidly cleaned up.

SPICES ARE STEADY

Montreal

SPICES.—The local spice market is steady without any changes of note. There is, however, a stronger tone breaking abroad and in many lines a scarcity is reported. Mace and pimento is scarce and gingers are in good demand with limited supplies. Cloves are active with easier prices admitted for October delivery.

FRUIT PRICES LOW

Montreal.

FRUIT.—The fresh fruit from Western Ontario features the local market and low prices make offerings attractive. Yet the local trade has found it difficult to turn over the big supplies. Apples are a glut on the market and prices are exceedingly low. Plums and apples are being marketed in bulk to reduce the cost of packing in view of the small return. Reliable quotations on fresh fruit cannnot be made on account of the almost daily fluctuation. Lemons are a little lower in price.

ONTARIO MARKETS

TORONTO, Sept. 6.—Changes in the markets this week are not numerous. With the return of a large number of people to city and town homes from their summer places, it is expected that business will now show an improvement. Wholesalers already report a greater volume of trade. The sugar market is inclined, however, to be dull, and prices are unchanged. Canned goods are steady and moving in limited volume. The new prices on California prunes are announced, and f.o.b. prices are higher than a year ago, but quotations on spot should be lower this year on account of there being no adverse exchange situation. Teas and coffees are strong markets. Spices are moving in good volume. The flour market is inclined to be weaker, and reductions in prices are announced this week. Fruits and vegetables continue at much the same levels as a week ago.

Toronto.

CANNED GOODS.—The market for canned goods is steady and unchanged as compared with a week ago. There is a moderate inquiry for this period of the year, when canned goods, as a rule, are moving slowly. NEW PRUNE PRICES ARE HIGHER

Toronto.

DRIED FRUITS.—Prices on the new pack California prunes are announced this week, and range from a cent to a cent and a half higher than last year's opening quotations. However, the quotations laid down in Toronto are not as high as a year ago, for the reason that there is now no exchange, and freight charges are also somewhat easier. Prices f. o. b. common shipping point California are as follows:

20-30s	.25
30-40s	.14¾
40-50s	.12
50-60s	.10½
60-70s	.9½

80-90s	.7¾
90-100s	.7¼
100-120s	.6
120s and up	5½

Prices laid down in Toronto are from two to two and a half cents higher than the f.o.b. California quotations. Delivery of the new prunes is expected in October and November.

Other dried fruits are unchanged, and the demand for the same is good.

WALNUTS AND ALMONDS PLENTIFUL

Toronto.

NUTS.—Little change is reported in nuts on spot, and reports from primary markets indicate plentiful supplies of foreign walnuts with almonds in much the same position. Pecans are said to be scarce and are likely to be high. Brazil nuts are selling a little slowly at primary points, buying for the fall trade being rather quiet. The market for peanuts is steady and strong.

RICE MARKET IS STRONG

Toronto.

RICE.—According to reports, the restricted movement of new crop rice into the primary markets because of a delay in the maturity of the product, and the limited supplies of old rice, both tend to give strength to the market, and offset the dullness which has been the feature for some time, says a report from primary points. Quotations on spot are showing no change, but the situation is generally strong.

SUGAR QUIET AND STEADY

Toronto.

SUGAR.—The sugar market is pretty much in the same position as a week ago. Prices on spot are holding at last week's levels.

Last week, says Willett and Gray's reports, saw the end of the liquidation of September options and which carried the price of Cuban sugars in store, to 4.80c. duty paid or a parity of 3 3-16c. c. and f. for Cuban sugars.

After such a severe decline, the market naturally reacted sharply and Exchange quotations at this writing have advanced to 3.69c. for December compared with 3.38c. last week. With these cheap stored sugars out of the way, refiners naturally turned their attention to sugars for shipment from Cuba and finding that the lowest available offerings were at 3 5-16c. c. & f. (4.92c.) American and National purchased some 30,000 bags of Cubas in nearby positions at this price while the American also secured a cargo for prompt shipment at 3⅜c. c. & f., this cargo having the privilege of shipping to outports. Cuban holders showing but little disposition to offer sugars, refiners had to advance their buying limits but even this did not have the incentive to increase offerings and after a small sale of spot sugars at 3⅜c. c & f., refiner's bids of 3½c. did not result in business, seller's views being 3¾c. c. & f. (5.36c.).

The refined market on the other side is inclined to be dull and irregular, two refineries quoting 6.50c. Demand is in small volume.

TEA MARKET IS STRONG

Toronto.

TEAS.—No new features are reported in the market for teas this week. The situation is very strong, and there seems to be only one opinion and that is, that higher quotations are in store. All indications point to a strong position in the tea market for some time to come, and present stocks on spot are said to be light.

MANITOBA MARKETS

WINNIPEG.—Harvesting is proceeding under practically ideal conditions in the West. Encouraging reports have been received and instances of exceptionally good yields are not uncommon. Cutting in Southern Manitoba is completed and in central and Northern section over 75 per cent. is finished. Threshing is general, with yields exceeding expectations in the majority of cases. The outlook in Saskatchewan and Alberta is very promising, as the crops will average from 25 to 30 bushels per acre.

The feature of the grocery market this week has been the decline of 25c per cwt. in sugar and also the drop of $1.50 per case on sockeye salmon. Eastern canners have named their opening prices on plums which are practically 40 per cent. lower than last year. The coffee market is showing a firmer tone and all lines of tea have stiffened up. There is a good demand for fruits and quotations are lower. Vegetables are plentiful with easier prices.

FIRM TONE TO COFFEE

Winnipeg.

COFFEE.—The coffee market is strong with the situation at primary points indicating higher quotations. Advices point to a strong situation and prices on spot although showing no change are firm at their present levels. Grinders are purchasing only in small quantities and not much interest is shown.

LOWER PRICES ON SOCKEYE

Winnipeg.

CANNED GOODS.—B. C. packers have announced a reduction of $1.50 per case on sockeye salmon on ones and halves. Definite information as regards the drop is not obtainable but it is supposed to have been caused by the lack of European demand. Other salmon lines are ruling firm particularly pinks. Eastern canners have named opening prices on plums and they are practically 40 per cent. lower than last year. The new pack is expected on the market shortly.

STARCH IS STEADY

Winnipeg.

STARCH.—The demand for starch is met by the placing of orders in a routine way and in sufficient volume to hold the market steady.

STRONG TONE TO TEA

Winnipeg.

TEA.—All reports point to a stronger tea market. Indians are up a penny a pound and Ceylons are also reported firm. Buying has been stimulated on the local market as with values higher and spot stocks light the trade has realized that present prices are below replacement costs.

Cold Storage Holdings of Many Dairy and Meat Products Show Increase

Butter, Cheese and Eggs in Storage on August First Indicate Sharp Gain Over Corresponding Period of Last Year

OTTAWA, Sept. 6 (Special).—The dairy and meat products in cold storage at the beginning of August were, in many cases, considerably in excess of the holdings for the previous month, and also for the corresponding period last year.

The butter in storage amounted to 18,176,037 pounds of creamery and 551,650 pounds of dairy. Comparative figures show this to be an increase of 10.14 per cent. in the case of creamery and a decrease of 20.45 per cent. in dairy butter from the amount held in storage for the corresponding date last year. Comparisons with last month show increases of 19.95 per cent. and 25.80 per cent. in creamery butter and dairy butter respectively.

Cheese holdings totalled 16,707,234 pounds, an increase of 26.24 per cent. from last year and 81.56 per cent. from last month.

Storage Eggs Show Increase

The eggs in cold storage totalled 16,754,609 dozen; other than cold storage, 470,202 dozen, and frozen, 954,159 dozen. Comparative figures show an increase in cold storage eggs of 46.61 per cent. from last year and 10.55 per cent. from the previous month. Other than cold storage eggs decreased 27.23 per cent. from last year and 35.66 per cent. from July, while frozen eggs increased 34.46 per cent. from last year and 7.63 per cent. from July.

Oleo in Store is Less

A decrease of 39.05 per cent. from last year, and 51.15 per cent. from the previous month was shown in oleomargarine. The holdings at the beginning of August totalled 122,470 pounds.

Poultry and Fish in Store

Stocks of poultry were as follows.—105,920 pounds of broilers; 226,880 pounds of chickens; 184,154 pounds of fowl; 47,684 pounds of ducks; 84,934 pounds of geese; 191,849 pounds of turkeys and 141,380 pounds of unclassified The total of 982,801 pounds is an increase of 47.34 per cent. over last year and a decrease of 26.21 per cent. from last month.

There was a decrease of 28.25 per cent. in the amount of fish in cold storage compared with last year, an increase of 10.22 per cent. compared with the beginning of July. The holdings totaled 14,477,454 pounds in cold storage and 1,284,474 pounds other than in cold storage. The other than cold storage stocks of fish decreased 2.66 per cent. from last year and increased 68.08 per cent. from last month.

Fraser River Fishermen Oppose River Closing

New Westminster, B. C., Sept. 6 (Special)—The Fraser River Fisheries Board, will this week lay before the fisheries enquiry commission meeting here, certain recommendations against the proposed closing of the Fraser River for fishing.

A large increase over last year in cohoes, spring salmon, humpbacks and chums, has been noticed this year, and the fishermen voiced strong opposition to any measure which would close the Fraser River. Sockeye salmon showed a falling off this summer, which gave rise to the circulated report that the Fraser was "fished out."

As approved by the board the recommendations to the commission will include the following eight clauses:

(1) That absolute closure of the Fraser River be not recommended by the commission, as this board is strongly opposed to any such action. This year the Fraser was a big spring salmon producer. Closure would mean merely Canadian propagation for the benefit of American fishermen.

(2) Prohibit use of sockeye nets during July for four years. This would allow seeding of upper reaches of spawning areas.

(3) Closed season from 6 o'clock Friday evening until 6 o'clock on Monday morning. This would give the fish 12 additional hours to get up the river.

(4) Greater care and attention to natural spawning areas, including the elimination of chub, bullhead and other natural enemies of salmon fry, and in this class trout are placed as dominant.

(5) Extension of rearing pond system where feasible, and a close study of the system with a view to improvement.

(6) Cancellation of drastic regulations providing for confiscation of fishermen's boats and gear for breaches of regulations.

(7) Stability of regulations; that no change be made in those affecting the Fraser River without consulting this board, which has the interests of the industry at heart, and is composed of men of long experience in the various branches of the salmon fishing industry, and, therefore, capable of correct judgment.

(8) While the endeavor to have a "humpback" salmon run every year in the Fraser meets with our support, it is held that unless the department has substantial funds with which to carry on the work it would be better to devote available funds to the production of a higher grade of salmon.

SIBERIAN SALMON PACK IS INCREASED FOR THIS YEAR

Japanese interests operating on the Siberian coast increased their salmon pack materially over that of the year 1921. A recent advice was received from the Tokyo correspondent of the Vancouver Merchants' Exchange to the effect that the Kamchatka pack this year totalled 384,100 cases.

Of this amount, the letter states, 264,500 cases carried half-pound tins. This amount, it is pointed out, is considerably larger than that of last year.

A remarkable demand for salt salmon developed in North China in late July, the same correspondent says, one company receiving an order for 40,000 koku. Crabmeat, too, found popularity and the pack amounted to 82,147 cases in the past season on the Kamchatka coast.

"Oh, may he, who says from his depths of stupidity:
'It isn't the heat, it is just the humidity;'
In quitting this life with a temperature meet
Where humidity ain't, but there's plenty of heat."

Produce, Provision and Fish Markets

QUEBEC MARKETS

MONTREAL, Sept. 7.—There is little change in the produce market but almost throughout there is a stronger tone. This week should show an improved demand on account of the number of people who are returning to the city for the fall. This will no doubt have a noticeable effect on the meat market. Hogs are steady in price and beef quotations are unchanged. Butter and cheese show a firmer tone on account of an improved export market. Lard prices are unchanged. Smoked hams and bacon are reduced by a number of wholesalers but cooked meats are unchanged. Egg prices are so far steady but an advance may come in new laid eggs. A change in other grades is hardly expected. The fish market is more brisk but there are no price changes.

FIRMER TONE TO BUTTER

Montreal.

BUTTER.—Although there was a stronger tone to the butter market late last week, the heavier supplies offered as a result of the holiday had a weakening effect. The general feeling in the market is that there will be an advance in the price of creamery butter in the near future. The receipts however are much smaller than for the corresponding week one year ago and when the heavier buying comes this month, the market price is sure to reflect increased demand.

TORONTO MARKETS

TORONTO, Sept. 6.—Actual changes in prices of produce lines are few this week. There is a tendency to easiness in the butter market, although there continues a moderate export inquiry. Supplies coming forward are inclined to be heavy, and storage stocks are in greater volume than a year ago. Much the same condition rules in cheese, with the difference that there is practically no export at the present time. Egg receipts show a very material falling off, and prices are higher as a result. Both fresh meats and provisions are unchanged. Cooked meats are in good demand. Poultry and fish are unchanged in price, with receipts of the former showing considerable improvement.

BUTTER INCLINED TO BE EASIER

Toronto.

BUTTER.—The butter market is inclined to be easier. There is a fair amount of export inquiry, but supplies coming forward are in good volume. Receipts are in excess of last year, as are also storage supplies. There is a fair amount of butter moving for immediate consumption. Prices are steady at last week's levels.

LITTLE EXPORT OF CHEESE

Toronto.

CHEESE.—The inquiry for cheese for export is not extensive at all, and prices are inclined to easiness, although no change is reported as compared with a week ago. Receipts coming forward are fairly heavy, and with the export demand that is bound to come, prices are more than likely to advance. Dealers are quoting large new cheese this week at from 18 to 19c. and September cheese at from 22 to 23c.

PROVISIONS.—No change is reported in the market for provisions this week. Prices are holding at the easier levels announced last week. The market for live hogs has been inclined to lower levels, and the provision market has been easy in sympathy. There is a very good inquiry, the Exhibition having stimulated the demand as far as Toronto itself is concerned. Outside buying, however, is also in good volume.

fit of better relations with creditors. They are also in a better position to take advantage of all discounts and to make their purchases more deliberately and independently than they otherwise would be.

grades of prunes ties up necessarily $1.50."

I told him the question of suitable, inexpensive fixtures for bulk prunes and other dried fruits is now being studied. Then I added: "But, frankly, I do not see how you can expect to get any suitable fixture for less than the price you name. The interest charge against $1.50 is either nine or ten and one half cents a year, depending on whether you figure at six or seven per cent. You have no depreciation because you can change the cans from time to time. The cans are as clean and moth proof as probably any fixture can be. Any time you care to quit handling bulk prunes, permanently or temporarily—or when any other dried fruit is out of season, which now is never the case with prunes—you can return the cans you do not care to use longer, and get your entire original investment out of them."

The Air Content of Butter

"ABOUT TEN per cent. of the volume of butter consists of air," says Jaques W. Redway, F.R.G.S., Mount Vernon, N.Y., in the Medical Times. "Air and its dust content is carried into the milk at the moment of milking. Still more is blown into it during the cooling process. Another addition is made at the separator. Some is churned into it—a considerable proportion in fact. In the kneading process air is worked into the butter; it is likewise kneaded out.

"The effect of churning air into a food product is illustrated in the case of fabricated ice cream. Six or seven gallons of the fabricated mixture is put into the freezer and churned or stirred until the volume is increased to ten gallons, by the addition of air.

"Now, if the air that is churned into butter were pure and free from dust, one might assume that the occluded air would be harmless. Perhaps this might be the case, but experiment has shown that the contrary very probably is true. Butter exposed to the air becomes rancid unless a preservative is added. So does butter packed tight in firkins. It is the air within quite as much as the air without which causes the change. It is oxidation as well as putrefaction.

"The Department of Agriculture has presented some figures worth noting. Freshly churned butter was analyzed as to its free oxygen content at measured intervals. When the butter was kept in still air at a temperature of 32° Fahrenheit, the changes in the amount of free oxygen were slow. An average of many samples showed that at the end of less than two months four-fifths of the free oxygen had entered into chemical composition with the butter fat. At ordinary room temperatures the disappearance of the free oxygen was very rapid. That is, an oxidation of the elements of the butter fat had occurred, which not only impaired the flavor of the butter but also caused a destruction of the vitamines. With the loss of the vitamines the food value is lowered, or perhaps disappears; there remains only the fuel value.

"The moral is obvious. Foods require preservatives; otherwise they must be prepared in an atmosphere which contains no free oxygen. Professor W. P. Heath finds that an atmosphere of carbon dioxide is effective in preventing oxidation; it also imparts a pleasant flavor to butter.

"In the manufacture of butter Professor Heath forces carbon in the churn at the bottom, thereby displacing the air at the top. With careful manipulation, practically all the free oxygen is expelled and the prepared butter is aerated with an atmosphere which not only prevents rancidity but preserves the vitamines as well."

Ford CAR WINS GOLD MEDAL as Pathfinder of the Canadian Rockies

FORD CAR PILOTED BY GEORGE GORDON MAKES FAST TIME TO COAST AND GETS GOLD MEDAL.

Made Trip of Seventeen Hundred Miles Over Rocky Mountains in Eight Days without Repairs or Change of Tires.

[From the Edmonton Journal, July 15th]

The recent pathfinding tour from Edmonton to Victoria, B.C., brought further laurels to the Ford Car and it demonstrated that this popular car can be operated successfully under the most severe conditions.

When the City of Victoria offered a gold medal to the driver of the first car to blaze a trail from Edmonton to Victoria via Jasper Pass, Yellowhead Pass and Kamloops, it was considered an almost impossible feat, and if accomplished the trip would take from three to five weeks and the car would be almost a wreck.

A motor road between Edmonton and Victoria has been the dream of Western Canadians. An automobile had never crossed the Rocky Mountains. Mr. George F. Gordon, the winner of the Gold Medal gives unstinted praise to the Ford Car in which he made the trip:—"I knew that if any car got through in reasonable time it would be the Ford, and to back my own faith, I purchased a new Ford Roadster. We never had the slightest trouble with the engine, and we found it economical on both tires and gas. We had no further damage than a broken spring leaf, and never used any of the spare parts. The tires do not show any wear at all, nor did we have a puncture. If I should ever have occasion to make a similar trip I will take a Ford."

Remarkable, Yes! Unusual, No! Every day on the ragged edge of civilization, hundreds of Fords blaze new trails, do the impossible. Sufficient publicity has not been given to the unbelievable performances of the Ford.

OLIVE CROP IS REPORTED SHORT

The olive is an exception to the general rule of luxuries which never sell so well during a financial or industrial depression, says the New York Journal of Commerce. Sales of old crop Spanish olives have been unusually good this season and there is every indication to point to a remarkably firm market during the balance of the 1921 crop season. Cables from Seville are disappointing as to 1922 production, even more so than previously. It is stated that Queens will be hardly half of normal, with Manzanillas even less promising. Consequently the prices abroad on what few stuffed Manzanillas remain are stiffening and 120 pesetas is asked for poor assortments, which run 90 per cent. small sizes, which are the undesirable kinds. Old crop at Seville is reported to be practically cleaned up, as indicated by the last cargo which is just in. The boat brought in only 700 hogsheads and none is due for about forty-five days. The market, in a jobbing way, is decidedly better at a considerable price betterment. The big operators are picking up stuffed Manzanillas, as this fruit seems to be increasing in popularity with consumers. At the moment, it seems to be more a question of getting olives later on than of prices, and the prospects are that when quotations on new crops are announced in November they will be on an extremely high level.

ESTABLISHED 1870

A Few Centuries Ago

WHEN printing was in its infancy, most people seldom saw what we call a newspaper, and few ever saw a book. Most people could not have read them if they had seen them.

Nowadays, in Canada alone, there are hundreds of newspapers and periodicals, vast organizations employing thousands of skilled investigators and news gatherers, who turn out the many newspapers, technical and other periodicals. It is impossible for any one person to read all the papers published in Canada. If it were possible for a person to read them he would acquire a vast store of information, but he would not have any time left to turn his information to practical use.

If you, for instance, could have someone read these papers for you and clip items concerning your own line of business, your particular private interests, etc., it would be better than reading all the papers.

This is where we come in.

It is OUR BUSINESS to furnish clippings on any subject. We read all the papers and send you only clippings that interest you. Tell us your needs and we will tell you how we can serve you. The charges are moderate, because we will be reading not only for you, but for many other satisfied clients.

1922 Breaks All Exhibition Records

Attendance at the Canadian National Exhibition This Year Exceeds the Objective of a Million and a Quarter by 122,000—Many New Features of Great Annual Event Win Approval of an Appreciative Public—Plans for Next Year

"THE BIGGEST annual permanent Fair in the world," as the Canadian National Exhibition held each year at Toronto, is well and truly termed, can further substantiate its claim to the title, by pointing to the splendid record of the 1922 Exhibition just closed. Surpassing the objective of the directors of a million and a quarter, the total figures of attendance when the last person had passed through the turnstiles on the last day, showed that one million, three hundred and seventy-two thousand people had paid admissions into this wonderful Show. This is 130,500 more people than attended in 1921, also a record year, when the attendance was only eight thousand under the million and a quarter, aimed at and exceeded this year.

Favored with ideal weather conditions, and every effort having been put forth to make the exhibition attractive both from the educational and the entertaining standpoint, there could hardly have been anything else, but "a bigger and better Fair," than ever before attempted. Officials of the Exhibition Board are more than gratified at the success attending their endeavors, and are filled with enthusiasm and encouragement to attain to even greater heights of success in 1923.

New attractions awaited the visitors to the Exhibition this year, and chief among these are to be mentioned the new buildings that had been erected since the last Fair, the Coliseum and the Pure Food Building, both of which are splendid and magnificent additions to the long list of handsome structures that dot Exhibition Park. Reference is made on another page to the success attending the inaugural year of the Food Show, and in passing it might also be said that the Coliseum not only provided ample and much needed accommodation for exhibits of various kinds, but it is architecturally beautiful, and represents an asset that indicates the permanency and continuous expansion of this great annual event.

More new buildings are likely to be found again next year when the Exhibition opens. A new Machinery Hall, to cost $350,000, is assured, and it is more than probable that the present Transportation Building will be doubled. A Music Building is also a possibility. The question of enlarging the grounds to keep pace with the continuous growth of the Fair, is being talked of by the management and definite plans along this line may shortly be made.

The amusement features of the Exhibition proved as popular as ever to the thousands of people that attended, and the arrangements devised for the entertainment of the throngs were appreciated to the fullest extent. The performances daily in front of the Grand Stand, including the singing of the great pageant chorus of 2,000 voices on two occasions, the races, the wonderful display of fireworks each night, and last but not least the diversions of the Midway, were all appreciated. Then again the lovers of art found an abundance of interest in the beautiful showing of paintings and photographs.

Showing one of the main thoroughfares at the Canadian National Exhibition, with a glimpse of a few of the buildings in this great Exhibition Park.

Some idea of the crowds that attended the exhibition is gleaned when one considers that on the closing day 135,000 people passed through the gates.

Improvements Suggested for New Building

Exhibitors Greatly Pleased With Interior Appearance and Open Courts—Ask Exhibition Directors to Change a Few Details—Annual Meeting of Food Products Association

EXHIBITION Grounds, Toronto.—The Food Products Association, which was responsible for the New Pure Food Building on the Canadian National Exhibition Grounds, held a general meeting on Friday last which was in the nature of a conference with Sam Harris, exhibition director, chairman of the new building, to discuss methods of improving the building for next year. H. N. Cowan, president of The Cowan Company and chairman of the association, presided.

Mr. Harris outlined four or five points that he thought might improve the building. It had been found, he said, that the natural tendency when the building was opened was for people to go to the right, left and centre on entering. However, on account of the drop sidewalk in the courtyard the traffic to the centre of the building was stopped, and the tendency then was to go around either right or left. He would propose to the Exhibition directors if the association was agreeable that walks across the courtyard be raised level with the main floor leaving the sunken court on either side for the flowers, fountains, etc.

To Keep Sun off Perishables

Secondly, he suggested that awnings be placed on the sides of all courtyards where the sun came in during the day and evening. Some awnings had been put up in the main courtyard. He thought that these should be movable so that they could be raised if found necessary.

3. A larger number of lights in some of the courts were needed. He said the lighting plan would be submitted to an expert and the matter would be taken up with the directors before next year.

4. He wanted to see the concessions to the south of the new building eliminated, so that the building could easily be seen from the main thoroughfare past the grand stand. He would also take this up with the directors.

5. He referred to the rules re smoking in exhibits and what he termed unseemly noises, in other words, loud talking on the part of salesmen and saleladies endeavoring to sell their respective wares. He did not think there should be such a competition in voices between the different exhibits.

Want Crossings Elevated

On motion of Mr. Law, of C. J. Bodley Limited, and Mr. Gregory, of The Cowan Company, it was decided to recommend to the Exhibition Board that the pathways across the courts be raised wherever necessary.

The question arose as to the closing in of the courtyards during the winter. N. V. Hansplant, assistant manager of the Exhibition, stated that this matter was in hand and it was likely a two-inch decking would be placed over the top of the court. This had already been referred to the executive of the Exhibition.

Storage Facilities in Extension

More facilities for storage was also a question raised. It was suggested to Mr. Harris that facilities for storage other than that provided at the back of the different booths should be planned when the extension to the building is made. This will also go before the Exhibition directors. Just when the extension will be made was not stated.

F. C. Copp, of Gunns Limited, suggested a Correspondence Room in the new extension. The assistant manager stated that the board had in mind the erection of a centrally located Comfort Room for all exhibitors on the grounds.

A strong protest was raised against the concessions to the south of the new building. Mr. Harris promised to recommend to the Exhibition Board the elimination of these. The board is planning a park in front of the new building.

Mr. Harris and the Exhibition Board were thanked by Mr. Cowan for the prompt erection of signs showing location of the new building, and Mr. Hansplant stated that if the management next year considered the food exhibitors required signs they would be provided for.

Chas. T. Miller, of Red Rose Tea, suggested the replacing of the old wooden sidewalk up the side street with a concrete walk. Mr. Hansplant replied that their plans called for a straight street there and they did not want to change the sidewalk until that portion of the grounds had been rearranged.

A number of other suggestions were made by exhibitors including a high illuminated sign for the building next year, or raising the walls to make a more imposing looking structure.

Harry Horne, of the Harry Horne Company, suggested some sort of screen over the courts to prevent smoke dust from the railway trains coming in and settling on goods that were unwrapped for the purposes of display and demonstration. This will be also looked into before another year.

Want Dust Kept Down

The Exhibition officials are experimenting with a cement hardener to keep down the dust on the aisles of the building. A vitrifier was used on one of the aisles and the exhibitors in the vicinity considered that it had a very beneficial effect. The association has the assurance of the directors that everything necessary in this connection will be done. The association was also assured that every precaution possible would be taken in connection with closing in the building during the fall and winter but they would not guarantee the safety of any goods left in the booths after the Exhibition was over. One member brought up the point that snow might drift in through the windows over the booths but assurance was given that this was impossible.

Use of Price Cards

Mr. Harris referred to the use of price cards in exhibits. The directors, he said, wanted to control them so that there would be no competition in price cutting between different exhibitors. He did not, however, see any objection to a small sign being put up containing the regular price of an article, but the sign must be small. As the chairman of the building, it was up to him to decide whether a sign was objectionable or not.

One exhibitor asked who owned the partitions that were erected. Mr. Harris replied that they belonged to the exhibitors and if a booth was sub-let at any time the exhibitor could charge his successor with the partition.

After the conference with Mr. Harris the members decided to continue the Food Products Association during the coming year. A $5.00 membership fee was agreed upon again to cover incidental expenses. A committee was also named to continue the work.

It was generally agreed that the architecture of the new building was ideal for exhibiting food products. The open courts kept the interior atmosphere pure and unusually cool, a feature much ap-

"The Prettiest Building on Grounds"

Favorable Exclamations Were Heard on all Sides, in Comment Made on the New Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition—An Assembly of Really Magnificent Exhibits Attracts Thousands of People Daily During the Big Fair

"THE COOLEST building on the grounds;" "the only building in which one can get a breath of fresh air;" "such a beautiful building;" "the prettiest on the grounds."

These were among the exclamations to be heard on all sides in the New Pure Food Building which was opened for the first time at the Canadian National Exhibition this year. Its unique architecture with the big open air court yards took the fancy of the thousands and thousands of visitors and it became the most talked of place on the entire grounds soon after the gates of the big Exhibition were thrown open.

Grounds to be Rearranged

The present location of the building is, perhaps, not as desirable as many exhibitors would like. It is located north of the grand stand and somewhat out of the way of the main thoroughfare, and was hidden on the south by a number of concession tents. The Exhibition Board have, however, assured the Food Products Association that was responsible for its construction that in the rearrangement of the grounds the New Pure Food Building will occupy a location just inside the main entrance. The plan includes the removal of the main entrance from Dufferin Street to just north of the western entrance of the New Pure Food Building.

During the first few days of the Exhibition all the people were not finding the building. Many had to inquire as to its location. A meeting was held on Tuesday of the first week with one or two of the officials of the Exhibition Board, when it was arranged to have erected some 50 to 100 signs showing how to get to it. Tuesday was the Children's Day and it usually takes the children to find out things. It was crowded all day and from then on received its quota of Exhibition visitors.

Another view of the Pure Food Building giving some idea of the handsome architecture of it.

Some Fine Exhibits

Many of the booths in the New Pure Food Building were really magnificent. Exhibitors went to great expense to produce a pleasing and attractive effect and nothing but praise was heard on all sides on the result. The exhibitors have agreed to lease their spaces for a term of ten years, so, evidently they considered it would be money well spent to construct something that would always receive good attention and praise.

Monday, September 4, being Labor Day, the building was crowded to capacity and again on Saturday, the last day. On Friday a general meeting of the Food Products Association was held when a number of improvements were suggested to directors of the Exhibition who have promised to do what they can to meet the wishes of the members of the association. A report of this meeting appears elsewhere.

On the closing day the crowds surged through it all day long. Late in the evening prior to ten o'clock people sat on the benches in the open air courts and in many instances police officers had to point out that the Exhibition was over and that they must move along.

Another year it is generally believed that the Pure Food Building will be a still greater attraction because it is now known. Pure Foods always draw the crowds.

IMPROVEMENT SUGGESTED FOR NEW BUILDING

preciated by the attendants as well as visitors.

To show that they appreciated the assistance of Chairman Sam. Harris in connection with erecting signs, etc., a number of exhibitors in the Pure Food Building presented him on Saturday night with a silk umbrella. W. Hinton, of Wagstaffe, Limited, made the presentation informally. It rained on Sunday and Monday so the umbrella was just received in time.

Employees of the biscuit department of the McCormick Mfg. Co. of London held a very enjoyable picnic at Ipperwash Beach on Lake Huron, the other day.

The exhibit of "Salada" was one of the most outstanding in the new Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition—Thousands of the Blue Label packages were distributed from this booth.

"Salada" Booth a Thing of Beauty

THERE were many attractive booths in the new Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, but there were none surpassing the "SALADA" Booth in real beauty and uniqueness.

Of massive proportions, and standing in a prominent central position, its oriental setting attracted the attention of the many thousands who viewed it. The soft colors and luxurious harmony immediately gave one a suggestion of the orient, and the rare beauties of India and Ceylon, where "Salada" Tea is grown.

The central feature was a reproduction of an Eastern Temple and in its construction an endeavor was made to exactly duplicate East Indian architecture. A few curios and art treasures from the Far East, taken from the valuable collection possessed by the Salada Tea Company, were placed appropriately about the booth and lent still further to the desired oriental atmosphere. The color scheme and lighting effects were such as to bring out the beauties of the booth to advantage.

Displays of Salada Tea were placed about the booth and the attendants were kept busy selling small packages of Blue Label Tea and handing out advertising matter to visitors.

All this is of special importance to grocers all over Canada. It means larger sales for dealers because the name "SALADA" is more firmly impressed than ever on the public mind. Visitors who saw their attractive booth could not help having "SALADA" imprinted on their minds while the trial package of the tea carried into nearly 20,000 homes for use will do as much work in making the name better known as in creating more customers for Salada Tea.

Dealers will be well advised to be prepared for this greater demand for Blue Label.

Where the popular Harry Horne Products were shown to thousands of visitors at the Canadian National Exhibition—Double Cream Custard and Nu-Jell made many new friends.

Harry Horne's Products Are Favorites

MORE attractive than ever was the exhibit this year of The Harry Horne Co., Ltd., in the new Pure Food Building, at the Canadian National Exhibition. The display comprised "Double Cream" Custard, NU-JELL (the perfect jelly powder), Horne's Rapid Puddings, Extracts, Double Cream Baking Powder, Tartarine, Garden and Cooker Brand Package Peas, and Blue Bird Marshmallows, the marshmallows with a real flavor.

Thousands of souvenirs were given out, and sales of jelly powder and the various other products were heavier than ever before in the history of the Company. The demand for these products is bound to be greater than at any previous time, and every grocer will find it to his advantage to be well stocked with these lines at all times. Nu-Jell, like the other Harry Horne products, is an article of quality. Retailers need feel no hesitancy in pushing its sale. The housewives, in large numbers, were convinced at the exhibition of the dainty desserts that these products make, and the tempting, delicious and appetizing array at this booth aroused a desire to go home and do likewise.

The Harry Horne Co., Ltd., 1297-99 Queen St., West, Toronto, will supply you, Mr. Grocer, with these specialties.

James Pascall Canada Ltd. Show New Lines

"Oh there is Pascall's barley sugar," and the accent at once denoted a former resident of the Old Land. The remark was made in front of the exhibit of James Pascall, Canada, Ltd., located under the grandstand at the Canadian National Exhibition. The exclamation was expressive, for it proclaimed an instantaneous delight, similar to that of meeting an old friend.

Pascall lines need no introduction to people from the land across the seas, and are fast winning favor in Canada, where they have already established an enviable reputation. New friends were made for these choice confections at the Canadian National Exhibition, and an ever increasing demand is assured for products of such a high standard of excellence and of a quality that is incomparable.

All the old lines with some new ones constituted the products of this exhibit. Barley sugar in fruit flavors in the glass containers, lemon barley, mixed fruit drops, and the old-fashioned mint bull's eyes had first place, but much interest was displayed in such lines put up by this company, as the English fruit bon-bons, Butter Walnuts and Almonds, etc.

Pascall's five-cent Brazil butterscotch bar, made from selected nuts and absolutely no substitutes, freshettes in flavors of lime, lemon and rose, and another five-cent line known as Old Gold toffee.

Merchants all over the country will now be handling these lines, and the retailer who is looking for increased profits will do well to get behind these popular confections. In doing so he will not only stimulate his own revenue, but will bring pleasure to his many customers.

For over sixty years the name Pascall has stood for the best as to quality and purity

Where The Borden Co., Ltd., demonstrated their milk products to thousands of people at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Borden's Exhibit Again a Big Feature

ELABORATELY designed, with a background descriptive of the origin of the products displayed, and with the counters arrayed with their four well-known products, The Borden Company's exhibit stood out as one of the most conspicuous and attractive in the Pure Food Building. Several demonstrators familiar with the Borden goods explained in detail to thousands of Exhibition visitors the character and uses of the products—Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk, Borden's St. Charles Evaporated Milk, Borden's Reindeer Coffee and Reindeer Cocoa. Everything possible was done to make these four big Canadian sellers still more familiar to the consumer, thus making the work of selling so much lighter for the Canadian retailer.

One of the big features of the exhibit was the demonstration of Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk in connection with the Baby's Welfare work, which The Borden Company have been developing for several years. A trained nurse was present to give advice and suggestions to the mothers on feeding, exercise of the baby, etc., and to explain the different stages of growth. The baby scale which has always been a part of the Borden exhibit in their former booth was kept busy during the entire two weeks and upwards of two thousand babies were weighed.

Another feature was the demonstration of St. Charles Evaporated Milk. It was shown how easy it is to whip, and the different uses to which the whipped milk can be put. As the trade knows, St. Charles Milk is just pure cows' milk "with the cream left in." Every care is taken with the milk to see that sources of supply are absolutely sanitary so that milk can be served in no purer form than in both St. Charles Evaporated and Eagle Brand Condensed. St. Charles Evaporated Milk is used for baking of all kinds, for bread and muffins, for cakes and cookies, ice cream, soups, puddings and pastries, salad dressings, cocoanut macaroons, etc., and can be recommended without hesitation by every Canadian dealer.

Reindeer Coffee and Cocoa were also served to thousands. They are prepared by simply adding boiling water to the Condensed Coffee and Cocoa. Both are already sweetened. Recipe booklets were given away with each tin, showing how Reindeer Coffee and Cocoa can be used in the home for flavoring puddings, blanc mange, cake, ice cream, macaroons, etc.

The entire exhibit was one of the busy spots in the new building and without doubt it will have a great effect in stimulating sales for all dealers who display "The Borden Products" prominently.

Premium Hams and Bacon were the chief features of this particularly educative display of The Swift Canadian Company.

Premium Hams and Bacon are Winners

APPETIZING hams and bacon pyramided on a dark background, some incased in the wrappers in which they are sent out to the trade; and names of the various products flashed through the dark sides of the booth, formed the central features of the very attractive exhibit of The Swift Canadian Company in the new Pure Food Building. The back and one side of the booth were covered with dark cloth with openings cut through it to bring into relief names of the Swift Products. Back of each opening was placed an electric light so that the names shone out to meet the eyes of the thousands of visitors who daily passed the exhibit during the two weeks and one day of Canada's great, and the world's greatest annual exhibition.

Swift's Premium hams and bacon, undoubtedly the acme of perfection in these two universally used products, were concentrated on. Men who understand the extraordinary care with which they are made, explained to hundreds of people how the Premium brand products are cured, the reasons why they are leaders in the ham and bacon field, and the difference between the value of them and ordinary hams and bacon.

How the surplus fat is cut from Premium hams was demonstrated, illustrating their higher quality and why householders are so willing to pay a better price for them. Swift's Premium hams are cut so that when cured they stand up straight, the fatty ends having been carved away.

And so with Premium bacon. It was shown that only the central portion of the side of the hog was good enough to be cured and sent out to the trade carrying the Swift Premium brand. Cheaper bacon can be made and is made by cutting out a larger side but the sweet solid centre only can bear the Premium name.

The foreground of the exhibit included other Swift products such as Brookfield eggs in cartons, Brookfield cheese and butter, and Premium and Gem Nut margarine.

The demonstrators here again showed the superiority of these lines. Brookfield eggs for instance, are always guaranteed. They are carefully sorted according to size and color, candled and stamped. Brookfield cheese is especially selected by expert cheese men, and years of experience have made Premium and Gem Nut margarine among the top leaders.

Altogether the exhibit of the Swift Canadian Company was of a splendid educative character and accomplished a great deal towards familiarizing the Canadian public still further with the high quality of their many products—all of which is of great assistance to the army of Canadian merchants stocking them.

Where "Biscuits of Quality" were shown at the Canadian National Exhibition. The Christie Brown Co. Ltd., welcomed hundreds of customers at this booth in the new Pure Food Building.

"Biscuits of Quality" Widen Popularity

"BISCUITS of Quality," emblematic of the Christie, Brown Co., Ltd., Toronto, gained fresh ground in their march to capture the ever widening acclaim of popular opinion, at the Canadian National Exhibition this year. Situated facing one of the lovely open courts in the new Pure Food Building, the Christie-Brown exhibit was thronged with visitors, day in and day out, throughout the fortnight of the big Fair. More grocers than ever before on any similar occasion, were callers at this booth. Old customers long since convinced of the quality of these biscuits and many new merchants, were given a hearty welcome by this firm, and were introduced to some of the recent lines now being manufactured by the Christie, Brown Co. The booth was in itself, a thing of great attractiveness. A combination of immaculate white woodwork and shining plate-glass, with the Christie biscuit cabinets much in evidence, suggested in every detail the high standard of efficiency that is maintained in the manufacture of these lines. The display of these choice confections was a tempting array and called forth many words of admiration from thousands of people who have long been acquainted with the excellence of Christie products, a reputation that has been held over a period of seventy-five years.

Quality, first and above all else, is the slogan that has won success for Christie biscuits. They are to be found in every store in the country and the choice assortment that is always available, and the freshness, purity and tastiness, that are always assured, render "Christie's" the biscuits for all occasions. In the company's factory on King Street, E., Toronto, these biscuits are manufactured under conditions and amid surroundings that are unsurpassed; all the latest machinery and devices known are utilized and ingredients used constitute only the best and finest that can be obtained.

The Quality lines of Wagstaffe Limited, were much admired in their new mahogany decorated booth in the Pure Food Building.

Wagstaffe's for Quality

MR. GROCER and Wholesaler, we have again spent considerable money in keeping our quality products, before the public, and during the two weeks of the Exhibition have demonstrated our new lines such as Lemon Shred, and Grape Fruit Shred Marmalade to thousands of both old and new customers, also our three kinds of Cake Mixtures, namely, "Fairy," Scon, and Tea Cake Flour, which have been real sellers.

Our fours glass in both jams and jellies is the best package on the market, and will make friends for you.

Peels are now ready for shipment, also in a new package of both 1 lb. and half pound, cut mixed, which show you a nice profit and it is a handy package to handle.

The new Pure Food Building was a wonder this year, and everybody enjoyed their visit among the exhibitors. Now, Mr. Grocer, it's up to you to support the manufacturers who are spending money in creating a demand for their products, by giving your customers what they ask for when they ask for Wagstaffe's. The same guarantee that has always been Wagstaffe's motto still stands, and that alone will help to hold your customers and build a real successful business.

Have Wagstaffe's on every order.

WAGSTAFFE LIMITED, HAMILTON, CANADA

More than ever before was Red Rose Tea a popular beverage at the Canadian National Exhibition. The exhibit in the new Pure Food Building was a rendezvous for thousands.

Where "Good Tea" was Exhibited

"THIS IS a great cup of tea," a lady was overheard to remark as she stood partaking of this invigorating beverage in front of the Red Rose booth in the Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition on one of the many days of the big Fair.

"Red Rose Tea is Good Tea," came the bright and instantaneous rejoinder of her companion.

"No truer slogan was ever framed," was the next comment, and forthwith a discussion as to the merits of Red Rose Tea ensued. Opinion was not divided, however, and it was evident that both these apparent housewives were long since convinced of its worth.

The booth was an attraction in itself. The artistic arrangement and the effect realized were decidedly impressive, exciting much favorable comment, resulting in many lingering to have a cup of tea, before passing on to other sections of the building. The background of the exhibit depicted in native costume, three men of India seated in their accustomed attitude enjoying their beverage of tea, silently proclaiming to all, the satisfying refreshment that comes from a cup of the famous Orange-Pekoe Tea, that has made in Canada an enviable reputation for the T. H. Estabrooks Company, Limited.

Thousands of cups were served to visitors during the two weeks, and a staff of courteous and obliging girls was kept busy all the time. Again this year, each purchaser of a cup of tea was handed a coupon, entitling the holder to a credit of ten cents on one 1-lb. or ½-lb. package of Red Rose Orange-Pekoe Tea, when presented at any grocery store, being redeemable by the T. H. Estabrooks Co., Ltd., either at their office or through their travellers.

Retail grocers all over the country will be having Red Rose tea coupons handed into them shortly, and a great deal of very helpful advertising and sales promotion work has been accomplished in this way. Merchants will find a few packages of Red Rose Orange-Pekoe Tea displayed on the counter a big help in boosting sales of this line.

Creamola Food Products were introduced to thousands of visitors at the Canadian National Exhibition this year—the display shown above can very easily be duplicated in any retail store.

Creamola Custard, Blanc Mange and Jelly Powder

NO NEW food product ever received more attention at the Canadian National Exhibition than did Creamola Custard, Creamola Blanc Mange and Creamola Jelly Powder, all of which were so attractively shown in the Creamola Booth in the new Pure Food Building this year.

Coming from Scotland just a few months ago Creamola Custard and the two other lines have made wonderful progress. The booth of the Creamola Food Products, Limited, has given a great impetus to the Scottish reputation and it is safe to say that in the future they will be much more in demand in many sections of Canada.

The bright colored attractive packages of Creamola Custard, Blanc Mange and Jelly Powder were most artistically arranged in the exhibit. There was a semi-circle of custard packages that could be seen a long way off. In the alcove at the top of the booth were several plants that added a tone of distinction to the entire display.

On the counter always appeared made up moulds of the custard, blanc mange and jelly powder. The attractive character of the moulds induced thousands of exhibition visitors to enquire more about the Creamola line, and in the great majority of cases they carried away with them a package of Creamola Custard and frequently a package each of Creamola Blanc Mange and Creamola Jelly Powder to try them in their own homes.

Creamola Custard is known throughout Scotland and to a large extent in Canada as "The Queen of Custards." It has a flavor all its own and must not be classed among the ordinary brands of custard. It is made from the purest selected ingredients, is rich in nutriment and can be used either by itself or with so many different fresh fruits that it is a dessert which housewives like to keep in the house once they know its quality and flavor.

The lady demonstrators at the Creamola booth also explained the many delightful dishes Creamola Custard can make. Fruit dishes and puddings taste much more delicious when Creamola Custard Sauce has been added.

Creamola Blanc Mange is obtainable in six different delicious flavors and it was explained that it could be served by itself as a dessert or with different kinds of fruits. On account of the purity of the ingredients it is as wholesome as its taste is good.

Creamola Jelly Powder has a distinct fruit flavor all its own which is making hosts of friends wherever tried. It is obtainable in eleven different flavors to suit every taste—a very high-class jelly.

The exhibition display shown herewith is a splendid suggestion for retailers who have stocked Creamola in making a window or counter display. A few packages kept on the counter to remind the customers who secured samples at the Canadian National Exhibition will undoubtedly help sales greatly.

It is a very significant fact that a great many who took packets of Creamola lines home during the early days of the Exhibition, came back for more later on in larger quantities.

The exhibit was in charge of the Canadian representative of the firm, Donald F. Porter, 170 Portland St., Toronto.

Where demonstrations of the Heinz products were made daily during the Canadian National Exhibition. The "57 Varieties" are bound to be more popular than ever as a result of this exhibit.

The Exhibit of the "57 Varieties"

DECORATED in soft rich tones, designed most artistically throughout, and filled with the "57 Varieties" of pure foods, the exhibit of The Heinz Company stood out as one of the most attractive in the splendid new Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition. As the reproduction of the booth shows, it was built up with glass jars and tins of the Heinz goods to the ceiling, making a commanding display and one that every visitor could not help but see. In the central part of the architecture there appeared a colored painting which carried a great deal of significance. It showed the small original house in which the Heinz products were born many years ago and in the background a glimpse of the present day factories of the Heinz Company. There were several other views showing interior departments in the Heinz plant. As the trade knows, the Company has its Canadian factory in Leamington, Ontario, where every care and attention are given to the making of their different lines.

Demonstrations of the Heinz products were made during the entire two weeks of the Exhibition by several young ladies. Hundreds of visitors tasted Heinz Ketchup, and Chile Sauce, Heinz Baked Beans, Cooked Spaghetti, Cream of Tomato Soup, Sweet Pickles, Beefsteak Sauce, Evaporated Horse Radish, Peanut Butter, India Relish. Heinz Vinegar, Olive Oil, etc., were also displayed prominently. Heinz Baked Beans and Cooked Spaghetti were served hot from chafing dishes and scores of new friends were made for these two prominent lines. Heinz Cooked Spaghetti in tins, although one of the latest additions to the "57 Varieties," has rapidly become one of their most popular foods. It is cooked with rich cheese and a specially delicate sauce of red ripe tomatoes, all seasoned and blended in just the proper proportions.

All the Heinz products are prepared in kitchens where the strictest regard for purity, cleanliness and sanitation is constantly maintained. The "57 Varieties" are sold to the merchant and through him to the consumer under guarantee—money back if any fail to please.

The entire exhibit of the Heinz "57 Varieties" was undoubtedly a beautiful one as well as practical and a great deal was done at the Canadian National Exhibition this year to help retail merchants display and sell these goods to better advantage to their customers.

The exhibit of Canadian Wirebounds at the Exhibition drew the attention of manufacturers and shippers, who expressed satisfaction at the enormous saving they would receive in transportation charges by packing their product in Canadian Wirebounds.

Canadian Wirebounds an Economical Container

THE Canadian Wirebound Boxes Limited, introduced Canadian Wirebounds in Canada in the year 1915, commenced manufacturing in Toronto in a small way with floor space of 2,500 sq. ft. Their sales steadily increased, until they were obliged in 1920 to build an extensive plant of 50,000 sq. ft. to handle the increased business. The reception given by the manufacturers of Ontario to the Canadian Wirebounds was most assuring that this container would revolutionize the box industry.

In November, 1921, the Canadian Wirebound Boxes Limited started another plant on a small scale in Montreal, which is repeating the progress made at their Toronto plant. They are now working on a new up-to-date plant there equal in size to the one they have in Toronto.

Why have the manufacturers and shippers discontinued using the old style container in favor of Canadian Wirebounds?—because Canadian Wirebounds have reduced their costs.

In what way have Canadian Wirebounds reduced the manufacturer's cost? In transportation charges—for example, a woollen manufacturer in Eastern Ontario formerly used a nailed box weighing 110 lbs. By adopting Canadian Wirebounds, which weighed 50 lbs., effected a saving to them of 60 lbs. weight per box. Their L. C. L. freight rate to Winnipeg is $3.50 per 100 lbs., a saving of $2.10 on each box shipped. The Canadian Wirebound only cost them $1.61, the saving in transportation charges paid the cost of box and 50 cents additional.

Another example:—a large confectionery manufacturer adopted Canadian Wirebounds for no other reason than the saving in transportation charges which they make from Canadian Wirebounds. In one particular size the Canadian Wirebounds weighed 7 lbs. less than the nailed box which was formerly used and the average transportation charge saved was 12½ cents per box. They use approximately 20,000 per year, resulting in a yearly saving on this one size of $2,500.

The retailers are now requesting that their shipments be made in Wirebounds as in a great many instances they pay the transportation charges and will receive the benefit from the saving in weight. The Canadian Wirebound Boxes Ltd. have educated the retailers how to properly open Canadian Wirebounds by printing instructions on the lid of each container.

Thousands of housewives at the Canadian National Exhibition were shown the merits of "Cooket," a new vegetable shortening now being manufactured by Lever Brothers, Toronto. The exhibit as reproduced here was a very attractive one.

Cooket a New Shortening of Excellence

"COOK IT with Cooket" is the slogan that caught the eye of thousands as they passed through the New Pure Food Building, at the Canadian National Exhibition this year. Arresting attention, as this slogan did, they stopped to investigate, and learned the real merits of "Cooket," what it is, and what a truly long felt want it is going to fill in every Canadian household.

"Cooket" is a pure vegetable shortening for all baking and frying purposes. It is made from selected and purified vegetable oils, by the latest scientific process. It is the modern answer to the housewife's demand for a shortening and frying fat that will be dainty enough for the nicest cakes, and economical and serviceable enough for ordinary kitchen frying. Cooket contains no water or salt, and is more concentrated and richer than either butter or lard. In all recipes calling for butter or lard Cooket may be used and in one-quarter less quantity.

The exhibit in itself was an extremely attractive one, and stood out conspicuously in the Pure Food Building of many wonderful displays.

Put up in packages, labelled in yellow and black, Cooket invites inspection and creates a desire to know more about it. One had only to look at the delicious pies, cakes, tarts and other choice dainties in the way of pastry, to realize what a really wonderful shortening is being placed within the reach of every housewife. To taste them, of course, was even more convincing, and women went away, after hearing of Cooket, impressed with the fact that here at last is something that has not only economic value, but is capable of producing equally as good results as ever before obtained.

Since coming on the market a few months ago, Cooket has been used extensively in the largest and best hotels and restaurants, and is now being put into the retail grocery stores. It is manufactured by Lever Brothers, Limited, Toronto, and the impression it made upon thousands of housewives at the Canadian National Exhibition is bound to mean that you, Mr. Grocer, are going to have many requests for Cooket in the coming weeks.

Many Thousands of tins of "Victory" brand canned goods were distributed from this very attractive display of National Canned Meats, Limited.

Victory Brand Products in Full Display

FEW booths in the Pure Food Building at the Canadian National Exhibition drew larger or more interested crowds than the NATIONAL CANNED MEATS exhibit featuring their already famous Victory Brand Products.

A battleship cleverly constructed with tins of Victory Products formed a striking background for the booth, while rows and pyramids of tins, display jars of crisp, fine flavored Victory Pickles artistically arranged with flowers and hanging baskets completed an altogether admirable exhibit.

There were few busier people in the Pure Food Building than the staff of Victory demonstrators. From early morning till late in the evening they told the story of Victory Canned Meats—told how they were processed from only Government inspected meats, in a spotless modern factory under the most hygienic conditions—told the scores of housewives just why they possessed a distinctive superior flavor and why it was to their advantage to specify VICTORY products at their grocers.

During the Exhibition many thousands of tins of "Victory" canned products were passed over the counter, and many grocers placed large orders. Judging from the hundreds of repeat orders and the flattering comments of the crowds that daily sampled these superior canned meats, grocers will find them unusually profitable sellers.

The Victory booth was in charge of W. J. Robertson, general manager of the National Canned Meats, Limited.

Grocers who are looking for a line of canned goods of outstanding quality will do well to try these exceptional products.

Your wholesaler will gladly supply you.
